PROBE BRINGS DENIAL GUSHERS

DILIGENT HUNT FOR "PRINCIPAL" MEETS FAILURE

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Senatorial investigators drilled diligently and arduously today in their quest for additional facts in the great oil scandal, but they struck principally gushers of denials, which flew thick and fast around the crowded room during a tense and sometimes dramatic session of the committee.

Several times the word "liar" trembled unspoken on the lips of the half dozen who passed in and out of the witness chair.

The principal development was that ex-Secretary Albert B. Fall and Edward B. McLean, wealthy Washington and Cincinnati publisher held a secret conference in Atlantic City two weeks before Fall informed the committee that he had "borrowed" $100,000 from McLean.

This loan, as it subsequently developed, was in the form of checks which were returned by Fall uncashed. Bankers have testified before the committee that McLean had less than $5,000 on deposit here at the time the checks were drawn.

Drama stalked in the committee room at the start of the session in the person of Senator Charles Curtis, republican of Kansas, one of the leaders of the senate, and Ira E. Bennett, chief editorial writer on McLean's Washington paper, the Post.

Bennett said yesterday that Curtis was the "principal" he referred to when he telegraphed McLean at Palm Beach that he had been assured by the "principal" that there would be "no rocking the boat and no resignations," as a result of the oil scandal. He testified to that under oath.

Curtis Issues Denial.

Senator Curtis occupied the witness chair today and also under oath indignantly denied he was "the principal."

Bennett had said he saw Curtis only a day or so before he sent the telegram. Curtis denied that.

Bennett said Curtis had also told him that he (Curtis) had long ago advised President Coolidge to dispense with Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty. Curtis denounced this as untrue.

Curtis appeared twice on the stand to deny Bennett's testimony. They sat and stared at each other in the small committee room with no evidences of their former friendship apparent to the naked eye.

Curtis insisted he had not talked with Bennett between January 3 and January 30. The telegram was dispatched to McLean January 29, immediately following a white house correspondent's conference which Mr. Bennett attended.

Bennett followed on the stand and charged Curtis with having "forgotten one conversation and probably two, that I had with him."

The committee subjected Bennett to a searching cross examination on this conversation which Bennett said was held in Curtis' offices and lasted about twenty minutes.

Bennett hesitated "If you want to know you will have to force me to tell," he said.

For several minutes the committee

VOTE ON FORD OFFER DELAYED

(United Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8—Abandoning thier efforts to force the house to vote tonight on Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals, friends of the offer permitted an adjournment which deferred the final vote until Monday.

The adjournment brought a truce in a period of heated warfare, during which numerous efforts were made by amendment, so to limit and restrict the offer that the Detroit manufacturer would refuse to accept a contract based on such terms. All but one of these amendments were rejected, the vote usually showing that the supporters of Ford's offer retained substantial control.

The amendment adopted was proposed by Representative Begg, Omio, and was amended by Representative Wingo, Arkansas. As finally adopted, it provided the government could cancel Ford's contract if in two successive years he failed to produce 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen a year exclusively for manufacture of commercial fertilizer, or if he in any way defaulted on his contract.

A separate vote on this amendment has been reserved in the full house and Representative McKenzie, author of the bill, said he believed it would be defeated at that time.

CANDLER-BYFIELD VERDICT AWAITED

Action Follows Charge of Assault Against Soft Drink King's Son.

(United Press.)

ATLANTA, Ga., March 9.—the $100,000 damage suit brought by Mrs. Clyde Byfield against Walter Candler, as a result of an alleged attack on her during a voyage to Europe, was ordered to bed shortly after midnight, hopelessly deadlocked.

(International News Service.)

ATLANTA, Ga., March 8.—After two days of testimony and one day of argument, the famous Candler-Byfield case, in which Mrs. Sarah G. Byfield is suing Walter T. Candler for $100,000 damages, charging assault and injury, passed tonight into the hands of a jury.

Climaxing a day of vehement argument, Ben Conyers, plaintiff counsel, delivered the final speech late this afternoon. He attacked the "blackmail" charge of defendant's counsel and charged that they were trying to win "this case through buffoonery and ridicule."

He made a final appeal that justice be rendered Mrs. Byfield and that she be given the full amount of $100,000 for "her injury and suffering at the hands of the defendant."

The judge's charge to the jury was brief. It contained a warning that if the verdict was rendered in favor of Mrs. Byfield, it should be specifically certified that she and not her husband, Clyde K. Byfield, "gets the $100,000."

Mrs. Byfield Calm.

Mrs. Byfield, who is in her twenties and considered one of Atlanta's most beautiful women, sat between her father and mother throughout the day as counsel for both sides rehearsed and discussed over and over the alleged assault on the steamship Berengaria on the night of July, 1922. She remained calm throughout the ordeal, but at times when her attorneys were describing the details of the alleged assault tears welled into her eyes and she would bow her head on her mother's shoulder for solace.

Asa G. Candler, the aged and famous father of the defendant, sat unobtrusively as a spectator throughout most of the trial.

Mediation Offer in Honduras Uprising

Cattle Disease Epidemic Eases

WASHINGTON, March 8. — Rifle firing squads have slaughtered 839 cattle, 2,403 hogs and sheep in twenty-two herds infected by the hoof and mouth disease in California, according to telegrams tonight to the department of agriculture. The carcases were put with quicklime into trenches.

The epidemic is being suppressed rapidly in the quarantines area, the message said.

MANY ENTRIES ON FINAL DAY

PROMISE PLENTY OF COMPETITION

Seven in Race for United States Senator and Eight for Governor — No Democratic Entry for Presidential Preference.

Scores of candidates for state and judicial offices, United States senator and congressmen, national committeemen and women, delegates and alternates to the national party conventions, and for legislative seats got in under the wire during the last day allowed by law for filing before Secretary of State Pool closed the lists at the zero hour or midnight Saturday. No filings that come in by mail hereafter will be accepted.

No new entries were made for the presidential preference of Nebraska voters, however. On the democratic side that place is entirely vacant, whics means that the delegates from Nebraska to the New York convention will go uninstructed but ready to back Governor Bryan as the state's favorite if there should be a good opening to present him as a candidate.

On the g. o. p. ticket, a straight race will be run between Coolidge and Johnson. The name of Henry Ford appears as the only filing for president in the progressive column.

Seven candidates for United States senator and eight for governor promise plenty of competition in the primaries of the two majority parties to arouse interest among their members and bring out a large vote.

On all except two of the other state offices there will be primary contests. For state treasurer and attorney general but one filing has been made on each of the major party tickets.

Two Swansons After Same Office.

An eleventh hour development Saturday afternoon was the entry of Gus P. Swanson, Omaha, as a candidate for land commissioner on the republican ticket, opposing Dan Swanson, present incumbent seeking renomination. The latter believes that his Omaha namesake was brought in by Harry R. Follmer of Lincoln, whom he considers his main opponent, in order to divert votes which otherwise would go to himself.

"That's all right," commented Land Commissioner Swanson when he heard about the other Swanson filing. "If Follmer is nominated the democrats will elect the next land commissioner. But he isn't going to be nominated. I'll beat him by a big majority."

Congressmen Morehead, Howard and Shallenberger, democrats, and Simmons, republican, have no opposition in their own party primaries. In the Second and Fourth, respectively, Congressmen Sears and McLaughlin, both republicans, have men running against them on the g. o. p. ticket.

A number of the democratic candidates for state and congressional offices and the legislature have also accepted filings made in their behalf on the progressive ticket.

For supreme judges, there is a bunch of candidates in each of the three districts where members are to be elected this year. The list was completed Saturday by the advent of two more candidates in the First.

In the list of filings published, elsewhere, as compiled and given out by Secretary of State Pool, candidates for the state senate are included in all districts except those in Lancaster and Douglas counties. The house list includes only those from districts comprising more than one county. Single-county legislative filings are made with county clerks

Amazing Crime Record Revealed by Chicago Man

CHICAGO, March 8.—Unabashed by 300 years of jail sentence which he faces should pay for the 200 crimes to which he confessed, H. C. Thomas, 39, "made a clean breast" of his riminal record to police today.

Confessing to murder, burglary and assault upon fifteen women, Thomas calmly recited the most amazing crime record the local authorities have heard for many years.

"My conscience was bothering me," Thomas explained.

Thomas was a burglar de luxe. He found victims readily, robbed their homes at leasure, spent his stolen money freely and was arrested only because of his carelessness. Today as he told of his crimes he offered all of his property—including a lavishly furnished apartment, an expensive automobile and an airplane— to be sold for partial reimbursement to his victims.

RAILROAD HEAD KILLED BY FALL

Alfred H. Smith, President of New York Central Railway, Loses Life When Thrown From Horse in Central Park, New York.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Alfred H. Smith, president of the New York Central railway, was almost instantly killed late this evening when he was thrown from his horse on the bridle path of Sixty-eighth street, Central Park.

He was found by passing motorists who took him to the Fifth avenue hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Smith died of a broken neck and possibly fracture of the skull.

Smith was riding in the park as was his daily custom with a companion, who described the scene.

"We were riding about twenty minutes and were returning home," the companion said, "when a woman stepped into the bridle path. I shouted and we both reined up or we would have struck her. Mr Smith was an excellent horseman but he stopped so suddenly that he was thrown forward and pitched along the horse's neck to the ground.

"He caught the horse's neck with his arms and his fall did not seem to be heavy. I didn't think he was injured, but when he failed to get up I dismounted and found that he was dead—must have died instantly."

Railway Leader.

Alfred H. Smith, as head of the biggest railway system in the country occupied a leading position in the railway world.

He was known as the railway president who started as an office boy having begun "railroading" as a messenger boy in the service of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railway at Cleveland, in 1879.

In eleven years, he had worked through various departments to a job as foreman of construction work, as superintendent at Lansing, Toledo and Youngstown, and then general superintendent in 1901.

A year later he joined the New York Central as general superintendent. He became general manager in 1903 and vice president in 1906. The year 1913 found him senior vice president in charge of operation, maintenance and construction and January 1, 1924 he was elected president of the system.

During the war Smith was assistant director general of railroads in charge of transportation in trunk line territory east of Chicago and north of Ohio and Potomac rivers.

Mrs. Smith is in Pasadena, Cal., and was notified by telegraph of her husband's death.

REPUDIATE REED AS FAVORITE SON

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 8. — Missouri democracy in county conventions today repudiated the plea of Senator James A. Reed for endorsement as a "favorite son" candidate for president

Few counties, outside of those containing large cities, named delegates to the state convention instructed for Reed. Most delegations were uninstructed but were known to be opposed to Reed

The bitter feud between Reed and former President Woodrow Wilson found an echo in several conventions where resolutions were adopted declaring that "out of respect for our dead leader, Woodrow Wilson, we are unable to endorse the candidacy of James A. Reed for president."

Only ten of the 115 county delegations will approve Reed, Ed A. Glenn, Reed's campaign manager, said. The actual proportion of Reed and anti-Reed strength probably will not be ascertained until county delegates meet at Springfield.

Wm. G. McAdoo against whom Reed waged a vigorous campaign, was approved by less than one-third of the conventions. Most of the delegates will apparently go to the convention uninstructed except to vote against Reed.

MAY FORCE BRYAN TO NAME A JUDGE TO FILL VACANCY

Stough Says Constitutional Provision for Appointment Mandatory.

Guy Chambers Mentioned in Connection With Place to Be Filled.

Unless Governor Bryan makes appointment some time this week to fill the vacancy left on the district court bench by the death of Judge W. M. Morning, he will face a mandamus suit to force him to do so, Dale P. Stough, Lincoln attorney, said Saturday. Stough stated that he and other members of the Lincoln bar intended to file the suit unless action from the governor was forthcoming soon.

"The governor can play all the politics he wants to under the dome of the capitol," Stuogh said, "but he is not going to do it with the courts."

He refused to disclose the names of his co-workers in the venture to force an appointment, but admitted that Guy Chambers, member of the law firm of Holmes, Chambers and Mann, was the man being boomed for the appointment.

Chambers did not file for district judge, and since the filings have closed he could not now do so.

"I'd certainly like to have the appointment for the ten months until a new judge goes in," he told The Star. "I would accept if it were offered me, but I'm not making any strenuous campaign now."

Stough bases the mandamus action on the theory that the governor must appoint to fill a vacancy, and that it is not for him to decide whether or not the appointment is necessary.

The constitution of the state says: "In case the office of any judge of any district court shall become vacant before the expiration of the regular term for which he was elected, the vacancy shall be filled by appointment by the governor, for the unexpired term, and until a successor shall be elected and qualified."

Stough asserts that the words "shall appoint" mean must appoint; that this is mandatory; and that it has been so construed by the supreme court in cases dealing with this question.

Chambers will have the backing of the American Legion, of which he is a member, it is believed.

The fact that he is not in the race for election is also considered in his favor, as Governor Bryan has said that one of his reasons for not appointing was that it would influence the voters at the election and give the man appointed a great advantage over the other candidates.

THREATENS CITY WITH INJUNCTION

Cowgill Says Unless Attorney's Report Satisfactory Suit Will Be Filed.

Commissioner Doubts Availability of $11,000 in Sewer Extension Funds.

Whether the city council will be called upon to defend itself in an injunction soon depends upon the interpretation of the city charter Monday by the city attorney. If he reports to the council that $11,000 said to be in the sewer fund extension fund is available for building a sewer to carry storm water away from the roof of the new capitol building, and does not give Commissioner Cowgill a satisfactory reason for making such a report, an injunction against the city using the money will be filed as soon as the necessary steps can be taken.

Commissioner Cowgill was asked Saturday night what he intended to do in case the city attorney ruled $11,000 said by Commissioner George Dayton to be in the sewer extension fund was available for the work ordered done by the city council at its meeting a week ago. The commissioner's response was that unless the opinion of the city attorney was satisfactory "there is no doubt but that an injunction action stopping the use of the money will be filed." On the other hand, he said, should the attorney rule the money is not available then there is nothing to do but build the sewer and let the state pay for it with the understanding the city will reimburse the state when funds are available. The commissioner announced early in the week that state authorities had already agreed to do this

Bids Opened Saturday.

Bids for the construction of the sewer were opened by City Engineer D. L. Erickson Saturday forenoon, and upon the opinion of the city attorney what course Mr. Erickson will follow in making recommendations for awarding the contract Monday. If the opinion says the money can be used a recommendation will be made.

What attitude the city attorney will take Monday is not known. However, when the question was first raised by Commissioner Cowgill it was announced that the money could be used. C. R. Wilke, assistant city attorney said his opinion would be filed with City Clerk Theo Berg, Monday

The question involved is the right, under the charter, of using money left over from a preceding year if the amount has not been included in the budget estimate or appropriation ordinance, according to Mr. Cowgill

Aside from the sewer problem there is little business of consequence scheduled for the Monday meeting of the council.

Assembly to Consider Dethronement Within a Few Days.

ATHEN, March 8.—Proclamation of a Greek republic within a week appeared in prospect here tonight.

The cabinet headed by Premier Cafantaris, resigned today following strong pressure from the army, and it was announced immediately that the national assembly is scheduled to meet the middle of next week to consider formal dethronement of the Glucksburg dynasty and proclamation of a republic.

Cafantaris has been considered one of the chief supporters of the youthful King George, who is in exile in Rumania. His removal opens the way it is believed, for carrying out the program of the republicans.

Authorities were notified of the shooting through a mysterious telephone call.

FEAR ALL OF 175 ENTOMBED MINERS LOST

Fire Reported in Utah Mine After Terrific Blasts and Rescuers Unable to Reach Victims.

CASTLE GATE, Utah, March 8.—With the work of rescue hampered by gas fumes and clouds of smoke little hope was held tonight that the 175 coal miners entombed by the terrific explosion in mine No. 2 of the Utah Fuel company here early today would be taken out alive.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8. —The weather outlook for the week beginning Monday follows:

Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys: Generally fair but with probability of local snows Wednesday or Thursday; cold at beginning; normal temperature thereafter.

Added horror to the tragedy was recorded shortly after 7 o'clock tonight when George Wilson, a member of the Standard Coal company rescue team of Standardville, Utah, was overcome by the poisonous gas fumes and died shortly after being brought from the man-way of the mine by fellow rescue workers.

All efforts to resuscitate Wilson, who had made a heroic effort to penetrate beyond the quarter mile level reached by the workers up to that hour, were unavailing. It is believed that the nose set of his mask became loosened and the deadly fumes quickly toppled the man over.

At midnight tonight deadly gas fumes were pouring from the wrecked mine to such an extent that attempts at rescue work were practically abandoned in the main shaft. Workers continued repairing the entry.

Two more rescue workers were in a serious condition from gas.

So terrific was the blast that large timbers were blown from the main mine into the shaft, a distance of 1,500 feet.

Rescue Work Halted.

Mine officials late tonight expressed the belief that it would be sometime Sunday afternoon before real rescue work can be started in the main mine and it is feared that scores of burned and mutilated bodies will be found strewn through the workings.

With the subsidence of the heavy smoke, rescue workers hastened their frenzied efforts to reach the imprisoned men. Only slight progress was reported because of the obstacles being encountered in the torn and twisted timbers and demolished stoppings.

The crowd of mourning women and children remained about the mouth of the mine during the night. Many bonfires were lit, weeping women hovering about the flames for protection against the cold night air. Isolated cases of hysteria were noted, but for th most part the women folk had recovered their calm.

J. P. Carnly, chief clerk of the company, said that the chances of rescuing any of the victims alive were very slight.

Rescue workers, he said, had succeeded in penetrating through the blocked mine portal to a distance of about a quarter of a mile into the man-way. Working in relays of two and three and wearing gas masks, the rescue workers had been unable at an early hour tonight to reach the main tunnel. Huge masses of debris and a choking accumulation of gas and "black damp" hampered progress.

It was believed that the first explosion, a terrific blast, occurred nearly two miles from the mine entrance.

PRESIDENT SAYS CONGRESS SHOULD LIMIT ACTIVITIES

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Congress should devote itself to its normal function of legislating, President Coolidge declared in a speech tonight at the annual banquet of the white house correspondents' association.

"I suppose that the American people are conscious that we have a constitution of the United States," the president said, "and I know that they are attached to the defense and maintainance of that great institution.

"They know that we have a government that is made up of three branches, the executive, whose duty it is to enforce and maintain the laws; the judiciary, that interpretes the law and administers justice as between man and man; and the congress, or the legislative branch, which is supposed under the constitution to be engaged in legislation."

ITALY PLANNING ENLARGED NAVY

ROME, March 8.—Italy is addressing an inquiry to Great Britain regarding the British naval reinforcements that are being concentrated in the Mediterranean, it was learned this afternoon.

It is reliably reported that Premier Mussolini is preparing to announce a new program of naval expansion as a result of Great Britain's Mediterranean policy.

Premier Musolini has two objects in view:

1—Construction of additional warships to give employment to idle workers.

2—Expansion of Italy's naval strength to meet the other powers in the Mediterranean.

SUCCESSOR TO DENBY SECRET

Definitely Stated President Coolidge Has Not Made Selection and Nomination May Not Go to Senate On Monday.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, March 8.—President Coolidge may be unable to send to the Senate Monday the name of Edwin Denby's successor as secretary of the navy, it was indicated tonight, at the white house.

It was stated definitely that Mr. Coolidge has not yet made a selection, and that his choice is unlikely to be announced tomorrow.

Denby steps out of office at noon on Monday. His successor will have less than a year to serve, and he faces a situation in the navy which, veteran officers say, calls for a man of exceptional ability.

In his search for a successor to Denby, Mr. Coolidge has found it difficult, his closest advisers say, to get a man with the administrative ability reqquired who is willing to detach himself from present interests to tackle the navy job for a few months.

The president has been considering this important appointment alone and none of his close associates knew tonight who is leading for the place.

Thousands Acres Inundated When River Overflows

CLENCOE, Ia., March 8.—Between 3,000 and 4,000 acres of valuable farm land was inundated and several hundred head of cattle, horses and other livestock drowned when the Missouri river overflowed near here today.

The flood was caused by a huge ice jam which formed just north of the place.

A dozen families were forced to flee to higher ground.

PROBE BRINGS DENIAL GUSHERS

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Senatorial investigators drilled diligently and arduously today in their quest for additional facts in the great oil scandal, but they struck principally gushers of denials, which flew thick and fast around the crowded room during a tense and sometimes dramatic session of the committee.

Several times the word "liar" trembled unspoken on the lips of the half dozen who passed in and out of the witness chair.

The principal development was that ex-Secretary Albert B. Fall and Edward B. McLean, wealthy Washington and Cincinnati publisher held a secret conference in Atlantic City two weeks before Fall informed the committee that he had "borrowed" $100,000 from McLean.

This loan, as it subsequently developed ,was in the form of checks which were returned by Fall uncashed. Bankers have testified before the committee that McLean had less than $5,000 on deposit here at the time the checks were drawn.

Drama stalked in the committee room at the start of the session in the person of Senator Charles Curtis, republican of Kansas, one of the leaders of the senate, and Ira E. Bennett, chief editorial writer on McLean's Washington paper, the Post.

Bennett said yesterday that Curtis was the "principal" he referred to when he telegraphed McLean at Palm Beach that he had been assured by the "principal" that there would be "no rocking the boat and no resignations," as a result of the oil scandal. He testified to that under oath.

Curtis Issues Denial.

Senator Curtis occupied the witness chair today and also under oath indignantly denied he was "the principal."

Bennett had said he saw Curtis only a day or so before he sent the telegram. Curtis denied that.

Bennett said Curtis had also told him that he (Curtis) had long ago advised President Coolidge to dispense with Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty. Curtis denounced this as untrue.

Curtis appeared twice on the stand to deny Bennett's testimony. They sat and stared at each other in the small committee room with no evidences of their former friendship apparent to the naked eye.

Curtis insisted he had not talked with Bennett between January 3 and January 30. The telegram was dispatched to McLean January 29, immediately following a white house correspondent's conference which Mr. Bennett attended.

Bennett followed on the stand and charged Curtis with having "forgotten one conversation and probably two, that I had with him."

The committee subjected Bennett to a searching cross examination on this conversation which Bennett said was held in Curtis' offices and lasted about twenty minutes.

Bennett hesitated. "If you want to know you will have to force me to tell," he said.

For several minutes the committee

Asa G. Candler, the aged and famous father of the defendant, sat unobtrusively as a spectator throughout most of the trial.

VOTE ON FORD OFFER DELAYED

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—Abandoning thier efforts to force the house to vote tonight on Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals, friends of the offer permitted an adjournment which deferred the final vote until Monday.

The adjournment brought a truce in a period of heated warfare, during which numerous efforts were made by amendment, so to limit and restrict the offer that the Detroit manufacturer would refuse to accept a contract based on such terms. All but one of these amendments were rejected, the vote usually showing that the supporters of Ford's offer retained substantial control.

The amendment adopted was proposed by Representative Begg, Omio, and was amended by Representative Wingo, Arkansas. As finally adopted, it provided the government could cancel Ford's contract if in two successive years he failed to produce 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen a year exclusively for manufacture of commercial fertilizer, or if he in any way defaulted on his contract.

A separate vote on this amendment has been reserved in the full house and Representative McKenzie, author of the bill, said he believed it would be defeated at that time.

Cattle Disease Epidemic Eases

WASHINGTON, March 8. — Rifle firing squads have slaughtered 830 cattle, 2,403 hogs and sheep in twenty-two herds infected by the hoof and mouth disease in California, according to telegrams tonight to the department of agriculture. The carcases were put with quicklime into trenches.

The epidemic is being suppressed rapidly in the quarantines area, the message said.

MANY ENTRIES ON FINAL DAY

Seven in Race for United States Senator and Eight for Governor — No Democratic Entry for Presidential Preference.

Scores of candidates for state and judicial offices, United States senator and congressmen, national committeemen and women, delegates and alternates to the national party conventions, and for legislative seats got in under the wire during the last day allowed by law for filing before Secretary of State Pool closed the lists at the zero hour or midnight Saturday.No filings that come in by mail hereafter will be accepted.

No new entries were made for the presidential preference of Nebraska voters, however. On the democratic side that place is entirely vacant, whics means that the delegates from Nebraska to the New York convention will go uninstructed but ready to back Governor Bryan as the state's favorite if there should be a good opening to present him as a candidate.

On the g. o. p. ticket, a straight race will be run between Coolidge and Johnson. The name of Henry Ford appears as the only filing for president in the progressive column.

Seven candidates for United States senator and eight for governor promise plenty of competition in the primaries of the two majority parties to arouse interest among their members and bring out a large vote.

On all except two of the other state offices there will be primary contests. For state treasurer and attorney general but one filing has been made on each of the major party tickets.

Two Swansons After Same Office.

An eleventh hour development Saturday afternoon was the entry of Gus P. Swanson, Omaha, as a candidate for land commissioner on the republincan ticket, opposing Dan Swanson, present incumbent seeking renomination. The latter believes that his Omaha namesake was brought in by Harry R. Follmer of Lincoln, whom he considers his main opponent, in order to divert votes which otherwise would go to himself.

"That's all right,'" commented Land Commissioner Swanson when he heard about the other Swanson filing. "If Follmer is nominated the democrats will elect the next land commissioner. But he isn't going to be nominated. I'll beat him by a big majority."

Congressmen Morehead, Howard and Shallenberger, democrats, and Simmons, republican, have no opposition in their own party primaries. In the Second and Fourth, respectively, Congressmen Sears and McLaughlin, both republicans, have men running against them on the g. o. p. ticket.

A number of the democratic candidates for state and congressional offices and the legislature have also accepted filings made in their behalf on the progressive ticket.

For supreme judges, there is a bunch of candidates in each of the three districts where members are to be elected this year. The list was completed Saturday by the advent of two more candidates in the First.

In the list of filings published, elsewhere, as compiled and given out by Secretary of State Pool, candidates for the state senate are included in all districts except those in Lancaster and Douglas counties. The house list includes only those from districts comprising more than one county. Single-county legislative filings are made with county clerks.

New Seaplane Speed Record

(United Press.)

Amazing Crime Record Revealed by Chicago Man

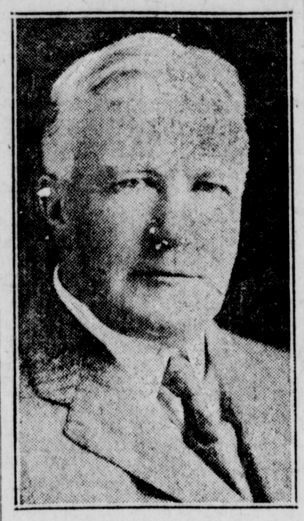

CHICAGO, March 8.—Unabashed by 300 years of jail sentence which he faces should pay for the 200 crimes to which he confessed, H. C. Thomas, 39, "made a clean breast' of his riminal record to police today.

Confessing to murder, burglary and assault upon fifteen women, Thomas calmly recited the most amazing crime record the local authorities have heard for many years.

"My conscience was bothering me," Thomas explained.

Thomas was a burglar de luxe. He found victims readily, robbed their homes at leasure, spent his stolen money freely and was arrested only because of his carelessness. Today as he told of his crimes be offered all of his property—including a lavishly furnished apartment, an expensive automobile and an airplane— to be sold for partial reimbursement to his victims.

RAILROAD HEAD KILLED BY FALL

Alfred H. Smith, President of New York Central Railway, Loses Life When Thrown From Horse in Central Park, New York.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Alfred H. Smith, president of the New York Central railway, was almost instantly killed late this evening when he was thrown from his horse on the bridle path of Sixty-eighth street, Central Park.

He was found by passing motorists who took him to the Fifth avenue hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Smith died of a broken neck and possibly fracture of the skull.

Smith was riding in the park as was his daily custom with a companion, who described the scene.

"We were riding about twenty minutes and were returning home," the companion said, "when a woman stepped into the bridle path. I shouted and we both reined up or we would have struck her. Mr. Smith was an excellent horseman but he stopped so suddenly that he was thrown forward and pitched along the horse's neck to the ground.

"He caught the horse's neck with his arms and his fall did not seem to be heavy. I didn't think he was injured, but when he failed to get up I dismounted and found that he was dead—must have died instantly."

Railway Leader.

Alfred H. Smith, as head of the biggest railway system in the country occupied a leading position in the railway world.

He was known as the railway president who started as an office boy having begun "railroading" as a messenger boy in the service of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railway at Cleveland, in 1879.

In eleven years, he had worked through various departments to a job as foreman of construction work, as superintendent at Lansing, Toledo and Youngstown, and then general superintendent in 1901.

A year later he joined the New York Central as general superintendent. He became general manager in 1903 and vice president in 1906. The year 1913 found him senior vice president in charge of operation, maintenance and construction and January 1, 1924 he was elected president of the system.

During the war Smith was assistant director general of railroads in charge of transportation in trunk line territory east of Chicago and north of Ohio and Potomac rivers.

Mrs. Smith is in Pasadena, Cal., and was notified by telegraph of her husband's death.

REPUDIATE REED AS FAVORITE SON

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 8. — Missouri democracy in county conventions today repudiated the plea of Senator James A. Reed for endorsement as a "favorite son" candidate for president.

Few counties, outside of those containing large cities, named delegates to the state convention instructed for Reed. Most delegations were uninstructed but were known to be opposed to Reed.

The bitter feud between Reed and former President Woodrow Wilson found an echo in several conventions where resolutions were adopted declaring that "out of respect for our dead leader, Woodrow Wilson, we are unable to endorse the candidacy of James A. Reed for president."

Only ten of the 115 county delegations will approve Reed, Ed A. Glenn, Reed's campaign manager, said. The actual proportion of Reed and anti-Reed strength probably will not be ascertained until county delegates meet at Springfield.

Wm. G. McAdoo against whom Reed waged a vigorous campaign, was approved by less than one-third of the conventions. Most of the delegates will apparently go to the convention uninstructed except to vote against Reed.

MAY FORCE BRYAN TO NAME A JUDGE TO FILL VACANCY

Stough Says Constitutional Provision for Appointment Mandatory.

Unless Governor Bryan makes appointment some time this week to fill the vacancy left on the district court bench by the death of Judge W. M. Morning, he will face a mandamus suit to force him to do so, Dale P. Stough, Lincoln attorney, said Saturday. Stough stated that he and other members of the Lincoln bar intended to file the suit unless action from the governor was forthcoming soon.

"The governor can play all the politics he wants to under the dome of the capitol," Stuogh said, "but he is not going to do it with the courts."

He refused to disclose the names of his co-workers in the venture to force an appointment, but admitted that Guy Chambers, member of the law firm of Holmes, Chambers and Mann, was the man being boomed for the appointment.

Chambers did not file for district judge, and since the filings have closed he could not now do so.

"I'd certainly like to have the appointment for the ten months until a new judge goes in," he told The Star. "I would accept if it were offered me, but I'm not making any strenuous campaign now."

Stough bases the mandamus action on the theory that the governor must appoint to fill a vacancy, and that it is not for him to decide whether or not the appointment is necessary.

The constitution of the state says: "In case the office of any judge of any district court shall become vacant before the expiration of the regular term for which he was elected, the vacancy shall be filled by appointment by the governor, for the unexpired term, and until a successor shall be elected and qualified."

Stough asserts that the words "shall appoint" mean must appoint; that this is mandatory; and that it has been so construed by the supreme court in cases dealing with this question.

Chambers will have the backing of the American Legion, of which he is a member, it is believed.

The fact that he is not in the race for election is also considered in his favor, as Governor Bryan has said that one of his reasons for not appointing was that it would influence the voters at the election and give the man appointed a great advantage over the other candidates.

THREATENS CITY WITH INJUNCTION

Cowgill Says Unless Attorney's Report Satisfactory Suit Will Be Filed.

Commissioner Doubts Availability of $11,000 in Sewer Extension Funds.

Whether the city council will be called upon to defend itself in an injunction soon depends upon the interpretation of the city charter Monday by the city attorney. If he reports to the council that $11,000 said to be in the sewer fund extension fund is available for building a sewer to carry storm water away from the roof of the new capitol building, and does not give Commissioner Cowgill a satisfactory reason for making such a report, an injunction against the city using the money will be filed as soon as the necessary steps can be taken.

Commissioner Cowgill was asked Saturday night what he intended to do in case the city attorney ruled $11,000 said by Commissioner George Dayton to be in the sewer extension fund was available for the work ordered done by the city council at its meeting a week ago. The commissioner's response was that unless the opinion of the city attorney was satisfactory "there is no doubt but that an injunction action stopping the use of the money will be filed." On the other hand, he said, should the attorney rule the money is not available then there is nothing to do but build the sewer and let the state pay for it with the understanding the city will reimburse the state when funds are available. The commissioner announced early in the week that state authorities had already agreed to do this.

Bids Opened Saturday.

Bids for the construction of the sewer were opened by City Engineer D. L. Erickson Saturday forenoon, and upon the opinion of the city attorney what course Mr. Erickson will follow in making recommendations for awarding the contract Monday. If the opinion says the money can be used a recommendation will be made.

What attitude the city attorney will take Monday is not known. However, when the question was first raised by Commissioner Cowgill it was announced that the money could be used. C. R. Wilke, assistant city attorney said his opinion would be filed with City Clerk Theo Berg, Monday.

The question involved is the right, under the charter, of using money left over from a preceding year if the amount has not been included in the budget estimate or appropriation ordinance, according to Mr. Cowgill.

Aside from the sewer problem there is little business of consequence scheduled for the Monday meeting of the council.

ATHEN, March 8.—Proclamation of a Greek republic within a week appeared in prospect here tonight.

The cabinet headed by Premier Cafantaria, resigned today following strong pressure from the army, and it was announced immediately that the national assembly is scheduled to meet the middle of next week to consider formal dethronement of the Glucksburg dynasty and proclamation of a republic.

Cafantaris has been considered one of the chief supporters of the youthful King George, who is in exile in Rumania. His removal opens the way it is believed, for carrying out the program of the republicans.

FEAR ALL OF 175 ENTOMBED MINERS LOST

Fire Reported in Utah Mine After Terrific Blasts and Rescuers Unable to Reach Victims.

CASTLE GATE, Utah, March 8.—With the work of rescue hampered by gas fumes and clouds of smoke little hope was held tonight that the 175 coal miners entombed by the terrific explosion in mine No. 2 of the Utah Fuel company here early today would be taken out alive.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 8.—The weather outlook for the week beginning Monday follows:

Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys: Generally fair but with probability of local snows Wednesday or Thursday; cold at beginning; normal temperature thereafter.

Added horror to the tragedy was recorded shortly after 7 o'clock tonight when George Wilson, a member of the Standard Coal company rescue team of Standardville, Utah, was overcome by the poisonous gas fumes and died shortly after being brought from the man-way of the mine by fellow rescue workers.

All efforts to resuscitate Wilson, who had made a heroic effort to penetrate beyond the quarter mile level reached by the workers up to that hour, were unavailing. It is believed that the nose set of his mask became loosened and the deadly fumes quickly toppled the man over.

At midnight tonight deadly gas fumes were pouring from the wrecked mine to such an extent that attempts at rescue work were practically abandoned in the main shaft. Workers continued repairing the entry.

Two more rescue workers were in a serious condition from gas.

So terrific was the blast that large timbers were blown from the main mine into the shaft, a distance of 1,500 feet.

Rescue Work Halted.

Mine officials late tonight expressed the belief that it would be sometime Sunday afternoon before real rescue work can be started in the main mine and it is feared that scores of burned and mutilated bodies will be found strewn through the workings.

With the subsidence of the heavy smoke, rescue workers hastened their frenzied efforts to reach the imprisoned men. Only slight progress was reported because of the obstacles being encountered in the torn and twisted timbers and demolished stoppings.

The crowd of mourning women and children remained about the mouth of the mine during the night. Many bonfires were lit, weeping women hovering about the flames for protection against the cold night air. Isolated cases of hysteria were noted, but for th most part the women folk had recovered their calm.

J. P. Carnly, chief clerk of the company, said that the chances of rescuing any of the victims alive were very slight.

Rescue workers, he said, had succeeded in penetrating through the blocked mine portal to a distance of about a quarter of a mile into the man-way. Working in relays of two and three and wearing gas masks, the rescue workers had been unable at an early hour tonight to reach the main tunnel. Huge masses of debris and a choking accumulation of gas and "black damp" hampered progress.

It was believed that the first explosion, a terrific blast, occurred nearly two miles from the mine entrance.

PRESIDENT SAYS CONGRESS SHOULD LIMIT ACTIVITIES

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Congress should devote itself to its normal function of legislating, President Coolidge declared in a speech tonight at the annual banquet of the white house correspondents' association.

"I suppose that the American people are conscious that we have a constitution of the United States," the president said, "and I know that they are attached to the defense and maintainance of that great institution.

"They know that we have a government that is made up of three branches, the executive, whose duty it is to enforce and maintain the laws; the judiciary, that interpretes the law and administers justice as between man and man; and the congress, or the legislative branch, which is supposed under the constitution to be engaged in legislation."

ITALY PLANNING ENLARGED NAVY

ROME, March 8.—Italy is addressing an inquiry to Great Britain regarding the British naval reinforcements that are being concentrated in the Mediterranean, it was learned this afternoon.

It is reliably reported that Premier Mussolini is preparing to announce a new program of naval expansion as a result of Great Britain's Mediterranean policy.

Premier Musolini has two objects in view:

1—Construction of additional warships to give employment to idle workers.

2—Expansion of Italy's naval strength to meet the other powers in the Mediterranean.

SUCCESSOR TO DENBY SECRET

Definitely Stated President Coolidge Has Not Made Selection and Nomination May Not Go to Senate On Monday.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, March 8.—President Coolidge may be unable to send to the senate Monday the name of Edwin Denby's successor as secretary of the navy, it was indicated tonight, at the white house.

It was stated definitely that Mr. Coolidge has not yet made a selection, and that his choice is unlikely to be announced tomorrow.

Denby steps out of office at noon on Monday. His successor will have less than a year to serve, and he faces a situation in the navy which, veteran officers say, calls for a man of exceptional ability.

In his search for a successor to Denby, Mr. Coolidge has found it difficult, his closest advisers say, to get a man with the administrative ability reqquired who is willing to detach himself from present interests to tackle the navy job for a few months.

The president has been considering this important appointment alone and none of his close associates knew tonight who is leading for the place.

CLENCOE, Ia., March 8.—Between 3,000 and 4,000 acres of valuable farm land was inundated and several hundred head of cattle, horses and other livestock drowned when the Missouri river overflowed near here today.

A dozen families were forced to flee to higher ground.

Do You Ever Read Advertisements?

Mr. J A Peterson, County Assessor of Greeley County Nebraska and formerly County Judge says he has been reading our advertisements in the Lincoln Sunday Star and is so much interested in them that he files them away

Naturally, having been County Judge, and being familiar with Probate practice and the many odd situations which arise in estate matters Mr Peterson would be much more likely to read an advertisement dealing with the subject matter of his former occupation But we have sometimes wondered whether a considerable number of persons are really interested in the subject or read advertisements about it

Of course, we know that those who ask for our free booklets on Wills Estates and Trusts have read at least part of one advertisement And this fact encourages us to keep on with the service

Last week we discussed Wells v. Cochran, 129 N W 533 the leading case based on General Section 1877 covering the subject of set-off in actions brought by or against Executors Futher sections will now be taken up

Suppose you and John Smith are indebted on a joint contract or upon a judgment founded on a joint contract and Smith dies before the debt or judgment is paid His estate is liable for the entire debt but you can be compelled to contribute to pay your share of it. (G S 1378)

In case an Executor dies or is removed from his office or resigns or has his letters testamentary revoked while a suit is pending in which he is a party as Executor his successor may prosecute or defend in like manner as if it had originally been commenced by or against him (G S 1379)

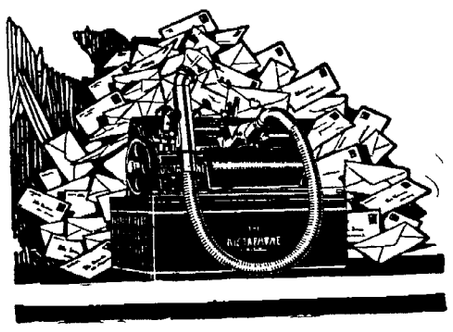

Bethel v. Pawnee County, 145 N. W. 363, is the leading case involving the principle of G S 1379 Robert Bethel, driving along a road on the Kansas Nebraska State line was killed by the collapse of a small bridge he attempted to cross He was a resident of Nemaha County Kan and his wife Florence E Bethel was appointed administratrix by the Probate Court of that County

Later Mrs. Bethel removed to Pawnee County Nebraska and commenced an action against that county for damages sustained by herself and children for the death of their father She recovered judgment and the county appealed to the Supreme Court where the case was affirmed

The defendant's attorneys contended that when Mrs Bethel removed to Pawnee County her Kansas letters of administration became revoked by law but our Supreme Court held otherwise Much interesting matter in this case has no bearing on the settling of estates and cannot be touched on here

How to build up your Weight

TO be under weight often proves low fighting-power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve-power, minus red-cells in your blood, minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red-blood-cells, you begin to become plus. That's why S. S. S., since 1826, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, a plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, firmer, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. DIG OUT SAND BY HYDRAULIC FORCE

Glacial Formation Being Washed Away in Fairbury Vicinity.

(Special to The Star.)

FAIRBURY, Neb., March 8.—The hydraulic sand plant of the Duval Sand and Gravel Co., at Fairbury is perhaps the only one of its kind in the United States and is similar to the system used in South America to wash down a mountain and deposit the material in the ocean to make room for the expansion of a city for building lots. The water was the Du-Val plant is carried out for a distance of one mile and forced thru a giant nozzle with sufficient force to tear a man to pieces at one hundred feet. The water washes the sand and gravel to a sump where it is picked up by a heavy duty pump and forced several hundred feet to the separators over the cars where the dirt, quick sand organic matter and all foreign material are washed away.

This glacier deposit has been traced from the Athabaska region of northwest Canada to Rulo, Neb. Mr. DuVal has some wonderful specimens of Topazes found in this deposit and cut in New York City. They frequently wash down bones of great weight and size, too large to compare with any animals of this age. The material produced from this pit is considered by contractors of high quality and permanence for concrete work.

DIG OUT SAND BY HYDRAULIC FORCE

(Special to The Star.)

FAIRBURY, Neb., March 8.—The hydraulic sand plant of the Duval Sand and Gravel Co., at Fairbury is perhaps the only one of its kind in the United States and is similar to the system used in South America to wash down a mountain and deposit the material in the ocean to make room for the expansion of a city for building lots. The water was the DuVal plant is carried out for a distance of one mile and forced thru a giant nozzle with sufficient force to tear a man to pieces at one hundred feet. The water washes the sand and gravel to a sump where it is picked up by a heavy duty pump and forced several hundred feet to the separators over the cars where the dirt, quick sand organic matter and all foreign material are washed away.

This glacier deposit has been traced from the Athabaska region of northwest Canada to Rulo, Neb. Mr. DuVal has some wonderful specimens of Topazes found in this deposit and cut in New York City. They frequently wash down bones of great weight and size, too large to compare with any animals of this age. The material produced from this pit is considered by contractors of high quality and permanence for concrete work.

A MODERN BUNGALOW

THOSE who favor the bungalow will find much to admire in this little home: There are a number of points about the exterior treatment which distinguish it from the other houses in the block—notably the pergola-effect of the porch roof, the broad grouped windows and entrance, and the wide siding. Stucco has been used successfully also in building this home.

While the house is quite small (only 26x32), so that it is suitable for an ordinary inside city lot, the interior has all the conveniences of most small houses, and some of the luxuries

One enters a tiny vestibule which shelters the living room in inclement weather The living room is almost square, with beamed ceiling and an inglenook with fireplace, bookcases and seats The low row of casements and small sash around the inglenook makes it an inviting room on even the dreariest winter day. An interior door opening with bookcases separates the living room from the dining room, adding to the spacious effect of each.

There is a built-in sideboard in the dining room of straight, simple lines, and just enough ornament to make it distinctive. This bit of permanent furniture, like the rest of the woodwork in the house, is a standard design and size, so that the big bugbear of "special millwork" is conspicuously absent from the cost of building.

The kitchen is a tiny box of a place that will delight the modern housewife by its completeness. There is a double window over the sink and the worktable, and an upper panel of glass in the back door gives light from a second side. The basement steps form an alcove just right for the range. A handy clothes chute is near

POINCARE MAY BE FORCED TO QUIT HIS POST

Premiership May Be Lost Following Sensational Drop of Franc.

PARIS, March 8—With the French franc falling to one-sixth of its normal value, Premier Poincare's principal weapon with which he hoped to arrest the decline was taken from his hands tonight by the senate commission on finance

As a result of the commission voting to reject his plan for effecting 1,000,000,000 francs in economics by means of decrees, the French premier was brought close to a point where only resignation is left him

After striking a grave blow at the government by voting rejection of the decrees, the commission voted, 19 to 3, to substitute therefore a scheme to realize the billion francs in economics by suppressing sufficient credits from each ministry.

It proposed that this should be accomplished by decrees by President Millerand, "within the frame work of existing laws." This is another blow directly at Poincare, who wished to sign the decrees himself.

Commission Acts.

The commission did vote acceptance of a proposed increase of 20 per cent in taxes

When the commission's decisions were made known to him, Poincare summoned three of his ministers, Count De Lasteyrie, General Maginot and M. Colrat, to a conference.

It was reported he might arrange acceptance of the commission's proposals by these ministers, thus avoiding a crisis which political observers however, believe is imminent.

Earlier in the day Poincare appeared before the senate finance commission and again demanded it report out the financial projects exactly as they had been voted by the chamber in time for the senate to discuss them Thursday. Otherwise he said he would resign

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., March 8.—A terrific explosion followed by fire, occurred at the Atlantic Refining company plant here today. Seven persons were burned, one probably fatally, and damage estimated at $150,000 resulted.

An explosion in a paint tank was believed to have started several gasoline tanks, which followed in quick succession, with blasts that shook the entire countryside.

Flames then shot up, causing a conflagration that spread terror thru the neighborhood.

Jennings Boggs, 27, employe of the Atlantic Refining company, was said to be fatally injured

Chief Arthur Gearhart of the Mt. Pleasant fire company, summoned to fight the fire, was seriously burned about the neck and face

Five other persons are in the hospital in a serious condition, it was reported.

BREAK UP MUTINY IN IRISH MILITARY

Government Activity Frightens Plotters and Several Offices Flee.

DUBLIN, March 8—Threatened mutiny in the Irish free state army was broken up tonight. A group of soldiers joined the movement in protest against the government's decision to re-organize the army and cut down its size.

Plans for the mutiny were learned by free state government officials Friday night. Saturday morning the homes of several well known military officers, including General Liam Tobin, were searched for documents.

Free state troops in County Tipperary refused to demobilize. They seized machine guns, rifles and ammunition and fled into the hills.

Trouble was reported from Mullingar.

The cabinet met this afternoon to hear a report from the military chief of staff.

Issue Proclamation.

An official proclamation was issued ordering the arrest of two officers of the regular army—General Liam Tobin and Major General Charles Dolton who have been formally charged with fomenting mutiny. They have disappeared.

Officers in the infantry and air forces were involved Major General Dalton was attached to the air service. Tobin and Major General Daly, of the Dublin guards, whose homes were searched, were attached to the infantry, the latter being assigned to the Dublin guards

Before he disappeared, General Tobin made this statement to International News Service:

"A government upset may result from today's searches and disclosures. There is considerable dissatisfaction within the army over the way the treaty is being considered. I understand the minister of commerce, McGrath, has resigned and several members of the dail eireann are threatening to quit as a result of the army re-organization."

Tobin referred to the Anglo-Irish treaty creating the free state.

The military authorities issued a statement admitting dissatisfaction in the army, but claimed it was confined to narrow limits. They admitted searching the homes of several officers but refused to give any explanation.

ARCHBISHOPS ON WAY TO VATICAN

(United Press)

NEW YORK, March 8.—Catholics of all classes, judges, lawyers, high clergy, laborers and little children, gathered to the number of 5,000 today to bid farewell to Archbishop Hayes of New York, and Archbishop Mundelein of Chicago, as the prelates sailed for Rome, where they will be elevated to the cardinalate.

Aboard the Berengaria, on which the archbishops departed some 3,000 stood in line to kneel reverently for an instant.

In statements issued at the time of sailing, both prelates declared the honor to be paid them is not a personal one, but a tribute to the American people of their dioceses. Both expressed grief at leaving their communities.

Archbishop Hayes and Archbishop Mundelein were both born on the East Side of New York within a few blocks of each other, grew up together, went to the same school and have always remained close friends, the Chicago prelate said in his statement informally aboard the Berengaria, he and Archbishop Hayes joked with one another, each declaring the people of his diocese the greatest in the world.

"It is not an honor to an individual," Archbishop Hayes said, "but to the head of one of the greatest dioceses in the world. It is also intended as an honor to the great city of New York, irrespective of its religious beliefs of its citizens."

"The honor comes to Chicago not because of the personal merit of the recipient," Archbishop Mundelein said. "it comes as a merited recognition of the labors and efforts of the splendid clergy and people. I maintain without the slightest fear of contradiction that the Catholic people of Chicago have no superior either now nor in the past."

Eluta Camp Fire met at the First Baptist church for a song meeting, Saturday, March 8, at 3:30.

POINCARE MAY BE FORCED TO QUIT HIS POST

Premiership May Be Lost Following Sensational Drop of Franc.

PARIS, March 8—With the French franc falling to one-sixth of its normal value, Premier Poincare's principal weapon with which he hoped to arrest the decline was taken from his hands tonight by the senate commission on finance.

As a result of the commission voting to reject his plan for effecting 1,000,000,000 francs in economics by means of decrees, the French premier was brought close to a point where only resignation is left him.

After striking a grave blow at the government by voting rejection of the decrees, the commission voted, 19 to 3, to substitute therefore a scheme to realize the billion francs in economics by suppressing sufficient credits from each ministry.

It proposed that this should be accomplished by decrees by President Millerand, "within the frame work of existing laws." This is another blow directly at Poincare, who wished to sign the decrees himself.

Commission Acts.

The commission did vote acceptance of a proposed increase of 20 per cent in taxes.

When the commission's decisions were made known to him, Poincare summoned three of his ministers, Count De Lasteyrie, General Magi-not and M. Colrat, to a conference.

It was reported he might arrange acceptance of the commission's proposals by these ministers, thus avoiding a crisis which political observors however, believe is imminent.

Earlier in the day Poincare appeared before the senate finance commission and again demanded it report out the financial projects exactly as they had been voted by the chamber in time for the senate to discuss them Thursday. Otherwise he said he would resign.

Entire Countryside Rocked by Explosion at Refinery Company Plant.

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., March 8.—A terrific explosion followed by fire, occurred at the Atlantic Refining company plant here today. Seven persons were burned, one probably fatally, and damage estimated at $150,000 resulted.

An explosion in a paint tank was believed to have started several gasoline tanks, which followed in quick succession, with blasts that shook the entire countryside.

Flames then shot up, causing a conflagration that spread terror thru the neighborhood.

Jennings Boggs, 27, employe of the Atlantic Refining company, was said to be fatally injured.

Chief Arthur Gearhart of the Mt. Pleasant fire company, summoned to fight the fire, was seriously burned about the neck and face.

Five other persons are in the hospital in a serious condition, it was reported.

BREAK UP MUTINY IN IRISH MILITARY

DUBLIN, March 8—Threatened mutiny in the Irish free state army was broken up tonight. A group of soldiers joined the movement in protest against the government's decision to re-organize the army and cut down its size.

Plans for the mutiny were learned by free state government officials Friday night. Saturday morning the homes of several well known military officers, including General Liam Tobin, were searched for documents.

Free state troops in County Tipperary refused to demobilize. They seized machine guns, rifles and ammunition and fled into the hills.

Trouble was reported from Mullingar.

The cabinet met this afternoon to hear a report from the military chief of staff.

Issue Proclamation.

An official proclamation was issued ordering the arrest of two officers of the regular army—General Liam Tobin and Major General Charles Dolton who have been formally charged with fomenting mutiny. They have disappeared.

Officers in the infantry and air forces were involved. Major General Dalton was attached to the air service. Tobin and Major General Daly, of the Dublin guards, whose homes were searched, were attached to the infantry, the latter being assigned to the Dublin guards.

Before he disappeared, General Tobin made this statement to International News Service:

"A government upset may result from today's searches and disclosures. There is considerable dissatisfaction within the army over the way the treaty is being considered. I understand the minister of commerce, McGrath, has resigned and several members of the dail eireann are threatening to quit as a result of the army re-organization."

Tobin referred to the Anglo-Irish treaty creating the free state.

The military authorities issued a statement admitting dissatisfaction in the army, but claimed it was confined to narrow limits. They admitted searching the homes of several officers but refused to give any explanation.

PREPSTERS WIN CAGE CROWN IN STATE TOURNEY

Creighton High Takes Measure of Omaha Central In Class A Final at Coliseum.

Creighton Prep basketeers of Omaha last night shot their way to the state high school championship of Nebraska by defeating Omaha Central, 20 to 9, in the final round contest of class A. The Prep-Central battle was witnessed by 6,000 spectators, the greatest attendance in tournament history in the Cornhusker commonwealth. Standing room was at a premium at the state fair coliseum, where the titular battle was staged.

The Prepsters had the edge on the Centralites almost from the opening whistle. Creighton was in front, 8 to 3, at the half and was leading, 12 to 7, at the three-quarters mark.

First Quarter.

The crowd roared a deafening cheer when the Creighton Prep and Omaha Central teams raced on the floor for practice warm-ups. The building was jammed, the crowd standing up in the aisles and sitting around the edge of the court.

O'Brien got the top off and Coffey took the ball and dribbled in from the side for an easy basket. Lawson and Gerelick were drawn toward the center of the play. Monaghan and Moylan missed three shots at long range and Monaghan blocked Gerelick's shot.

Gerelick missed a long shot by inches. It was the third time Central had been able to shoot for the basket.

The teams fumbled the ball in the center of the court, both quintets appearing nervous in attempts to take the ball down the court. Gerelick missed a long shot by a few inches as the gun ended the first quarter.

Score end first quarter—Prep 2; Central, 1.

Second Quarter.

Robertson was called for using his hands. Monaghan missed the free throw, but O'Brien made it good for two points when he leaped high and tipped the ball in.

Monaghan scored from near the center of the court and Central took out time. Score—Creighton Prep, 6; Central, 1.

Marrow broke loose and dribbled between Monaghan and O'Leary for a basket. O'Leary fouled after the next tipoff but Marrow missed the shot.

Gerelick fouled as Monaghan was trying for a basket, but the Prep guard missed one toss and stepped over the line on the second.

Coffey tossed the ball in for a basket after O'Brien had misse two follow-in-shots.

The two teams were fighting hard as the gun was fired ending the first half. Score end second quarter—Creighton Prep, 8; Central, 3.

Third Quarter.

Central changed shirts at the start of the second half, using white jerseys instead of the blue which made it difficult to distinguish the players during the first two quarters.

Central rushed in the fight, but was erratic in basket work. O'Leary sank one from near the center of the Florida U. Team Bumped by Giants

SARASOTA, Fla., March 8.—The New York Giants played their first exhibition game today, swamping the University of Florida by a score of 17 to 0.

Class C.

Dunbar, 11; Wahoo, 7.

It required three extra five-minute periods before Dunbar won the class C championship. Dunbar defeated Waho in the final game, 11 to 7.

The two teams found difficulty in breaking through the opposing defenses and the score at the close of the first half found Dunbar leading by a 5-2 margin.

Wahoo was trailing, 4-5, at the close of the third quarter, but F. Cunningham, tiny Wahoo forward, knotted the count at five-all just as the gun was fired for the second half.

In the first extra period both teams resorted to shooting from the middle of the court. In the first minute E. Cunningham registered and near the close of the extra session O. Hewitt knotted the count at seven-all.

The second period was completed without a score. Both teams shooting wildly from the center of the court. Smith scored in the first ten seconds of the third session and Dunbar then opened up a stalling game. Smith scored again just before the final gun was fired.

E. Cunningham, midget forward, featured the Wahoo play, mixing it with the best of them throughout the game. Smith was the mainstay for Dunbar. Score:

YANKS PREPARE FOR OLYMPICS

U. S. Perfects Organization for Participation in Paris Games.

BY HENRY L. FARRELL.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Managers, coaches and trainers for the American Olympic team were appointed at a quiet and peaceful meeting of the executive committee of the American Olympic committee here this afternoon.

Lawrence Robertson, University of Pennsylvania, former Olympic athlete and coach, was unanimously approved for the position as head coach of the team. Jack Moakley, Cornell, coach of the 1920 team, refused to accept a place as an assistant and he was left off the list.

Another surprise came when Matt Halpin, New York Athletic club, manager of the last four Olympic teams, was not given a place in this year's organization.

Charles A. Dean, Illinois A. C., Chicago, was named manager, with George V. Brown of Boston and Samuel Goodman of San Francisco as his assistants.

Assistant coaches named were Walter Christie, University of California; A. A. Stagg, University of Chicago; Harry Hillman, Dartmouth; Edward Farrell, Harvard; Johnny Magee, Bowdoin; Thomas Keane, Syracuse; and Lieut. E. L. Vidal, West Point. Mike Ryan, Colby, was named trainer of the marathon runners. Robertson, Farrell, Hillman, Ryan and Vidal, of the coaches, are former Olympic athletes.

For the first time the committee named departments for the coaches as follows:

Robertson, sprints and sprints relays; Christie, shot, discus and javelin; Stagg, 400, 800 and 1,600 meter relays; Hillman, hurdles and high jump; Keane and Magee, distance running events, steeplechase and walks; Farrell, pole vault, broad jump and hop-step-and-jump.

Pinneo Heads Mat Squad.

Other managers appointed were: Boxing, William H. Cuddy, Boston; wrestling, C. W. Streit, jr.; Swimming, John T. Taylor, Pittsburgh.

The finance committee reported that it had on hand a balance of approximately $13,000 out of $75,000 that had been subscribed. Major items of expense encountered were $20,000 for the winter sports team and $40,000 as the first payment on the ship charter.

The report of the finance committee was read before a telegram had been received from the San Francisco Olympic committee announcing that its quota of $25,000 had been raised in twelve minutes today.

Athletes who make the team will not be permitted to write articles for publication from the time they sail from the United States until they return, according to a resolution passed by the committee.

This action may bring about some interesting results in the case of William T. Tilden, and Vincent Richards, the two tennis stars, who have been involved in a recent controversy with the tennis association about writing for publication.

Tilden May Stay at Home.

Tilden, according to Julian S. Myrick, former president of the tennis association, does not want to go to Paris unless the committee feels it is his patriotic duty to do so. Vincent Richards and other male stars being considered are all anxious to go, with the exception of Billy Johnston, California star, who has declined.

Miss Helen Wills, national champion Miss Eleanor Goss and Mrs. George Wightman are going with the team, according to Myrick's report.

Polo Team Going Over.

Tommy Mallory, one of America's greatest polo stars, is organizing a team to represent the United States, according to a letter received by the committee. He did not name the other players.

Soccer football players who are to be sent over by the United States football association have volunteered to travel second class on the Leviathan to save expenses and avoid the demands of social life that might impede their training, Thomas Cahill, president of the association, reported.

No mention was made at the meeting of the Paddock case, but the attitude of the officials seemed to be that it is taken for granted that the sprint champion will be eligible and that Larmony has been restored among the committee members.

The Church team has not been defeated for two years in the Lincoln Y. M. C. A. Church Basketball league and won all of its games this season by a safe margin, as shown by the following scores:

	Opp.	St. P.

Srb, veteran forward and Gerald Gray, who graduated this spring, will not be in the 1925 lineup. St. Paul should bid strong for first place in the state Y. M. C. A. basketball tournament, which is to be held at the Lincoln Y. M. C. A., March 21 and 22.

Trapshooters at Columbus Booked for Busy Season

COLUMBUS, Neb., March 8.—Members of the Columbus Gun club are instituting a new competition to give added interest to the practice shoots they hold every second Sunday of each month. A series of six or more prizes will be posted for the members who wind up the season with the highest scores for the sixteen practice shoots to be held between March 9 and October 5. In order that all may have equal chance the poorer shots will be given handicap advantages.

The shooting season will begin Sunday, March 9, and will continue on every alternating Sunday, concluding Oct. 5, a total of sixteen Sundays, with 800 targets for each man. Members to be eligible for a prize must have shot at not less than 500 targets out of the 800. The first 50 targets on each practice day will count. If stormy weather comes on the regular practice day, the competition will be held the following Sunday.

Members will be classified in six classes—A, B, C, D, E and F, with a sliding per centon each 100 targets shot. For example, an 81 percent shooter, will get sixteen added targets, giving him a net score of 97 per cent. There will be a prize for each class and the high gun in each class will win. In event of a tie, the tie must be shot off, 25 targets, high gun.

This action may bring about some interesting results in the case of William T. Tilden, and Vincent Richards, the two tennis stars, who have been involved in a recent controversy with the tennis association about writing for publication.

Tilden May Stay at Home.

Tilden, according to Julian S. Myrick, former president of the tennis association, does not want to go to Paris unless the committee feels it is his patriotic duty to do so.

Vincent Richards and other male stars being considered are all anxious to go, with the exception of Billy Johnston, California star, who has declined.

Miss Helen Wills, national champion Miss Eleanor Goss and Mrs. George Wightman are going with the team, according to Myrick's report.

Polo Team Going Over.

Tommy Mallory, one of America's greatest polo stars, is organizing a team to represent the United States, according to a letter received by the committee. He did not name the other players.

Soccer football players who are to be sent over by the United States football association have volunteered to travel second class on the Leviathan to save expenses and avoid the demands of social life that might impede their training, Thomas Cahill, president of the association, reported.

No mention was made at the meeting of the Paddock case, but the attitude of the officials seemed to be that it is taken for granted that the sprint champion will be eligible and that Larmony has been restored among the committee members.

Church Cagesters Winners In Two Leagues

ST. PAUL CHURCH LEAGUE CHAMPIONS

Upper row—W. L. Greenslit, director of athletics; L. Fisher, forward; V. U. Yantz, manager; L. McLellan, forward; Dr. Aitken, pastor.

Lower row—W. R. Hamsa, guard; H. F. Srb, forwar d; G. Reynolds, forward and captain; M. V. Popelar, center; G. Gray, guard; E. Durisch, guard.

When the Lincoln Y. M. C. A. basketball tournament closed last Tuesday evening, St. Paul M. E. church claimed the undisputed championship in both the Junior and Church leagues. The Junior team maintained a clean slate throughout the season and made a much better showing than last year.

The Church team has not been defeated for two years in the Lincoln Y. M. C. A. Church Basketball league and won all of its games this season by a safe margin, as shown by the following scores:

	Opp.	St. P.
Epworth M. E.	12	31
Grace M. E.	10	19
First Baptist	2	66
United Brethren	8	63
Trinity M. E.	10	16
Trinity Lutheran	18	34
First M. E., Uni. Place	13	23
Emmanuel M. E.	0	2
First Christian	7	37
Second M. E.	15	22

Popelar, center, was high point winner, while Reynolds and Srb, forwards, were virtually tied for second place. Besides the regulars, four excellent players were on the reserve list. H. F. Srb, veteran forward and Gerald Gray, who graduated this spring, will not be in the 1925 lineup. St. Paul should bid strong for first place in the state Y. M. C. A. basketball tournament, which is to be held at the Lincoln Y. M. C. A., March 21 and 22.

Trapshooters at Columbus Booked for Busy Season

COLUMBUS, Neb., March 8.—Members of the Columbus Gun club are instituting a new competition to give added interest to the practice shoots they hold every second Sunday of each month. A series of six or more prizes will be posted for the members who wind up the season with the highest scores for the sixteen practice shoots to be held between March 9 and October 5. In order that all may have equal chance the poorer shots will be given handicap advantages.

The shooting season will begin Sunday, March 9, and will continue on every alternating Sunday, concluding Oct. 5, a total of sixteen Sundays, with 800 targets for each man. Members to be eligible for a prize must have shot at not less than 500 targets out of the 800. The first 50 targets on each practice day will count. If stormy weather comes on the regular practice day, the competition will be held the following Sunday.

Members will be classified in six classes—A, B, C, D, E and F, with a sliding per centon each 100 targets shot. For example, an 81 percent shooter, will get sixteen added targets, giving him a net score of 97 per cent. There will be a prize for each class and the high gun in each class will win. In event of a tie, the tie must be shot off, 25 targets, high gun.

Class E.

Yutan, 16; Nelson, 13.

Yutan nosed ahead of Nelson in the final championship round of class E winning, 16 to 13, after the contest had been extended during an extra five-minute period.

The score was 12-all at the end of the second half. During the extra session, Williamson, Yutan forward, located the ring for two baskets and the argument was over. Knapp, Nelson guard, hit the ring for five goals from the floor. The score:

Spring!

Housecleaning!

Synonymous words, and words that mean much to the home keeper and the car owner.

Of course we all know that housecleaning originally meant just slicking up the house, washing the windows, putting up fresh curtains, and doing all of the little odd jobs that had needed attention for several months.

That was once upon a time, but things have changed a little. Folks still clean house, but something has been added to the idea, and that is the family car.

After a winter of fairly rough usage, out in the snow, muddy roads and the like, the car needs a good going over. All of the parts should be cleaned and oiled. If it is a closed car, the windows, the windshield should be polished until they shine.

But that isn't all, a coat of paint wouldn't hurt anything and it would make the car look almost as good as new.

How about the lights? Are they all to the good, without a single blemish on the lens?

And the inside of the car, whether it be closed or open surely needs attention after all of the family shoes have been in and out several times daily all winter.

The rugs are probably worn out, a new one would add a great deal to the appearance of the car. And if the car has had very hard usage, it might be necessary to have some re-upholstering done, or the old can not be gone over satisfactorily.

Summer vacations follow closely upon Spring, and now is the time to have your car put in readiness for any short or long trip you may care to take.

STUDEBAKER CAR MAKES RECORDS

Light Six Encircles Union of South Africa in Less Than Hundred Hours.

JOHONNESBURG, March 8.—Old timers of the Boer trek wagon trails thronged around a mud-daubed automobile, when it drew up at the crub on a main thoroughfare in Johannesburg

The machine, a Studebaker Light-Six touring car, had just written a new page in the colorful history of the Union of South Africa

Without a pause in the motor's steady throb, it had set four records in retraveling the old settler routes, completely circling the Union, in less than 100 hours—a perilous trip that once took weeks for the bullock carts.

Makes Other Records.

Not only did the Studebaker establish a new round-trip record around the Union, but it also shattered three other records between points along the course Notable among these was the new running time of 35 hours and 57 minutes between this city and Cape town. This was a distance of 996 miles

A standard stock model was driven out of Johannesburg by H F. Payne, Fred Scantlebury, L O Bright and W. B du Preez. They drove mountainous roads thick with mud to Cape Town, then through Port Elizabeth, East London, Kokstad, Durban and return. The car made a 2,687-mile circle.

Running time from the start here and return was 99 hours, 46 minutes. Gasoline consumption averaged 21.5 miles per imperial gallon. The gasoline mileage was unusually high, motorists agreed, considering that an average speed of 26.75 miles an hour was maintained along roads broken by frequent streams, which compelled fording.

Numerous washouts, due to heavy rains, forced the car to travel along long stretches of hilly, slippery roadway, subjecting the Studebaker and its drivers to severe test For this reason the trip proved one of the most sensational ever staged in South Africa.

Lost In Diamond Diggings.

The maze of roads running around hundreds of diamond diggings, near Kimberley, brought confusion to the record-breakers. The running time suffered serious disadvantages through time lost in opening and closing cattle gates. Metropolitan motorists may be surprised to know that actually 309 gates barred the Studebaker's path.

Return to Johannesburg, the Light-Six was examined by several hundred motor car owners. The engine was still running smoothly. The body was unmjured—although it was thickly coated with mud, from axles to top. Then a careful examination of the chassis showed that the car had gone through the gruelling strain without the slightest breakdown.

Mastered the Mountains.

"We knew the Studebaker would go through with it," declared B. Penney, Johannesburg motor dealer. "We hoped for a record. But, honestly, we did not expect the four records that the car made.

"We felt that it could cover the distance according to the express schedule we had mapped out, and it accomplished what no other car has done We proved that it is master of muddy mountain roads as well as crowded city traffic."

But the olden-day bullock drivers, grizzled veterans of once toilsome trails over which the motor car flew, still shake their heads and talk of the change an automobile from South Bend, Indiana, has wrought in the story of South Africa.

AUTO NOTES.

An automobile that requires a gallon of gas to go 20 miles will consume a gallon of gas in approximately 50 startings.

A pungent odor, accompanied with black smoke from the exhaust, denotes a rich mixture. To correct this, adjust the amount of gasoline or air.

Exposed wires around a car are best painted with shellac, which will prevent their being affected by water.

The proper way to place a tube into a casing is to first partly inflate it. Then it should be applied carefully, the side bearing the stem always being kept in sight. A tube should never be inserted unless partly inflated.

To test loss of compression, crank the engine by hand and note the resistance of each cylinder. If one cylinder has less resistane than the other, it should be corrected at once.

Balloon Gum-Dipped Cord Is Seen As Tire of the Future

In the opinion of D. Eiche, local distributor for Firestone tires, the new Balloon Gum-Dipped Cord is the most important tire development in history.

The car on Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords virtually floats along on these big, extremely flexible air-cushions. The sponge-like action of these tires smoothes obstacles and inequalities in the road. Disagreeable shocks and bumps are absorbed in the tires themselves, and never reach the frame of the car. Even the severest jolts are, with the aid of the springs, eased almost to the negligible point.

The cushioning qualities of Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords are so pronounced that the car on this new equipment can be driven over rough, unimproved roads with the same speed as on pavements. It is no longer necessary to slowly pick your way among holes, ruts, and exposed stones. Records show that car depreciation is greatly reduced.

The safety feature is another big argument in favor of these tires. The wide, supple tread affords over twice as much contact with the road as that of the ordinary tire. They take a surer hold on the slipperiest footing. Better car control naturally results.

To make the flexible Balloon Gum-Dipped Cord durable and long-wearing, Firestone employs the well known gum-dipping process, which has proved so successful in giant truck pneumatics and in regular Firestone passenger car tires. By means of gum-dipping, the cords in the body of the tire are impregnated and insulated with rubber and thus protected from internal wear. This gum joins the component parts of the tire into a strong, inseparable union. Gum-dipping has actually made the Balloon Cord practical for everyday use.

Local car owners are equipping with these tires and in all sizes and types of cars their superiorities are apparent and lead to further sales.

Demonstrations are being given prospective customers daily, and the appointment list is usually filled in advance

ESSEX OUTSTRIPS ITS PREDECESSOR

Factory Operates at Full Capacity in Effort to Meet Growing Demand.

"A volume of business unparalleled in our history continues to pour into us," declares C. A. Lord, Hudson-Essex distributor. "Since the public has learned that the new Essex six will actually out-perform even its famous predecessor, we have been up against the unprecedented experience of being short of motor cars during the winter season.

"Our volume for the last month broke all previous records.

"The month's business taught me a number of things. The principal one is that the public is still intently interested in the performing ability of a motor car. I had rather convinced myself that the average motorist didn't care any more for unusual acceleration and pep.

"So in presenting the new Essex, we said very little about its really remarkable ability on the road. We were a little hesitant to say that it would actually out-climb, out-pull, out-accelerate and out-run the famous Essex four, a tall speeds up to fifty miles an hour When we began demonstrating those facts, our business took a jump forward that surprised me.

Predicts Car Shortage.

"I have no hesitancy in predicting a serious car shortage this spring. That shortage will apply of course only to those manufacturers who are giving a big measure of value. But the shortage will come in those lines, and it apply with particular force to Hudson and Essex. Despite the operation of the Hudson-Essex plant at full capacity, the public has taken cars so fast that no stock has been laid up by dealers for the spring.

"The man who intends buying a car had better get his order in now.

"The general rise in prices has undoubtedly sharpened the public's buying activity. There is a feeling that prices most certainly will not come down, and may very easily reach a higher level. That statement is made, not as any inference on what might happen with Hudson-Essex, but simply as a report of my own observation as I have talked to buyers in the sales room."

Jewett Enamel Wlil Withstand Weather

Baked in over 400 degrees temperature, the enamel finish of the new Jewett brougham will withstand any weather condition, claims the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company.

It is a bright, lustrous finish and there are three coats of enamel.

"No oil—no, vac—no gas," is the most complete description of the gasoline feed just adopted by the Paige-Detroit Car company for both its Page and Jewett cars.

The vacuum which draws the gasoline from the tank in the rear is created by the oil pump.

The vacuum tank gas supply is insured at all speeds by a 500 per cent factor of safety, according to tests made by the factory.

General Motors Car Sales Show Increase

General Motors in February sold more than 80,000 cars and trucks compared with 60,959 sold in January, and further with 55,427 for the corresponding month a year ago.

	1924	1923	1922
Jan.	60,959	49,162	16,088
Feb.	*80,000	55,427	20,869
March		71,669	34,082

*This preliminary figure includes Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Oakland, Oldsmobile passenger, and commercial cars and GMC truck sales by the American and Canadian divisions of General Motors; and exports overseas.

Gear case grease should not be too stiff. It should flow between the teeth of the gears freely. For this reason a lighter grade of lubricant should be used during cold weather

COTNER NOTES

H. H. Harmon of the national board department of endowments, has been visiting his home in Lincoln during the past week and was a campus guest Wednesday. Mr. Harmon is at present engaged in raising the endowment for Transylvania university at Lexington, Kentucky. He reports having passed the amount asked for and raising the amount of the endowment to one and a quarter million dollars

The debate scheduled for Tuesday night between Cotner and Wesleyan was forfeited by Wesleyan. Cotner's schedule will include a dual debate with Doane college, March 13, and one with Central City March 15. Out of conference debates will be held with Phillips university of Enid, Okla, and Montana university of Roseman, Montana. The negative team will meet Phillips on March 25 and April 10 the affirmative team will meet the Boseman team. Both debates will be held in Bethany. The Montana university team has lost but one debate in the last thirty-four debated. Cotner is the only school in the state conference who has an undefeated affirmative team.

Miss Ida Irvin of the editorial staff of the Christian board of publication will conduct a five days' course in religious educational work for vacation church schools during the week of March 10-14. The class periods will be from 3:30 to 5:30 each afternoon. The first period consists of a lecture course, the second, project work; and the third, demonstration work.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchelson of Unadilla visited their daughter, Marguerite, on Wednesday and attended the Cotner-Wesleyan game.

The St. Joseph Press announces that Clyde Sherman, former basketball captain at Cotner was picked as guard on the famous St. Joseph all-amateur basketball team.

A. H. Davenport of Chester, accompanied by his children, is visiting his daughter, Hazel, and attending the basketball tournament in Lincoln. Mr. Davenport has two sons playing with the Chester team.

President Cobbey delivered the principal address in the inauguration of his classmate, Rev. Ray Hunt, '09, at the First Christian church Wednesday night.

Leslie Smith '27 of York won the state oratorical contest in Hastings Saturday night Mr. Smith's subject was "'Right About Face," and he will represent Cotner at the inter-state contest to be held sometime this spring Creighton took second place and Wesleyan third.

Prof Norma Clark entertained nine members of her Camp Fire group at dinner in the Woman's building on Tuesday evening. These girls are now all students in the state university.

Yes—it can be done

THE Studebaker name guarantees to you the utmost in fine-car construction. For 72 years it has stood for quality, for honest workmanship, for square dealing.

It has always stood for style and class. Remember Studebaker carriages—supreme examples of fine coach building.

Consider our facilities—mark what we have at stake. $90,000,000 in assets, $50,000,000 in plants and equipment, $10,000,000 in body plants alone.

Note our multiplying sales—the sensation of Motordom.

It is fair to assume that we can and do build the finest cars and at Studebaker prices.

What is a fine car?

A fine car means the best materials any cost can buy. We use 35 formulas for steels, each known to be best for its purpose. We pay a premium of 15% on some to get the formulas exact.

All Studebaker models are equipped with Timken bearings. There are few cars in America, regardless of price, which equal ours on this point. In our Light-Six, for instance, we put more Timken bearings than are used in any competitive car, within $1,500 of its price.

* * *

A fine car means fine engineering. We spend $500,000 yearly on that department, employing 125 able men.

It means careful construction. We have 12,500 up-to-date machines. 1,120 of our operations are exact to 1/1000 of an inch. 360 are exact to one-half of 1/1000 of an inch.

It means infinite pains. For instance, we machine all surfaces of our crankshafts as was done in Liberty Airplane Motors. We are the only makers of cars at our prices who do this.

It means careful inspection. With us it means 30,000 inspections in the manufacture of each Studebaker car.

Luxury and beauty

Chase Mohair is used to upholster our closed bodies—made from the soft fleece of Angora goats.

We offer much extra equipment. Some of our Big-Sixes, for instance, have two nickel-plated bumpers, one or two extra disc wheels with cord tires, a courtesy light, a motometer, steel trunk, etc.

This factory, remember, is the ancient home of fine coach work.

* * *

A fine car must be enduring. A Studebaker Big-Six, built in 1918, has so far run 475,000 miles. That means 80 years of ordinary service.

Where savings come

Then how do the Studebakers so far undersell any comparable cars?

Because we build so many. The fixed costs are divided by enormous output—150,000 cars per year.

Because we build our own bodies. The saving to you on some types is up to $300 per car.

Because we make our own forgings, saving another profit there.

Because our plants are modern and efficient. We have spent $38,000,000 on them in the past five years.

Because we keep our men, make them partners, pay them large bonuses to stay. Changing men is expensive.

Because we conduct this business in every way on the best modern lines.

What buyers save

The Studebaker Light-Six Touring Car sells for $1,045. Under ordinary manufacturing conditions it would need to cost you from $1,200 to $1,400.

On our Special-Six the difference might be $400 to $700.

On our Big-Six type the difference may run into thousands, depending on the number produced. For this car compares only with the highest-priced cars in Europe and America. * * *

You will respect the Studebaker methods when you come to know them. You will admire the cars they create. You will delight in the values.

Remember that last year 145,167 fine-car buyers, after comparisons, chose the Studebaker models. So many people could not be wrong.

Learn why they did so before you buy a car at $1,000 or over. You owe that to yourself.

Go and See
Why Studebaker Leads

Prices begin at $1,025.

Go see the reasons for this trend. See why sales have almost trebled in three years. Why these cars have become the sensation of Motordom.

Consider our facilities—mark what we have at stake. $90,000,000 in assets, $50,000,000 in plants and equipment, $10,000,000 in body plants alone.

Note our multiplying sales—the sensation of Motordom.

It is fair to assume that we can and do build the finest cars and at Studebaker prices.

What is a fine car?

A fine car means the best materials any cost can buy. We use 35 formulas for steels, each known to be best for its purpose. We pay a premium of 15% on some to get the formulas exact.

All Studebaker models are equipped with Timken bearings. There are few cars in America, regardless of price, which equal ours on this point. In our Light-Six, for instance, we put more Timken bearings than are used in any competitive car, within $1,500 of its price.

* * *

A fine car means fine engineering. We spend $500,000 yearly on that department, employing 125 able men.

It means careful construction. We have 12,500 up-to-date machines. 1,120 of our operations are exact to 1/1000 of an inch. 360 are exact to one-half of 1/1000 of an inch.

It means infinite pains. For instance, we machine all surfaces of our crankshafts as was done in Liberty Airplane Motors. We are the only makers of cars at our prices who do this.

It means careful inspection. With us it means 30,000 inspections in the manufacture of each Studebaker car.

Luxury and beauty

It means a car to be proud of.

Chase Mohair is used to upholster our closed bodies—made from the soft fleece of Angora goats.

We offer much extra equipment.

Some of our Big-Sixes, for instance, have two nickel-plated bumpers, one or two extra disc wheels with cord tires, a courtesy light, a motometer, steel trunk, etc.

This factory, remember, is the ancient home of fine coach work.

* * *

A fine car must be enduring. A Studebaker Big-Six, built in 1918, has so far run 475,000 miles. That means 80 years of ordinary service.

Where savings come

Then how do the Studebakers so far undersell any comparable cars?

Because we build so many. The fixed costs are divided by enormous output—150,000 cars per year.

Because we build our own bodies. The saving to you on some types is up to $300 per car.

Because we make our own forgings, saving another profit there.

Because our plants are modern and efficient. We have spent $38,000,000 on them in the past five years.

Because we keep our men, make them partners, pay them large bonuses to stay. Changing men is expensive.

Because we conduct this business in every way on the best modern lines.

What buyers save

The Studebaker Light-Six Touring Car sells for $1,045. Under ordinary manufacturing conditions it would need to cost you from $1,200 to $1,400.

On our Special-Six the difference might be $400 to $700.

On our Big-Six type the difference may run into thousands, depending on the number produced. For this car compares only with the highest-priced cars in Europe and America. * * *

You will respect the Studebaker methods when you come to know them. You will admire the cars they create. You will delight in the values.

Remember that last year 145,167 fine-car buyers, after comparisons, chose the Studebaker models. So many people could not be wrong.

Learn why they did so before you buy a car at $1,000 or over. You owe that to yourself.

Go and See

Why Studebaker Leads

Prices begin at $1,025.

Go see the reasons for this trend. See why sales have almost trebled in three years. Why these cars have become the sensation of Motordom.

Something Old Something New

of Interest to Every Car Owner

Until very recently it was believed by by most people that to refinish a car properly required not only a considerable time, but the loss of the use of the car as well---moreover, it was expensive. It was an impossibility to do the work differently on account of the system employed. Now all has been changed---a new system is employed that is revolutionizing the car world.

How Much Will It Cost? How Long Will It Take?

The whole truth of the matter is that we are prepared to turn out your car complete with the BAKED ENAMEL PROCESS in 48 hours, at LESS COST than under the old system. If you think it sounds too good to be true, we assure you we are prepared to prove every statement we make.

This is the same system employed by the leading car manufacturers, the same practical and lasting finish you have admired on your fenders and hood. YOU CAN NOW HAVE THIS FINISH ON YOUR ENTIRE CAR. Mud spots, waterspots, or hot sun do not affect this wonderful BAKED ENAMEL PROCESS. Nothing but gasoline removed from your car and your motor cleaned and top dressed at no extra charge. ANY COLOR YOU DESIRE. Finish will last lifetime of the car.

Plant in charge of Mr. Robert Maine, formerly of St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Maine is the originator of the BAKED ENAMEL PROCESS and one of the most capable enamel men in the business.

WE INVITE YOU TODAY

to drive out and inspect one of the best equipped plants in the country. See our mammoth bake ovens. Capacity---8 cars per day.

STATE TEACHERS WILL DEAL WITH REAL PROBLEMS

Convention Topic to Be Nebraska's Educational Outlook.

Experts in Teacher Training and School Finance to Speak.

Problems of school revenues and teacher training standards in their practical aspects will be foremost in the consideration of delegates to the delegate convention of the Nebraska State Teachers' association which begins in Lincoln Wednesday and continues four days. The theme of the convention will be "Nebraska's Educational Outlook." Questions of school legislation to present to the coming session of the legislature will also be considered.

Speakers of state and national prominence have been chosen to present the different phases of the subjects which will be the hub of the meetings.

Commenting on the talent which has been secured for the convention, W. R. Pate, president of the association said this week:

"We are not bringing many from outside the state, but we are bringing experts in the subjects of teacher training and school finance, the two subjects which the executive committee decided should receive emphasis, and it will be well worth everyone's time to hear them."

It is expected by Everett M. Hosman, secretary of the association, that the coming convention will be the largest of the three thus far held. Approximately 3,000 teachers are expected during the four days.

The Nebraska State Teachers' association was organized in October 16, 1867, at Brownville, Neb., at a two-day session, according to records on file in the office of the state superintendent. The first meeting was under the direction of Robert W. Furnas, who was chairman. At that time there were but 500 teachers in the state, and the representation at the meeting was not large.

Since its organization the society has made a steady growth in membership but it has not been until since 1921, when the association was reorganized, that real and definite results have been accomplished. Membership in 1921 was about 4,000. Of these, records reveal, not more than 3,000 were being given definite benefits through the convention system. There were too many teachers in the remote parts of the state who could not attend.

Continued Advancement.

In 1921 the reorganization provided for district conventions with the same talent appearing at each. There are six districts and the convention city is so located that any teacher in the district can reach it easily. As a result of the district conventions the association membership has increased by leaps and bounds until now there are more than 9,000 teachers receiving the benefits of the gatherings, and as many are receiving the benefit of a direct personal service of the association.

During this period of great growth of the association the work of the secretary's office has increased in proportion. Where, three years ago, there was a small office force and not a great deal to do, it is said, there is now a force of four persons in addition to the secretary.

Not the least of the advance steps made by the association during the last three years was the starting of the Nebraska Educational Journal. From a small beginning, but two or three issues having been printed during the first year, during the last two years the Journal has grown to such proportions that it is recognized by national advertisers as one of the live educational papers of the United States. More than 12,500 copies are printed each month to serve its subscribers.

Improvement Is Aim.

The prime motive behind the teachers' society and the magazine which it controls, officers of the society say, is to improve the teachers in their own task that they may be better qualified to follow "the highest and most uplifting profession that mortal can follow."

Since 1867 when the association was first organized, there has been a great change in the teaching personnel of the state, statistics reveal, and there has been just as decided a change in the methods, quality, and standards of teaching.

In 1867, of the 500 persons who were teaching in Nebraska, 250 were men and 250 were women. Step by step the ratio has changed until today, of the 15,000 registered teachers in the state, 13,000 are women and but 2,000 are men. The great difference in the number of men and women is due, officers of the association say, to the fact that salaries have not been sufficient to induce men to enter the teaching profession unless he was quite willing to face "mere existence" until such time as he could forge ahead to a point where he could demand and receive better salary.

O. B. Hewett of Brownville was the first president of the association; O. H. Irish of Nebraska City was secretary, and J. A. McKenzie of Peru, was corresponding secretary.

MIDLAND COLLEGE NOTES.

The Phi Kappy literary society gave its first anniversary program and banquet Friday, Februray 29. The program was given in Clemmons hall in the afternoon and the banquet at the Pathfinder hotel in the evening. Among the former members who attended was Miss Marguerite Forsell, now a sophomore at the University of Nebraska.

Dr. O. H. Pannkoke from the United Lutheran church headquarters in New York city, is at Midland making preliminary preparation for the endowment campaign which will be carried on this spring. Dr. Pannkoke will have charge of the campaign.

A lovely "spring party" which turned out to be a linen shower for Miss Lula Bonderson, was given at the home of Mrs Willet Meyers Saturday afternoon, March 1. The hostesses were Misses Harriet Turner, Arthur Allen, Eugenia Krause, and Mrs. Meyers.

Eighteen "M" sweaters were awarded to warriors of the 1923 football gridiron, in chapel Tuesday morning, March 4. The presentation speech was made by Dean W. E. Tilberg, and the letter men were informally introduced by Coach Speer, ex-Captain Rose Elliott, Captain-elect Harley Tschudy, and the other senior men giving short talks. The "M" club banquet, which is one of the most enjoyable affairs of the year, was given at the Pathfinder in the evening. About thirty "M" men with their lady friends, together with President and Mrs. J. E. Krueger, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Tilberg, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Speer, and Mr and Mrs O. A. Keyser and Mrs. L. S. Keyser, attended the banquet.

Real work has again begun on the gymnasium, the latest addition being the beautiful carved entrance. The old building which stood slightly to the side is being torn down and carried away, leaving the view unobstructed.

President J. F. Krueger went to Oakland, Saturday afternoon, March 1, where he had charge of the funeral of Miss Naomi Larson who attended the Midland college during the years of 1921 and 1922. Miss Larson passed away suddenly at Bridgeport, where she was teaching in the commercial department of the high school. The sympathy of a great many friends is extended to her father, her sisters and her brother.

A very fine talk on "Folk Music" was given by Mrs Forrest L Shoemaker of the music department, at the Y. W. C. A. meeting Wednesday morning. Mrs. Shoemaker's talk was illustrated by the folk songs of different nations.

The first debate of the year was a dual meet with Grand Island college Thursday evening. The League of Nations was the subject discussed. Midland's affirmative team, composed of Raymond Dunkel, Altman Swihart, and Cecil Campbell, remained at home, while the negative team, Fred Weigman, Edmund Wood, and Johannes Klotsche, was in Grand Island.

WILL BUILD NEW BUSINESS BLOCK

H. L. Bradley Company to Erect Building at Seventeenth and South Streets.

The H. L. Bradley and company, dealers in groceries, fruits and meats at Fourteenth and South streets for the past five years, is erecting a new business block at the southeast corner of Seventeenth and South streets which will be its new location after April 1.

The new building will be an all modern structure, 92 feet by 45 feet, constructed of brick and stucco. The foundation is being built so in the near future another story can be added which will be used for apartments.

The Bradley and company grocery will operate one of the most modern stores of its kind in the city. Mr. Bradley stated Saturday afternoon, that when in the new location, the company would be enabled to give the residents of southeast Lincoln the best possible delivery. The new store will carry a full line of groceries, fruits and fresh meats. Owing to the enlarged quarters which will give the company twenty-five feet more frontage than it has at its present location, and the added service that will be given, the working force will also be increased.

WIGTON NOW WITH LINCOLN CLEANERS

Purchases Stock and Operate Plant With E. W. Truman, Jr.

Lee Wigton who for five years was connected with Gelhaar's Cleaners has purchased stock in the Lincoln Cleaning and Dye Works, 326 South Eleventh street, and the plant in the future will be operated by Mr. Wigton and E. W. Truman, jr., who retains his interest in the business and will remain as executive head. Mr. Wigton has assumed the management of the plant. He joined the company March 1.

Messrs. Truman and Wigton said Saturday that arrangements were being made to install new equipment in keeping with the progress of the cleaning industry. Equipment of the latest type costing several thousand dollars will be added, it was announced.

The Lincoln Cleaning & Dye Works is one of the oldest establishments of its kind in the middle west and has a wide reputation. It is regarded as one of the largest cleaning plants in this territory.

BUILDING WITH BRICK POPULAR

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Ferguson returned Saturday morning from a thirty day visit to California. At Los Angeles, Mr. Ferguson, who is president of the Yankee Hill Brick Manufacturing company, attended a convention of the Common Brick Manufacturers association. He reports that in Los Angeles, as all over the country, a great and growing interest in permanent construction is apparent. The newer and better homes are now largely being built of brick, with beautiful roofs of variegated clay tile.

Brick manufacturers from all over the United States were present at the convention, the association having chartered two special trains from Chicago to Los Angeles and return. They all report a heavier consumption of brick during the past year, than for many years previous.

Southern California is in the grip of a devastating drouth, which will cause the farming and cattle industry of the state a loss of millions of dollars, Mr. Ferguson said. Not only have the pastures been burned up for months so that the cattle are in many cases starving and the dry farmers practically out of business, but as there is practically no snow in the mountains against the usual heavy fall of four or five feet, from which to draw water for irrigated purposes during the coming spring and summer, it appears that many owners of irrigated lands will lose heavily.

At least two or three other deep rumblings were heard.

Whether fire is raging in the workings could not be determined by the rescue workers who first entered the man-way.

The mine, according to Carnly, underwent the usual daily inspection by a crew of three men early this morning and was then reported safe.

The first explosion came shortly after 9 o'clock. Word of the disaster spread rapidly through the small mining community and within half an hour, frenzied, hysterical women crowded about the mouth of the mine.

At 1:40 p. m., rescue workers reached the bodies. It was nearly two hours later before any of the rescuers were able to get beyond the mouth of the mine. The breaking of the fan shafts spread gloom among members of the rescue teams, and hopes of the rescue alive of any of the men rapidly waned.

As soon as word of the explosion reached the company's offices, which are located nearly two miles from the scene of the accident, hurry calls were sent to Salt Lake City and the surrounding mining camps of Carbon county, one of the greatest coal producing districts in the west, and all available doctors and nurses were rushed to the scene.

The mine is a so-called tunnel, or slope operation.

PETITIONS FOR JOHNSON FILED

All But Fourteen of Ninty-three Counties Represented in Endorsements.

Nominations for Delegates to G. O. P. Convention Also Handed in Saturday.

"It's a big job to get petitions printed, distributed, signed up, returned by mail, and filed with the secretary of state, with more than 4,100 names attached to them, all inside of two weeks' time when you get no help from the postmasters and the federal brigade and when you have to depend entirely on volunteer workers who have no political axes to grind," said Frank A. Harrison, manager of the Hiram Johnson campaign in Nebraska, after delivering to the secretary of state Saturday afternoon a big bunch of petitions for the presidential candidate and those running with him for election as delegates to the republican national convention.

Out of 93 counties in Nebraska, all but fourteen were represented in the Johnson filing. Some of those missing are remote counties in northern and western Nebraska where mail connection with Lincoln are poor.

"We feel very much gratified over the result of our brief cavass," Harrison declared. "It completely explodes the claim of the Coolidge managers that Johnson is not as strong as he was four years ago, when he carried the Nebraska primary by more than 20,000 plurality."

Explanatory Letter to Pool.

REORGANIZE CLUB OF G. O. P. WOMEN

The Republican Woman's club is again existent, with Mrs. H. C. M. Burgess as chairman; Mrs. C. E. Burton as vice chairman; Miss Clarissa Delano, secretary; and Mrs. C. L. Hall, treasurer.

Re-organization was effected Saturday afternoon at a luncheon of one hundred women at the University club. Formation of constitution and by-laws was left to a committee which the chairman will appoint. No men will be admitted as members of the club, it was voted.

Miss Sarah T. Muir, Miss Adelheit Dettmann and Mrs. H. H. Wheeler were speakers.

Women should not form a party for themselves, declared Miss Muir. Separate political clubs are all right, but women's interests are too colsely bound with those of men to isolate themselves in a third party.

Miss Dettmann urged that women use the political power which has been given them.

When men admit that our political power is unlimited," said she, "and when we take that admission and do nothing with it, it is a pretty bad state of affairs."

There should be no distinction of sex in things political, asserted Mrs. Wheeler. Men's interests can no more be separated from those of women in politics than can the right arnt be separated from the left in kitchen work.

The following members of the executive committee were appointed Saturday by the chairman: Mesdames H. M. Bushnell, H. C. Lindsay, E. T. Ball, Petrus Peterson, E. B. Perry, C. F. Reavis, A. W. Field, and W. S. Whitten.

MEXICO REVOLT ENTERS PROBE OF DAUGHERTY

Daugherty committee has involved former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, Edwin L. Doheny, Harry F. Sinclair and other oil interests in the alleged conspiracy, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, democrat of Montana, announced. Seven former agents of the department of justice have been summoned for the opening session, Wheeler said, to reveal details of the alleged plot.

The Daugherty investigation, Wheeler added, also will be directed into the story that General Wood was offered convention votes in Chicago in 1920 by the late Jake Hamon, Oklahoma oil king, in return for a place in his cabinet, if elected. Wheeler declared he had issued subpoenas for Leonard Wood, jr., and other witnesses to determine whether the offer, when General Wood refused it, was repeated to Daugherty who acted as campaign manager for the late President Harding.

Wheeler Has Evidence.

Greater interest centered, however, on the alleged Mexican revolt plot. Wheeler announced evidence was in his possession showing that Fall, Doheny, and Sinclair had met the Mexican revolutionists at a Pacific coast city, but the plot was finally consummated in New York City. This evidence, he added, will be made public next week.

The department of justice was linked to the alleged revolt, Wheeler said, through evidence showing it had refused to act against the conspirators and had released quantities of war munitions seized while enroute to the Mexican rebels.

The plot, it was said, will be bared through the testimony of former agents for the department of justice, including David Gershon of San Diego.

The committee also called John Camp, a Mexican secret service operative. According to evidence in Wheeler's possession, Gershon seized three truckloads of ammunition and rifles at Nestor, Cal., in 1921, while it was enroute to Mexico. A revolt had been started at the time in Lower California by Estaban Cantu. Gershon arrested three men, but, according to Wheeler's evidence, the trio was released a week later, and the seized munitions returned on orders from Washington. Evidence showed this ammunition was later used in a battle.

No Action Taken.

Americans were linked in the plot by evidence given by Mexican secret service operatives, working under the direction of President Obregon. These Mexican agents, it was said, turned their evidence over to the department of justice, but no action was ever taken on it. It was also charged that the department's apathetic attitude enabled the revolutionists to openly recruit on the Pacific coast without fear of punishment.

wrangled whether Bennett should be forced to testify and finally Senator Ladd, republican of North Dakota, acting chaidman, ordered a vote. The decision was unanimous, with Senator Adams, democrat of Colorado, not voting.

Bennett said he had discussed with Curtis the editorial policy to be followed by the Washington Post in handling the Teapot Dome investigation.

"I told Curtis that I had received a message from McLean who wanted him to advise us how the Post should handle the oil matter. McLean had confidence in Curtis' judgment. Curtis advised us to print all of the official news, but none of the scandalous stories."

"Was that all there was to the conference," interposed Dill, democrat of Washington.

"Oh, no," replied Bennett. "We discussed other matters, but I do not think it pertinent."

The committee again voted to force Bennett to testify.

"Senator Curtis told me," Bennett then continued, "the new president had asked him for advice regarding his duties. He advised, he said, that the president should get rid of a certain cabinet officer."

"Did he mention the cabinet officer?" asked Dill.

Prepare Roster of Republican Workers

A roster of 100,000 republican workers in Nebraska, including both men and women, is being made up at the republican state headquarters in preparation for the coming campaign. Secretary T. W. Bass expects to have that many names enrolled on his records within a short time. It will be the biggest and most widely distributed organization ever got together by any political party in this state, says Mr. Bass.

The lists will be made up by congressional districts and will extend down into all the counties and voting precincts. This plan of organization is one which has been worked out in conjunction with the republican national committee. The same thing is being done in other states. Postmasters helped to furnish the names of men and women whose services the state committee expects to utilize during the campaign.

Final Round Scores in State Tourney

Class B.

BEATRICE, 20; Genoa Indians, 12.

Beatrice, twice winner of the state title in former years, walked off with class B honors Saturday night, defeating the Genoa Indians, 20 to 12.

The Redskins looked like winners in the first quarter, which ended with the Genoa five on the heavy side of a 6 to 4 score. Beginning early in the second quarter the Indians abandoned their efforts to team the ball down the court and resorted to the old Indian game of heaving wildly at the hoop. The result was that the steady Beatrice teamwork, with Roland in the saddle, piled up a healthy lead for the Gage county five.

Roland was the Beatrice scoring ace with seven baskets. Worley's floor work was a bright spot in the Beatrice exhibition. Blackfish and Henry played the best game for the Indians.

Beatrice high gained a 11-8 advantage over the Indians during the first half. The two teams battled on fairly even terms throughout the first two quarters of the game, the Indians leading at the cloes of the first period by a 6-4 score and Beatrice coming from behind late in the second quarter to set the pace when the gun was fired ending the first half.

During the two openin gperiods the Indians spent all their efforts on offensive play, Roland constantly getting back of the Genoa defense for fairly easy baskets. Roland caged four field goals during the first half.

The Indians opened the third quarter by shooting at the basket from every portion of the court. It was the old style Indian game. The Redskins' shots went wild, while Beatrice kept at its steady game, Roland caging most of his shots from close-in, because of the faltering Genoa defense.

Blackfish scored a long shot just as the third quarter ended with Beatrice holding a 16 to 10 lead.

Beatrice had everything its own forts to work, the ball down the court way during the fourth quarter, the Redskins having completely their ef- Score:

The H. L. Bradley and company, dealers in groceries, fruits and meats at Fourteenth and South streets for the past five years, is erecting a new business block at the southeast corner of Seventeenth and South streets which will be its new location after April 1.

The new building will be an all modern structure, 92 feet by 45 feet, constructed of brick and stucco. The foundation is being built so in the near future another story can be added which will be used for apartments.

The Bradley and company grocery will operate one of the most modern stores of its kind in the city. Mr. Bradley stated Saturday afternoon, that when in the new location, the company would be enabled to give the residents of southeast Lincoln the best possible delivery. Owing to the enlarged quarters which will give the company twenty-five feet more frontage than it has at its present location, and the added service that will be given, the working force will also be increased.

WIGTON NOW WITH LINCOLN CLEANERS

Purchases Stock and Operate Plant With E. W. Truman, Jr.

Lee Wigton who for five years was connected with Gelhaar's Cleaners has purchased stock in the Lincoln Cleaning and Dye Works, 326 South Eleventh street, and the plant in the future will be operated by Mr. Wigton and E. W. Truman, jr., who retains his interest in the business and will remain as executive head. Mr. Wigton has assumed the management of the plant. He joined the company March 1.

Messrs. Truman and Wigton said Saturday that arrangements were being made to install new equipment in keeping with the progress of the cleaning industry. Equipment of the latest type costing several thousand dollars will be added, it was announced.

The Lincoln Cleaning & Dye Works is one of the oldest establishments of its kind in the middle west and has a wide reputation. It is regarded as one of the largest cleaning plants in this territory.

BUILDING WITH BRICK POPULAR

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Ferguson returned Saturday morning from a thirty day visit to California. At Los Angeles, Mr. Ferguson, who is president of the Yankee Hill Brick Manufacturing company, attended a convention of the Common Brick Manufacturers association. He reports that in Los Angeles, as all over the country, a great and growing interest in permanent construction is apparent. The newer and better homes are now largely being built of brick, with beautiful roofs of variegated clay tile.

Brick manufacturers from all over the United States were present at the convention, the association having chartered two special trains from Chicago to Los Angeles and return. They all report a heavier consumption of brick during the past year, than for many years previous.

Southern California is in the grip of a devastating drouth, which will cause the farming and cattle industry of the state a loss of millions of dollars, Mr. Ferguson said. Not only have the pastures been burned up for months so that the cattle are in many cases starving and the dry farmers practically out of business, but as there is practically no snow in the mountains against the usual heavy fall of four or five feet, from which to draw water for irrigated purposes during the coming spring and summer, it appears that many owners of irrigated lands will lose heavily.

At least two or three other deep rumblings were heard.

Whether fire is raging in the workings could not be determined by the rescue workers who first entered the man-way.

The mine, according to Carnly, underwent the usual daily inspection by a crew of three men early this morning and was then reported safe.

The first explosion came shortly after 9 o'clock. Word of the disaster spread rapidly through the small mining community and within half an hour, frenzied, hysterical women crowded about the mouth of the mine.

At 1:40 p. m., rescue workers rewere broken. It was nearly two hours later before any of the rescuegs were able to get beyond the mouth of the mine. The breaking of the fan shafts spread gloom among members of the rescue teams, and hopes of the rescue alive of any of the men rapidly waned.

As soon as word of the explosion reached the company's offices, which are located nearly two miles from the scene of the accident, hurry calls were sent to Salt Lake City and the surrounding mining camps of Carbon county, one of the greatest coal producing districts in the west, and all available doctors and nurses were rushed to the scene.

The mine is a so-called tunnel, or slope operation.

PETITIONS FOR JOHNSON FILED

Nominations for Delegates to G. O. P. Convention Also Handed in Saturday.

"It's a big job to get petitions printed, distributed, signed up, returned by mail, and filed with the secretary of state, with more than 4,100 names attached to them, all inside of two weeks' time when you get no help from the postmasters and the federal brigade and when you have to depend entirely on volunteer workers who have no political axes to grid," said Frank A. Harrison, manager of the Hiram Johnson campaign in Nebraska, after delivering to the secretary of state Saturday afternoon a big bunch of petitions for the presidential candidate and those running with him for election as delegates to the republican national convention.

Out of 93 counties in Nebraska, all but fourteen were represented in the Johnson filing. Some of those missing are remote counties in northern and western Nebraska where mail connection with Lincoln are poor.

"We feel very much gratified over the result of our brief cavass," Harrison declared. "It completely explodes the claim of the Coolidge managers that Johnson is not as strong as he was four years ago, when he carried the Nebraska primary by more than 20,000 plurality."

The folowing communication to Secretary of State Pool accompanied the Johnson filing:

REORGANIZE CLUB OF G. O. P. WOMEN

The Republican Woman's club is again existent, with Mrs. H. C. M. Burgess as chairman; Mrs. C. E. Burton as vice chairman; Miss Clarissa Delano, secretary; and Mrs. C. L. Hall, treasurer.

Re-organization was effected Saturday afternoon at a luncheon of one hundred women at the University club. Formation of constitution and by-laws was left to a committee which the chairman will appoint. No men will be admitted as members of the club, it was voted.

Women should not form a party for themselves, declared Miss Muir. Separate political clubs are all right, but women's interests are too colsely bound with those of men to isolate themselves in a third party.

Miss Dettmann urged that women use the political power which has been given them.

When men admit that our political power is unlimited," said she, "and when we take that admission and do nothing with it, it is a pretty bad state of affairs."

There should be no distinction of sex in things political, asserted Mrs. Wheeler. Men's interests can no more be separated from those of women in politics than can the right arm be separated from the left in kitchen work.

The following members of the executive committee were appointed Saturday by the chairman: Mesdames H. M. Bushnell, H. C. Lindsay, E. T. Ball, Petrus Peterson, E. B. Perry, C. F. Reavis, A. W. Field, and W. S. Whitten.

Daugherty committee has involved former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, Edwin L. Doheny, Harry F. Sinclair and other oil interests in the alleged conspiracy, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, democrat of Montana, announced. Seven former agents of the department of justice have been summoned for the opening session, Wheeler said, to reveal details of the alleged plot.

The Daugherty investigation, Wheeler added, also will be directed into the story that General Wood was offered convention votes in Chicago in 1920 by the late Jake Hamon, Oklahoma oil king, in return for a place in his cabinet, if elected. Wheeler declared he had issued subpoenas for Leonard Wood, jr., and other witnesses to determine whether the offer, when General Wood refused it, was repeated to Daugherty who acted as campaign manager for the late President Harding.

Wheeler Has Evidence.

Greater interest centered, however, on the alleged Mexican revolt plot. Wheeler announced evidence was in his possession showing that Fall, Doheny, and Sinclair had met the Mexican revolutionists at a Pacific coast city, but the plot was finally consummated in New York City. This evidence, he added, will be made public next week.

The department of justice was linked to the alleged revolt, Wheeler said, through evidence showing it had refused to act against the conspirators and had released quantities of war munitions seized while enroute to the Mexican rebels.

The plot, it was said, will be bared through the testimony of former agents for the department of justice, including David Gershon of San Diego.

The committee also called John Camp, a Mexican secret service operative. According to evidence in Wheeler's possession, Gershon seized three truckloads of ammunition and rifles at Nestor, Cal., in 1921, while it was enroute to Mexico. A revolt had been started at the time in Lower California by Estaban Cantu. Gershon arrested three men, but, according to Wheeler's evidence, the trio was released a week later, and the seized munitions returned on orders from Washington. Evidence showed this ammunition was later used in a battle.

No Action Taken.

Americans were linked in the plot by evidence given by Mexican secret service operatives, working under the direction of President Obregon. These Mexican agents, it was said, turned their evidence over to the department of justice, but no action was ever taken on it. It was also charged that the department's apathetic attitude enabled the revolutionists to openly recruit on the Pacific coast without fear of punishment.

wrangled whether Bennett should be forced to testify and finally Senator Ladd, republican of North Dakota, acting chaldman ,ordered a vote. The decision was unanimous, with Senator Adams, democrat of Colorado, not voting.

Bennett said he had discussed with Curtis the editorial policy to be followed by the Washington Post in handling the Teapot Dome investigation.

"I told Curtis that I had received a message from McLean who wanted him to advise us how the Post should handle the oil matter. McLean had confidence in Curtis' judgment. Curtis advised us to print all of the official news, but none of the scandalous stories."

"Was that all there was to the conference," interposed Dill, democrat of Washington.

"Oh, no," replied Bennett. "We discussed other matters, but I do not think it pertinent."

The committee again voted to force Bennett to testify.

"Senator Curtis told me," Bennett then continued, "the new president had asked him for advice regarding his duties. He advised, he said, that the president should get rid of a certain cabinet officer."

"Did he mention the cabinet officer?" asked Dill.

Prepare Roster of Republican Workers

A roster of 100,000 republican workers in Nebraska, including both men and women, is being made up at the republican state headquarters in preparation for the coming campaign. Secretary T. W. Bass expects to have that many names enrolled on his records within a short time. It will be the biggest and most widely distributed organization ever got together by any political party in this state, says Mr. Bass.

The lists will be made up by congressional districts and will extend down into all the counties and voting precincts. This plan of organization is one which has been worked out in conjunction with the republican national committee. The same thing is being done in other states. Postmasters helped to furnish the names of men and women whose services the state committee expects to utilize during the campaign.

Radio Programs to Be Broadcasted by Bible Association

The International Bible Students association, Brooklyn, N. Y. is installing two sets of radio broadcasting equipment for use in presenting educational programs. The larger of the two setts will be ready for operation in the near future.

The station will broadcast scientific news, news of inventions, matters of political interest, musical programs, health, hygiene reports and general world news. The program will feature Bible lectures by Judge Rutherford, the president of the association and a number of his associates.

Final Round Scores in State Tourney

Class B.

BEATRICE, 20; Genoa Indians, 12.

Beatrice, twice winner of the state title in former years, walked off with class B honors Saturday night, defeating the Genoa Indians, 20 to 12.

The Redskins looked like winners in the first quarter, which ended with the Genoa five on the heavy side of a 6 to 4 score. Beginning early in the second quarter the Indians abandoned their efforts to team the ball down the court and resorted to the old Indian game of heaving wildly at the hoop. The result was that the steady Beatrice teamwork, with Roland in the saddle, piled up a healthy lead for the Gage county five.

Roland was the Beatrice scoring ace with seven baskets. Worley's floor work was a bright spot in the Beatrice exhibition. Blackfish and Henry played the best game for the Indians.

Beatrice high gained a 11-8 advantage over the Indians during the first half. The two teams battled on fairly even terms throughout the first two quarters of the game, the Indians leading at the cloes of the first period by a 6-4 score and Beatrice coming from behind late in the second quarter to set the pace when the gun was fired ending the first half.

During the two openin gperiods the Indians spent all their efforts on offensive play, Roland constantly getting back of the Genoa defense for fairly easy baskets. Roland caged four field goals during the first half.

The Indians opened the third quarter by shooting at the basket from every portion of the court. It was the old style Indian game. The Redskins' shots went wild, while Beatrice kept at its steady game, Roland caging most of his shots from close-in, because of the faltering Genoa defense.

Blackfish scored a long shot just as the third quarter ended with Beatrice holding a 16 to 10 lead.

ESTABLISH AUTO ENAMELING PLANT

Robert Maine of St. Louis, Mo., originator of the "baked enamel process" used in refinishing automobiles, has moved to Lincoln and is now established in business at Nineteenth and Vine streets. His establisment is known as the National Auto Enamel company and is under his direct supervision.

The striking feature of this new refinishing process which is being used by yleading automobile manufacturers of the country, is the short time which is required to complete the entire process, and its durability which will last the life time of a car.

The company is now prepared to complete the entire process of the baked enamel refinish in thirty-eight hours at a smaller cost than under the old plan of refinishing. Mud spots waterspots or the scorching rays of the sun on hot summer days do not in the least affect this new enamel process and the same luster that is so much admired in a new automobile is reproduced in this enamel.

Until recently it was believed by most people that to refinish a car properly required not only a considerable time, but the loss of the use of the car as well. Under the old system of refinishing it was an impossibility to complete such a process in a short time, but the new process that is now wbeing employed is revolutionizing the car world.

The National Auto Enamel company is extending an invitation to the public to drive out to Nineteenth and Vine streets to inspect the entire new plant and see the mammoth bake ovens from which eight cars per day can be finished.

Bryan Will Boost "Jefferson Week"

Governor Bryan expects to issue a proclamation asking Nebraska citizens to assist in the observance of "Jefferson week," April 6 to 13, at which time a nationwide canvass will take place to raise funds for purchasing Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, and making it a permanent memorial to the author of the declaration of independence. The project is being sponsored by a committee selected for the purpose.

Razing of Old Putnam Building at Eleventh And O Streets Goes Ahead With Great Speed

It is planned to have the new Gold & Company store building, which will occupy this site at Eleventh and O streets, finished and ready for occupancy in the late fall months. This mean that a new construction record in Lincoln must be made. The photo shows the rapid work of razing the old building. The scaffolding in the foreground extends to a height of 150 feet, from which a pipe line gravity flow of concrete can be directed at will to any part of the new Gold building, which will be ninety-five feet from ground to roof.

ESTABLISH AUTO ENAMELING PLANT

Robert Maine of St. Louis, Mo., originator of the "baked enamel process" used in refinishing automobiles, has moved to Lincoln and is now established in business at Nineteenth and Vine streets. His establisment is known as the National Auto Enamel company and is under his direct supervision.

The striking feature of this new refinishing process which is being used by leading automobile manufacturers of the country, is the short time which is required to complete the entire process, and its durability which will last the life time of a car.

The company is now prepared to complete the entire process of the baked enamel refinish in thirty-eight hours at a smaller cost than under the old plan of refinishing. Mud spots waterspots or the scorching rays of the sun on hot summer days do not in the least affect this new enamel process and the same luster that is so much admired in a new automobile is reproduced in this enamel.

Until recently it was believed by most people that to refinish a car properly required not only a considerable time, but the loss of the use of the car as well. Under the old system of refinishing it was an impossibility to complete such a process in a short time, but the new process that is no wbeing employed is revolutionizing the car world.

The National Auto Enamel company is extending an invitation to the public to drive out to Nineteenth and Vine streets to inspect the entire new plant and see the mammoth bake ovens fro mwhich eight cars per day can be finished.

Bryan Will Boost "Jefferson Week"

Governor Bryan expects to issue a proclamation asking Nebraska citizens to assist in the observance of "Jefferson week," April 6 to 13, at which time a nationwide canvass will take place to raise funds for purchasing Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, and making it a permanent memorial to the author of the declaration of independence. The project is being sponsored by a committee selected for the purpose.

LISTEN FOLKS!

While we tell you a true "fairy" tale of 100%; fair and square, used car dealing. In December, 1919, we sold an Overland car to Mr Gus Spencer of Lincoln. In February, 1920, we sold him car No 2, an Overland On January 29, 1923, we sold him car No 3 Buick 4 And yesterday, March 8, 1924, we sold him car No 4, a Buick 6. Now it's a "cinch" you can't sell a man 4 used cars for his personal use over a period of 4 years, unless you did a 100% square deal and satisfaction. Therefore, you can come here and buy or trade with confidence And bear in mind, all the above valued customers got the benefit of our "No Finance Charge" plan of easy terms, which we started 5 years ago

You deal direct with us—confidentially, no bank; no finance corporation ,no red tape; and,

LISTEN FOLKS!

While we tell you a true "fairy" tale of 1000% fair and square, used car dealing. In December, 1919, we sold an Overland car to Mr. Geo. A. Spencer of Lincoln. In February, 1920, we sold him car No. 2, an Overland. On January 29, 1923, we sold him car No. 3 Buick 4. And yesterday, March 8, 1924, we sold him car No. 4, a Buick 6. Now it's a "cinch" you can't sell a man 4 used cars for his personal use over a period of 4 years, unless you give him 100% square deal and satisfaction. Therefore, you can come here and buy or trade with confidence. And bear in mind, all of our valued customers enjoy the benefit of our "No Finance Charge" plan of easy terms, which we started 5 years ago.

You deal direct with us—confidentially; no bank; no finance corporation; no red tape; and,
NO FINANCE CHARGES.

Full-Size BALLOON TIRES

Applied Promptly at Lowest Cost

Without delay or trouble and at the lowest cost you can have your car equipped with Firestone Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords—the original, full-size low-pressure tires.

Firestone not only makes the full-size Balloon tires but the rims and wheels as well. We get them in a complete unit all ready to apply to your car. Nowhere else can you obtain the well-engineered equipment, the thoroughly organized and intelligent service, and the low prices we are prepared to offer.

Every part of this Changeover Unit is Firestone-built—according to the rigid standards of quality and workmanship for which the Firestone name stands.

The small diameter wheels and rims, built by the Rim Division of Firestone, assure the utmost in the performance of the completely assembled tire, rim and wheel. This equipment prevents any possibility of body and fender clearance difficulties, or any other mechanical interference.

Inasmuch as Firestone is the largest producer of full-size Balloons in the country, the Firestone Rim Division is building the complete Changeover Unit on a large production basis to keep pace with the rapidly increasing demand. That means lowered costs—hence a lower price to you. The Rim Plant, one of the largest in the world, has unexcelled facilities for the production of rims and wheels of the highest quality. Its development and manufacture of the small diameter service wheel means much to the success of the Balloon Tire.

Until you have ridden on these full-size Balloons, mounted on these specially designed rims and wheels—you cannot realize the great stride forward that has been made in motoring comfort, safety and car conservation.

Firestone pioneered and developed the full-size Balloon Tire. And it was the special Firestone process of gum-dipping that made the Balloon tire practical. Many prominent car manufacturers have already adopted Firestone full-size Balloons. In fact, Balloon-type tires on present wheels have not proved acceptable to any car maker.

Drive in today—let us show you what Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords will do for your car and how quickly and economically we can apply them.

THE ARCHITECT'S DRAWING OF THE CAPITOL AS IT FIRST APPEARED

SOUTHWEST CORNER OF NINTH AND O STREETS WAY BACK IN 1869

NORTHEAST CORNER OF TENTH AND O STREETS IN 1869

BY LYNNELLE GREER.

Here is Lincoln—a half century ago.

A dot on the plains, gradually but surely replacing the romance of the herded buffalo, waving wild grass, and copper skinned men of the primitive, with the romance of thriving American institutions,—the business house, the church and the home.

There was not much to break a skyline of pale blue. Just a few squat brick or clapboard buildings.

Lincoln—the same village that is to become, in ten decades, a bustling junior metropolis. Lincoln, that is to have tall buildings to, break through that line of blue; Lincoln, that is to spread over a plain and become a greater abiding place for the sons of the hardy men who planted it on the fertile, mesa and watched it grow; a living, pulsating infant.

Shaggy Little Village.

A shaggy little Lincoln it was—a Lincoln that gave a hazy promise of something, no one knew just what, although there were many prophecies.

The most popular of the surmises was that the little village would one day be a great metropolis in a great state, but only the most optomistic of its few citizens believed that; those of little faith made no secret of the opinion that Lincoln would be nothing but a tank town forever and ever.

True it was that there was not much to go on but the imagination when it came to visualizing Lincoln fifty years hence, a city of a 60,000 population, exclusive of suburbs, street cars, and other modern conveniences and conveyances which merely had been thought of in those days.

Had Few Comforts.

There were no railroads. That in itself tells much. It tells that what little in the way of comforts the people had were those that could be brought in a bundle over the shoulder, or in a covered wagon; there were many cultured, well educated people, men and women with vision, and with courage enough to blaze the trail, to open the paths which led to the fulfillment of their dreams.

Such a man was A. S. Godfrey who came to Lincoln in 1870 on the second train which came to the village from Omaha. Mr. Godfrey started a lumber yard at Ninth and Q streets, but in the latter part of 1871 moved from that location to some place between O and N street, on Eighth.

Time went, on, three years of it, Mr. Godfrey felt the need, or rather felt Lincoln's need of an organization to further its aims and ambitions.

Organizes Commercial Club.

In February of 1874 this man, one of the leaders of the village, invited a number of other prominent men of the town to a meting which was held in the mayor's office.

The Board of Trade.

The business men and professional men attended the meeting and there it was that a permanent organization was perfected, an organization which was to be known as the "Board of Trade at Lincoln," and A. S. Godfrey was elected president.

The first meeting of this assembly was held March 16, 1874, and various plans for furthering the interests of the town. Apparently the meetings were not held regularly, for the records show the next one to be May 26, '74. It was at this meeting that the first important step was taken to make Lincoln a commercial center. A committee recommended that a bonus of $2,000 be paid for the removal of a plow factory to Lincoln. Whether the plow factory ever came or not is not known. June 22, of the same year, there was another meeting, and then all records ceased until January 16, 1880.

Whether this first board of trade kept on with the meetings and the secretary failed to do his duty, or whether the failure to produce immediate results discouraged the members of the organization will probably never be known.

A Reorganization.

In January of 1880 a number of the same men and some new members re-organized under the name of the Lincoln Board of Trade.

J. J. Imhoff was elected president, and was assisted during his administration by I. S. Raymond, first vice president; Eli Plummer; second vice president; C. M. Leighton, treasurer, and E. E. Edwards, secretary.

The meetings were held in the old Commerical hotel which was located at Ninth and Q streets, and some very interesting meetings they were.

At that time Lincoln was worse than any of the small towns of today, for there were no devices with which water could be pumped into the house, there were no electric light plants nearby from which the town could purchase current, there was absolutely nothing, but a well, if you were fortunate, and kerosene lamps. If there wasn't a well in your own yard, in all probabilities you carried water from your neighbor's well.

Plans for Waterworks.

It was the twenty-sixth of January, the next meeting following his election that the president addressed the board on the importance of securing water works. Plans were discussed pro and con, and the matter was considered for about three months before a committee was appointed to confer with the mayor and the city council. This committee was composed of T. P. Kennard, W. W. Wilson, Isaac Raymond, Samuel G. Owen and H. D. Hathaway.

The next discussion concerning the water works took place the following March, when Charles O. Whedon offered a resolution that "it is the sense of this meeting that the city of Lincoln should build, own and operate a water works."

Thomas P. Kennard then raised a question as to whether bonds to the amount of $75,000, could be legally voted, and it would take at least that much money to even make a beginning. At the next meeting, Walter J. Lamb reported that the city had the power and authority to issue bonds to at least that amount.

Forced to Action.

The city of Lincoln finally succeeded in having a water works, but it took a great deal of time. The council and mayor were slow to act, so slow, in fact, that they had to be prodded a bit by this august assembly of business and professional men. They were told that the members of the council and the mayor were merely the servants of the people and that they "should yield a willing recognition and obedience to expressed wishes of taxpayers.

That did the work and the mayor and council adopted a plan for a public well to be used for water supply.

That was the first big thing that the Board of Trade put across, but it had many other things on its calendar which would be equally beneficial to Lincoln.

One of these, and the next to be taken up by the board was the matter of free delivery of mail service. Up until this time the citizens had been calling at the postoffice for their mail, but the population was increasing, and the board considered that it was no more than due a town which was to develop as Lincoln should, to have the mail delivered to the home.

This idea raised another question which was also to mean much to the city, this was finally shaped into a resolution adopted to request the city council to adopt the Philadelphia plan of numbering the streets.

Numbering the Streets.

It was the Lincoln Board of Trade that put this through, too, and it was the members of this organization who decided that O street should be the dividing point north and south, and that First street should be the starting point from the west to the east.

Whether there were enough streets to use all of the alphabet, and how far the numerals went no one seems to know, but even though the population was close to 13,000 at that time, the town did not spread over a great deal of territory.

Another important question which came up in 1882 was the matter of freight rates which were being discussed with the Missouri Pacific railroad.

The Burlington road was the first one to enter Lincoln coming in in 1870. The Union Pacific ran its first train into the town in 1979, the Chicago, Northwestern and the Missouri Pacific both came in 1886 and the Rock Island came in 1892.

Freight rates seemed as much of a thorn in the sides of the citizens then as they do now, and were equally much discussed, for they were the bone of contention with the Missouri Pacific officials four years prior to the road's entrance into Lincoln.

Then this organization sent out inducements to some of the breweries and distilleries in Iowa, and offered to guarantee them against loss providing the prohibitory law passed in this state. The breweries and distilleries came, and while at the present time it may sem like the one black spot on an otherwise worthy group of men, at that time it was considered nothing but a very natural thing.

In 1888, the year that breweries and distilleries were talking about coming to this city, the Beat-em-all Barbwire company also wanted to know what inducements Lincoln had to offer, and besides these two industries, a woolen mill and a linen mill were also considering moving their manufacturing plants here.

The Santa Fe.

The year previous, the Lincoln Board of Trade discussed steps to brings the Santa Fe into the town, but there must have been some dissatisfaction somewhere, for the road never came.

BY LYNNELLE GREER.

Here is Lincoln—a half century ago.

A dot on the plains, gradually but surely replacing the romance of the herded buffalo, waving wild grass, and copper skinned men of the primitive, with the romance of thriving American institutions,—the business house, the church and the home.

There was not much to break a skyline of pale blue. Just a few squat brick or clapboard buildings.

Lincoln—the same village that is to become, in ten decades, a bustling junior metropolis. Lincoln, that is to have tall buildings to, break through that line of blue; Lincoln, that is to spread over a plain and become a greater abiding place for the sons of the hardy men who planted it on the fertile mesa and watched it grow; a living, pulsating infant.

Shaggy Little Village.

A shaggy little Lincoln it was—a Lincoln that gave a hazy promise of something, no one knew just what, although there were many prophecies.

The most popular of the surmises was that the little village would one day be a great metropolis in a great state, but only the most optomistic of its few citizens believed that; those of little faith made no secret of the opinion that Lincoln would be nothing but a tank town forever and ever.

True it was that there was not much to go on but the imagination when it came to visualizing Lincoln fifty years hence, a city of a 60,000 population, exclusive of suburbs, street cars, and other modern conveniences and conveyances which merely had been thought of in those days.

Had Few Comforts.

There were no railroads. That in itself tells much. It tells that what little in the way of comforts the people had were those that could be brought in a bundle over the shoulder, or in a covered wagon; there were many cultured, well educated people, men and women with vision, and with courage enough to blaze the trail, to open the paths which led to the fulfillment of their dreams.

Such a man was A. S. Godfrey who came to Lincoln in 1870 on the second train which came to the village from Omaha. Mr. Godfrey started a lumber yard at Ninth and Q streets, but in the latter part of 1871 moved from that location to some place between O and N street, on Eighth.

Time went, on, three years of it, Mr. Godfrey felt the need, or rather felt Lincoln's need of an organization to further its aims and ambitions.

Organizes Commercial Club.

In February of 1874 this man, one of the leaders of the village, invited a number of other prominent men of the town to a meting which was held in the mayor's office.

The Board of Trade.

The business men and professional men attended the meeting and there it was that a permanent organization was perfected, an organization which was to be known as the "Board of Trade at Lincoln," and A. S .Godfrey was elected president.

The first meeting of this assembly was held March 15, 1874, and various plans for furthering the interests of the town. Apparently the meetings were not held regularly, for the records show the next one to be May 26, '74. It was at this meeting that the first important step was taken to make Lincoln a commercial center. A committee recommended that a bonus of $2,000 be paid for the removal of a plow factory to Lincoln. Whether the plow factory ever came or not is not known. June 22, of the same year, there was another meeting, and then all records ceased until January 15, 1880.

Whether this first board of trade kept on with the meetings and the secretary failed to do his duty, or whether the failure to produce immediate results discouraged the members of the organization will probably never be known.

A Reorganization.

In January of 1880 a number of the same men and some new members re-organized under the name of the Lincoln Board of Trade.

J. J. Imhoff was elected president, and was assisted during his administration by I. S. Raymond, first vice president; Eli Plummer; second vice president; C. M. Leighton, treasurer, and E. E. Edwards, secretary.

The meetings were held in the old Commerical hotel which was located at Ninth and Q streets, and some very interesting meetings they were.

At that time Lincoln was worse than any of the small towns of today, for there were no devices with which water could be pumped into the house, there were no electric light plants nearby from which the town could purchase current, there was absolutely nothing, but a well, if you were fortunate, and kerosene lamps. If there wasn't a well in your own yard, in all probabilities you carried water from your neighbor's well.

Plans for Waterworks.

It was the twenty-sixth of January, the next meeting following his election that the president addressed the board on the importance of securing water works. Plans were discussed pro and con, and the matter was considered for about three months before a committee was appointed to confer with the mayor and the city council. This committee was composed of T. P. Kennard, W. W. Wilson, Isaac Raymond, Samuel G. Owen and H. D. Hathaway.

The next discussion concerning the water works took place the following March, when Charles O. Whedon offered a resolution that "it is the sense of this meeting that the city of Lincoln should build, own and operate a water works."

Thomas P. Kennard then raised a question as to whether bonds to the amount of $75,000, could be legally voted, and it would take at least that much money to even make a beginning. At the next meeting, Walter J. Lamb reported that the city had the power and authority to issue bonds to at least that amount.

Forced to Action.

The city of Lincoln finally succeeded in having a water works, but it took a great deal of time. The council and mayor were slow to act, so slow, in fact, that they had to be prodded a bit by this august assembly of business and professional men. They were told that the members of the council and the mayor were merely the servants of the people and that they "should yield a willing recognition and obedience to expressed wishes of taxpayers.

That did the work and the mayor and council adopted a plan for a public well to be used for water supply.

That was the first big thing that the Board of Trade put across, but it had many other things on its calendar which would be equally beneficial to Lincoln.

One of these, and the next to be taken up by the board was the matter of free delivery of mail service. Up until this time the citizens had been calling at the postoffice for their mail, but the population was increasing, and the board considered that it was no more than due a town which was to develop as Lincoln should, to have the mail delivered to the home.

This idea raised another question which was also to mean much to the city, this was finally shaped into a resolution adopted to request the city council to adopt the Philadelphia plan of numbering the streets.

Stageland's Drabness Transformed Into World of Make-Believe by Deft Hand of Lincoln Man

Somewhere between the heaven and the earth of the theatre the bridge hangs

Not a bridge that one stands on at midnight to contemplate the passing moments and the futility of life

But a color lined painters' bridge

Up there, it is as though one belong to the earth but was not of it As though one gazed into a void, hearing but unseeing

On the Stage Below.

Above the slush, slush of mixing paints, above the slap slap of the brush comes the words of the make-believe people on the stage—shapeless, formless, bodyless except for a voice—a throaty tenor singing "coming ba-a ck from Et-t-t-a-a-a-leeee" a joke of an acrobat—and a thud—did he fall?—the soft clug, clug of padded shoes skipping over the stage

A destroyer of illusion—the bridge. Through a hole in the canvas may be seen the ropes and the pulleys and the sand bags that make the make believe world possible That little world is not the great and mighty affair that it seems from the far side of the footlights—its only a play place, dependent upon all manner of inanimate mechanism for its effect

Illusion Is Destroyed

And upon the bridge itself is illusion destroyed For there is the moated castle that on the program is Italy in the fifteenth century There is the balcony and the moonlit garden where a Romeo wooes his Juliet There is the storm tossed ocean the teetering little boats that probably is the Mediterranean for a yachting scene

Close they are disillusioned by proximity, ruined by familiarity The ocean is only splotched blue paint, the garden but a flat piece of canvas, ordinary enough without its lights and the castle a none too regular mass of gray tints

Yet the paint construction of a castle or a balcony or of a pink and green garden is a fascinating thing They grow so easily, and appear with so little trouble on the canvas—a few twists of the wrist—a knowing wrist—and there is a scene, ready to form the background in a theatre, ready to do its share to change the make believe into the real

But One Scene Painter

There is only one scene painter in Lincoln, D V Manrose, and he designs and paints all the theatre drops in Lincoln for two of the 'movie' houses the Lyric and the Rialto, and the Liberty and the Orpheum theatres Mr Manrose painted his first drop for L M Garman, manager of the Princess Amusement company, eighteen years ago, and that drop is still in existence and now and again it appears upon one of the stages For the past five or six years Mr Manrose has worked continuously for this company

The most of the scenery on the Orpheum stage including the curtain is the product of Mr Manrose's brush as are also the drops and the curtain at the Liberty Each week Mr Manrose paints one or two drops one for the Lyric and one for the Rialto For the more elaborate drops, those which will become permanent scenery Mr Manrose devotes three weeks or a month of time to painting particularly the interiors where a finished effect is necessary The ones that will be used but for a week or two, at the most he can complete in a like number of days

Cooperates With Garman

Mr Garman and Mr Manrose cooperate in planning a drop but Mr Manrose is the one who actually designs and executes the scene desired For a setting for the special act shown each week at the two cinema houses Mr Garman is inspired by a number of things The season a holiday, a scene in a picture a magazine cut, a scene in the photodrama may suggest a setting for the specialty He suggests to Mr Manrose the idea the setting is to represent, occasionally suggesting a color combination, and draws a rough sketch—Mr Garman says it is very rough—and tells Mr Manrose to decorate his drop

The actual designing the execution and the perfection of the scene is done by Mr Manrose He has spent his entire life in this work here and in other places painting scenery for road shows and he can paint anything from a Roman arena to a drop for 'Flames of Youth" He can put a Louis XV garden an English country scene, or Fifth avenue with equal ease on canvas

Easier Than It Looks

Scene painting is easier than it appears—to stand and watch

The drop—which is the canvas—which is hung in front of the bridge—is in a huge wooden frame the stage employees putting it there for the painting The bridge about thirty feet above the stage, is some fifty feet long and is so narrow that two people pass with care and discretion—for there's principally atmosphere between you and thirty feet below—and is located back stage at the Liberty theatre

One side is a long shelf, plentifully daubed with paint, and decorated with buckets of many colors and whole families of brushes Beneath the shelf, Mr Manrose keeps barrels of all kinds of luscious sounding paints adapted for water colors, such as Celestial blue Italian pink burnt orange and royal purple On the other side the canvas

Uses Canvas Several Times

The canvas is really Indian head muslin and can be used four or five times without laundrying After that number of Greek temples and Spanish patios have been superimposed upon each other it must be washed thoroughly For the Lyric drops, the canvas is 27 feet long and 18 feet high and for the Rialto the drops are 28 by 21 feet The lighting system and the depth of the stage at the Rialto is better than at the Lyric and Mr Manrose generally does an exterior setting for there For the Lyric, he uses interior designs with more drapery and incidental trimming

In a theatre we do not concliously study the front drops and the back drops and the sets, for they are but a background for the play, yet were they missing we should be more than a little conscious of the lack. The painting of the drops is an art and Lincoln has but one artist of this kind D V Manrose, who paints the palaces and hovels, the drawing rooms and the gardens, for two of the motion picture houses and two of the other houses In the larger picture Mr Manrose is on his "bridge" at the Liberty painting a drop for use this week.

Mr Manrose begins operations by drawing a rough little sketch with charcoal on the canvas This week he painted a horizon scene, with many towers and high buildings, in the background as the focus for myriad light rays The sketch was as crude as a child's attempt to pictorialize a more or less unknown idea—but Mr Manrose's idea was not more or less unknown and from the sketch grew a fantastic drop that, even at close range created a likeable effect

Must Be Flexible

The canvas is run up and down in its frame by means of pulleys and ropes, and it must be moved about three times to come within the reach of the painter After the sketch, comes the sizing On fresh canvas, to prepare it, or on old canvas to cover up the paint Mr Manrose treats it to a mixture of ordinary glue jewelers' whiting, and glycerine to make the canvas flexible

This week the background motif was blue a lighter blue sky with a darker blue horizon For the sky Mr Manrose mixed whiting Italian blue—the skies of Italy—French zinc water and glycerine glue With a life size house painting brush, he swabbed at the canvas with rough uneven strokes to give it a more realistic effect

To paint in the horizon, Mr. Manrose mixed Celestial blue ultra marine water, and gelatine, but the horizon looked a little pale, in comparison with the sky Accordingly, he mixed in some Prussian blue of a deep shade and the horizon came out after due painting that deep rich black blue that buildings have at a distance under the night lights

Horizons More Difficult

Horizons are horizons, but they aren't so easy to make, when one has to imagine them at a distance of forty or sixty feet, and when one is really making them but a wrist's distance away The secret is 'squinting" —just squint your eyes and the towers and spires fade respectably away, so that one can imagine the famous sky line of New York City from the distance of the Hudson away

A six foot straight edge is used in making horizons, or most anything that requires a level side or top Mr Manrose outlines his spires and towers first, with a small brush and his straight edge then he washes them in in flat color with the larger brush He did not feel that his skyline was very realistic or well balanced so he studied it for some time then added a tower or two and decorated a few of the small ones for better effect

To make the back drop harmonize with the idea of the film of this week Mr Manrose wanted to create a bizarre effect To do this, after the drop was dry he painted in varicolored light rays, freely interspersed with huge bubble-like apparitions in all the colors of the spectrum The two created a fantastic fanciful imaginative effect as accentuated and ultra-modern as the theme of the picture it represents

Talks About Work

Of his work, Mr Manrose says

The majority of the road shows use scenery painted with dyes, because it is much lighter to handle and can be folded and packed in trunks for transportation

However, the interior settings and the set pieces that have to be mounted on frames are painted in water colors because it makes them opaque and keeps the light from shining through from behind

"Scenic artists do not class scene painting as a trade, but as a profession It takes years of study and practical experience to become a competent scenic artist

Picks Ideas from Air

'To be a scenic artist, you must be able to pick an idea out of the air, really, and reproduce it on canvas While working, a scene painter may come to a stopping place after everything seems to have gone wrong. The only thing to do is to leave the picture for the time However, our minds are always on it, and at any minute a flash may come in which we see the completed picture

'Oftentimes in this profession it takes hours of time to study out a design that takes but a few moments to paint"

Illusion Is Destroyed.

And upon the bridge itself is illusion destroyed. For there is the moated castle that on the program is Italy in the fifteenth century. There is the balcony and the moonlit garden where a Romeo wooes his Juliet. There is the storm tossed ocean, the teetering little boats that probably is the Mediterranean for a yachting scene.

Close they are, disillusioned by proximity, ruined by familiarity. The ocean is only splotched blue paint, the garden but a flat piece of canvas, ordinary enough without its lights, and the castle a none too regular mass of gray tints.

Yet, the paint construction of a castle, or a balcony, or of a pink and green garden is a fascinating thing. They grow so easily, and appear with so little trouble on the canvas—a few twists of the wrist—a knowing wrist—and there is a scene, ready to form the background in a theatre, ready to do its share to change the make believe into the real.

But One Scene Painter.

There is only one scene painter in Lincoln, D. V. Manrose, and he designs and paints all the theatre drops in Lincoln for two of the "movie" houses, the Lyric and the Rialto, and the Liberty and the Orpheum theatres. Mr. Manrose painted his first drop for L. M. Garman, manager of the Princess Amusement company, eighteen years ago, and that drop is still in existence and now and again it appears upon one of the stages. For the past five or six years, Mr. Manrose has worked constinuously for this company.

The most of the scenery on the Orpheum stage, including the curtain, is the product of Mr. Manrose's brush, as are also the drops and the curtain at the Liberty. Each week Mr. Manrose paints one or two drops, one for the Lyric and one for the Rialto. For the more elaborate drops, those which will become permanent scenery, Mr. Manrose devotes three weeks or a month of time to painting, particularly the interiors, where a finished effect is necessary. The ones that will be used but for a week or two, at the most, he can complete in a like number of days.

Cooperates With Garman.

Mr. Garman and Mr. Manrose cooperate in planning a drop, but Mr. Manrose is the one who actually designs and executes the scene desired. For a setting for the special act shown each week at the two cinema houses, Mr. Garman is inspired by a number of things. The season, a holiday, a scene in a picture, a magazine cut, a scene in the photodrama may suggest a setting for the specialty. He suggests to Mr. Manrose the idea the setting is to represent, occasionally suggesting a color combination, and draws a rough sketch—Mr. Garman says it is very rough—and tells Mr. Manrose to decorate his drop.

The actual designing, the execution, and the perfection of the scene is done by Mr. Manrose. He has spent his entire life in this work, here, and in other places, painting scenery for road shows, and he can paint anything from a Roman arena to a drop for "Flames of Youth." He can put a Louis XV garden, an English country scene, or Fifth avenue with equal ease on canvas.

Easier Than It Looks.

Scene painting is easier than it appears—to stand and watch.

The drop—which is the canvas—which is hung in front of the bridge—is in a huge wooden frame, the stage employees putting it there for the painting. The bridge, about thirty feet above the stage, is some fifty feet long and is so narrow that two people pass with care and discretion—for there's principally atmosphere between you and thirty feet below—and is located back stage at the Liberty theatre.

One side is a long shelf, plentifully daubed with paint, and decorated with buckets of many colors and whole families of brushes. Beneath the shelf, Mr. Manrose keeps barrels of all kinds of luscious sounding paints, adapted for water colors, such as Celestial blue, Italian pink, burnt orange, and royal purple. On the other side, the canvas.

Uses Canvas Several Times.

The canvas is really Indian head muslin and can be used four or five times without laundrying. After that number of Greek temples and Spanish patios have been superimposed upon each other, it must be washed thoroughly. For the Lyric drops, the canvas is 27 feet long and 18 feet high and for the Rialto the drops are 28 by 21 feet. The lighting system and the depth of the stage at the Rialto is better than at the Lyric and Mr. Manrose generally does an exterior setting for there. For the Lyric, he uses interior designs with more drapery and incidental trimming.

Mr. Manrose begins operations by drawing a rough little sketch with charcoal on the canvas. This week he painted a horizon scene, with many towers and high buildings, in the background, as the focus for myriad light rays. The sketch was as crude as a child's attempt to pictorialize a more or less unknown idea—but Mr. Manrose's idea was not more or less unknown and from the sketch grew a fantastic drop that, even at close range, created a likeable effect.

Must Be Flexible.

The canvas is run up and down in its frame by means of pulleys and ropes, and it must be moved about three times to come within the reach of the painter. After the sketch, comes the sizing. On fresh canvas, to prepare it, or on old canvas to cover up the paint, Mr. Manrose treats it to a mixture of ordinary glue, jewelers' whiting, and glycerine to make the canvas flexible.

This week, the background motif was blue, a lighter blue sky with a darker blue horizon. For the sky Mr. Manrose mixed whiting, Italian blue—the skies of Italy—French zinc, water, and glycerine glue. With a life size house painting brush, he swabbed at the canvas with rough uneven strokes to give it a more realistic effect.

To paint in the horizon, Mr. Manrose mixed Celestial blue, ultramarine, water, and gelatine, but the horizon looked a little pale, in comparison with the sky. Accordingly, he mixed in some Prussian blue of a deep shade and the horizon came out, after due painting, that deep, rich, black-blue that buildings have at a distance under the night lights.

Horizons More Difficult.

Horizons are horizons, but they aren't so easy to make, when one has to imagine them at a distance of forty or sixty feet, and when one is really making them but a wrist's distance away. The secret is "squinting"—just squint your eyes and the towers and spires fade respectably away, so that one can imagine the famous sky line of New York City from the distance of the Hudson away.

A six foot straight edge is used in making horizons, or most anything that requires a level side or top. Mr. Manrose outlines his spires and towers first, with a small brush and his straight edge, then he washes them in in flat color with the larger brush. He did not feel that his skyline was very realistic or well balanced, so he studied it for some time, then added a tower or two, and decorated a few of the small ones for better effect.

To make the back drop harmonize with the idea of the film of this week, Mr. Manrose wanted to create a bizarre effect. To do this, after the drop was dry, he painted in varicolored light rays, freely interspersed with huge bubble-like apparitions in all the colors of the spectrum. The two created a fantastic, fanciful, imaginative effect as accentuated and ultra-modern as the theme of the picture it represents.

Talks About Work.

Of his work, Mr. Manrose says:

"However, the interior settings and the set pieces that have to be mounted on frames are painted in water colors because it makes them opaque and keeps the light from shining through from behind.

"Scenic artists do not class scene painting as a trade, but as a profession. It takes years of study and practical experience to become a competent scenic artist.

Picks Ideas from Air.

"To be a scenic artist, you must be able to pick an idea out of the air, really, and reproduce it on canvas. While working, a scene painter may come to a stopping place after everything seems to have gone wrong. The only thing to do is to leave the picture for the time. However, our minds are always on it, and at any minute a flash may come in which we see the completed picture.

"Oftentimes in this profession it takes hours of time to study out a design that takes but a few moments to paint."

University Notes

Teachers in the Lincoln schools and members of the Lincoln Parent Teachers association were guests in the art gallery Tuesday evening, when President S. Mills Hayes of the Nebraska Art association made the address. Dr. Benjamin F. Bailey and Director Paul H. Grummann of the school of fine arts spoke Wednesday evening in the gallery, when teachers and pupils of the Lincoln high school were present. The advanced students in the school of fine arts staged exhibition work Thursday evening in the gallery with drawings from living models, and in the class room with modelling and other forms of applied art. Mrs. Elsie Ziese Miles, instructor in modelling and drawing, gave a gallery talk Friday in the exhibit room. Mrs. Ziese is represented in the exhibit by two canvases.

The regular monthly engineering convocaton will be held Thursday, March 13 at 11 o'clock in the Social Science auditorium. The speaker will be Major Alexander Forward, secretary-manager of the American Gas association, and former chairman of the Virginia public utilities commisson. His subject is "The Gas Industry," and his address will be illustrated by lantern slides. The lecture is open to the public.

"Labor Turnover in Nebraska Department Stores" is the title of a pamphlet published by the committee on business research of the college of business administration. Miss Nancy V. Pennoyer, '22, who took her master's degree in 1923, collected the original data and rendered valuable assistance to the committee in preparing a transcript for publication. The booklet tells the cost of such turnover, not only to the employer and to the employe, but also to the individual and to the state, as well as the extent and percentage of "hiring and firing."

The Nebraska rifle team won six of its nine matches last week, with a score of 3761. Other schools against which Nebraska fired scored as follows: North Dakota, 3770; Minnesota, 3795; Missouri, 3778; Arkansas, 3688; Kansas State Agricultural college, 3701; Kansas, 3506; South Dakota state, 3708; Iowa, 3805; and North Dakota Agricultural college, 3735. The women's team, scoring 949, was matched against Dakota which made 918; Missouri, 967; South Dakota, 968; and the University of Kansas, 924.

Three members of the faculty of the School of Fine Arts are represented in the exhibition of the Nebraska Art association: Miss Hermine Stellar has three canvasses; Andres Haugseth has three canvases in very modern style, and Mrs. Elsie Ziese Miles has two paintings.

Garnet Holme, who has just returned from England, visiting especially the home of Shakespeare, and who ha had extensive experience in open-air theatres on the Pacific coast has arrived here to be special coach for the University Players in their presentation of "Macbeth."

The regular monthly meeting of Sigma Xi will be held in the general lecture room of Bessey hall Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Prof. J. C. Russell of the agronomy department will speak on "The Problem of Soil Fertility in Nebraska." Data are now on hand to show that organic matter and nitrogen are being lost from estern Nebrask farms.

Dr. Lida B. Earhardt of the Teachers college entertained the normal-training seniors at her department last Sunday afternoon, when Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Sealock, Miss Margaret Hughes, and Miss Cecilia Hoehne of the Teachers college and Archie L. Burnham, state normal training inspector, were also present. Dean Sealock told of the Chicago convention of the Nebraska Educational association.

Dr. Robert D. Rands, '13, spent last summer investigating American sources of crude rubber, travelling for the United States department of agriculture in the central and northern parts of South America and in the West Indies. He has now returned to Washington to the forestry service.

Clyde C. McDowell, '97, B. Sc. '05' has been awarded the prize from the Charles A. Coffin foundation for an unusual contribution to the efficiency or progress of the General Electric company. His particular contribution was a standard package for renewal parts, and is said to be a great aid in time-saving for the company. Mr. McDowell has been with the company in Brooklyn fo reighteen years.

Dr. Homer L. Shartz, Ph. D. '05, is on his second phytogeographic exploring trip in tropical Africa.

Carl Hartley, '07, has returned from Java, and is now working in the office of forest pathology, bureau of plant industry, in the department of agriculture at Washington.

Prof. L. B. Tuckerman, professor of physics at the University of Nebraska from 1906 to 1916, was one of the members of the committee which passed on the safety of the battleship Shenandoah before she made her first voyage. He has just been given a government appropriation of $10,000 and a three-year commission to study the structural points of the Shenandoah with a view to their further use. He is connected with the bureau of standards of Washington.

"Robbing the soil" is the charge against Hiram Hippocket in a mock trial farce sent out by the Nebraska co-operative extension work in agriculture and home economics particularly for use in farm bureaus of the state. By improper farming methods, the defendant is accused of detracting from the soil, which is his not permanently but only in trust for future generations.

M. N. Lawritson, state extension agent in dairying, told farmers at the feeding school near Norfolk that grinding feed for dairy cows is a paying proposition, and told of the ideal ration for milking cows; equal parts of ground corn, oats, barley, and good alfalfa hay. Good food and good shelter are the two points he mentions in successful dairying.

Gallery talks are given in the art gallery of the university Thursdays at 11 o'clock and Sundays at 5 o'clock by Prof. Paul H. Grummann, director of the School of Fine Arts. Professor Grummann will continue these addresses through the Nebraska Art association exhibit, which lasts through March.

Look for the Label

Like every successful product, Kraft Cheese has many imitators. But they can imitate only the size and shape of the package, the quality and flavor is quite beyond them. It is flattering of course to have Kraft Cheese imitated, for only the best is ever imitated, but it's sometimes very disappointing to our customers. So to look for a tin foil loaf is not enough, you should see that it carries the Kraft trademark.

Four varieties: American, Pimento, Swiss and Brick, sold by the slice, pound or 5-pound loaf at about the price of the best bulk cheese.

Lincoln's Busy Store O Street Near Eleventh Growing, Growing, Ever Growing

GOLD & CO.

Three Lincoln Babies, Born on February 29, Will Have Birthday Every Four Years

BY LULU MAE COE.

Lincoln had three new comers a week ago Friday—permanent residents.

Yes, the city's population was increased exactly three.

Their pounds were less than the fingers of your ten hands—but each pound was greeted with awe and uplifted hands. No new poupds on a Dempsey could have been greeted with greater acclaim—nay, not half so much. For it would be only the public that would gaze upon a Dempseyan pound, but it's a charmed, personal little circle that watches the newcomers' weights.

Exclusive? Yes!

They don't say much—in fact each of the new residents has only one person in the whole wide world that can understand what he wants. Only one ear for each of them is attuned to his feeble complaint or arrogant plea.

They didn't come with a fanfare of trumpets and the world didn't stop in its sorrow and gaiety when they arrived—nobody declared a holiday—but there was much rejoicing.

They were exclusive little circles into which the newcomers were received, yet the boundaries of each are the boundaries of all. They are bounded by infinite love and loyalty and patience and hope and forgiveness. They are filled with soothing arms and sympathetic hearts and gentle voices and understanding eyes. They are a retreat, a surcease, an end of the road after trial and disappointment and pain.

No Manners At All.

The newcomers are frightfully small and crackable and bendable and breakable. They weave endless, aimless motion patterns in the air with restless hands and spread wide and toothless mouths into meaningless cavities.

And nobody ever taught 'em any manners; for they stare and stare and stare—and sometimes they go right to sleep when company's present. Nobody ever gave 'em an etiquette book, for they yawn nonchalantly when you're performing your very best for them and they are just as apt to shrug a chilly shoulder when you grin at 'em and try your hardest to be pleasant and agreeable.

Slaves and Vassals.

They toil not, neither do they spin, yet Solomon in his very best glory never had so much attention. Slaves at their bidding speed and vassals and serfs are always at their side. They may not have marble halls, but who cares for a bit of cold marble when you can have all the fixings that go with it—when you can be a Cleopatra and Queen of Sheba and the Prince of Wales all in one?

Crinkly hands, soft-eyed, pink-toed—these funny little people don't mind showing their ten toes in the least,—these residents came into our midst, as welcome as the warm sunlight of last Friday, as cordially received as the hint of warmth in the air, and as satisfying as the first spring hat.

There's a long, long life before these newcomers. They are permanent residents, but they aren't in the census books, nor the directory, nor the telephone book. They don't know much of the world, for they are not very travelled, and they have a very limited outlook.

But we are not slandering them!

Leap Year Babies.

We are proud of them for knowing so little.

For they are Lincoln's leap year babies. Lincoln's three new residents who came to stay for ever and ever and ever so long on February 29.

So far their only world is their mothers' arms and a rosy horizon that might be the pink blanket that gets in one's eyes or the delicate color in a bassinet. The world's a tiny little place when one is just a week old, and it doesn't extend much beyond the strong side of a crib and is mainly made up of a little food and a lot of sleep and a whole heap of love.

The city's not done much for them yet, but think what these infants might do for the city.

What About the Third?

There's two future presidents and a—a—maybe a third—for in a couple of scores of years who can tell what the ladies will be doming. Maybe women presidents will be as common as Easter dress parades and as ordinary as summer cyclones.

At present, they've given very little thought to the future. They are satisfied with the attention they are receiving, and are not worrying about future homage when there's so much of it right at hand waiting for them. Adoring grandmothers and unicles and aunts stand about; not to mention the proud but awed father, only waiting a glance from—his—or Her—Majesty's lazy eyes and longing to smother the indifferent ruler with care and kindness.

There are Leap years proposals and beaus and brides and tales—and now there's Leap Year babies. Babies that come on that odd day of the year that got stuck into the calendar somehow or other. Babies who will always get a little attention, for having chosen that day to be born.

No Parties or Cakes.

They leaped into the world on a peculiar day and thereby leaped into some fame, but they will—worse luck—be always leaping birthdays. No parties, no cakes, no candles, no ice cream, no embellishments for the perfect birthday—not for four years or four years after that or for interminable periods of four years.

For—who can have a big cho-clate cake with three candles and who can blow 'em out with one puff—if there's no birthday to celebrate. Who can have a party—if there's nothing to have a party for? Who can have a birthday—when there isn't any birthday? The rest of us common mortals who were born in June and December and April will object, right away quick object.

It can't be done—unless three doting mammas put something over on us, and give Horace and Jeanette and Jerild a party on a day they shouldn't. That, wouldn't be ethical, really, but, knowing mothers, it isn't at all doubtful that when Horace and Jeanette and Jerild get to the spot where they don't have any more birthdays—they can count just as many cakes and red candles as Betty, born on February 28, and Billy, born March 1.

Ladies First.

As to the Leap Year babies—Ladies first—

Her name is going to be Jeanette, but whether it will be Something Jeanette, or Jeanette Something, her mother was not prepared to say. We dare believe that the family can not agree on the only February 29 girl in Lincoln, and that a council or two will have to be held before a decision is reached as to whether she will be Something Jeanette or Jeanette Something.

This half-named child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augusteur Boudreau, who live at 2100 N street. Jeanette is a fat little rascal and is the champ-een baby in weight of the day, having between ten and eleven pounds to her credit upon arrival. That's not Jeanette's only claim to fame, however, but she has another that is almost as good. She is the very youngest of ten girls—just think of having your ninth oldest sister's dress descend to you. There's never been a boy in the family and Jeanette has carried out the family tradition.

Horace Robert Stiltzer hasn't ten sisters or ten brothers or ten anything, for he is the very first and only child in his family. He is making his home at St. Elizabeth's hospital at present in a nursery with a half dozen others, but Horace will make his home with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Stilzer at 1226 South Twelfth street.

The Hungry Baby.

Horace weighed seven and one-half pounds when he arrived in this vale of tears but he bids fair to equal Jeanette's record in a short time. His family has already picked out the exact position the son and heir is to have his chair in the White house in about 1966—but about all that Horace does is to sleep in the warm nursery except when taken strolling by his pretty nurse.

The third member of the trio will probably always have a hungry life—at least he will always have a good appetite—for he stopped in just in time for lunch—11:45 o'clock to be exact. This baby picked out the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerild Colman at 3645 Washington street for his abode.

Dainty and pink and white as he is at present, he has a regular man size name, for he's been named for his father, and will be Jerild Sizer Colman, too. Oh yes, a junior should be attached on there—his proud new mother was so afraid we would forget the jr.—and we all but did. Jerild weighed seven and one-quarter pounds—just a quarter less than Horace—at 11:45 February 29. He is the first grandson in the family—the first new member of this family, incidentally—and as such is the center of attention.

Count 'em—one, two, three—Lincoln's leap year babies, who leaped into this world of tears on February 29. They all insisted on going to sleep while they had their picture taken, but not because they were ashamed of their eyes, but because it was so much fun to be lazy and not have anybody prodding them into heavy action.

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Graduate Nurse

This is to tell you how modern science has solved an old problem in a new way.

It is a way which brings security, immaculacy, peace of mind to the world of women. It has been adopted by 8 women out of 10 in the better walks of life.

The best way to learn all about it is by actual trial, and this is offered free. Just mail me the coupon below.

The explanation

Now, under the name of Kotex, it offers protection, comfort and practical convenience to women everywhere.

Important facts

Kotex absorbs instantly, 16 times its own weight, and holds it. It is 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton.

It is pure, white, compact and light-weight. It is most easily disposed of, in a way which prevents embarrassment.

Most important of all, it assures immaculate daintiness at all times, under all circumstances. Think what this means to all fastidious women!

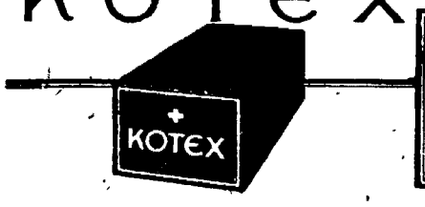

Free sample proves it

The best way to learn what Kotex is and what it will do is to mail the coupon for the free sample. It is sent by return mail in a perfectly plain package, accompanied by a special book. This book was written by a doctor to explain the value of Kotex from a medical standpoint.

As I know professionally as well as personally the overwhelming value of Kotex, I urge you to accept this free trial at once. Your request will be treated in strictest confidence. Fill out and mail the coupon today.

Kotex may be had at all drug and department stores, in two sizes, Kotex Regular and Kotex-Super. Also dispensed from Kotex cabinets in rest rooms.

Three Lincoln Babies, Born on February 29, Will Have Birthday Every Four Years

BY LULU MAE COE.

Lincoln had three new comers a week ago Friday—permanent residents.

Yes, the city's population was increased exactly three.

Their pounds were less than the fingers of your ten hands—but each pound was greeted with awe and uplifted hands. No new pounds on a Dempsey could have been greeted with greater acclaim—nay, not half so much. For it would be only the public that would gaze upon a Dempseyan pound, but it's a charmed, personal little circle that watches the newcomers' weights.

Exclusive? Yes!

They don't say much—in fact each of the new residents has only one person in the whole wide world that can understand what he wants. Only one ear for each of them is attuned to his feeble complaint or arrogant plea.

They didn't come with a fanfare of trumpets and the world didn't stop in its sorrow and gaiety when they arrived—nobody declared a holiday—but there was much rejoicing.

They were exclusive little circles into which the newcomers were received, yet the boundaries of each are the boundaries of all. They are bounded by infinite love and loyalty and patience and hope and forgiveness. They are filled with soothing arms and sympathetic hearts and gentle voices and understanding eyes. They are a retreat, a surcease, an end of the road after trial and disappointment and pain.

No Manners At All.

The newcomers are frightfully small and crackable and bendable and breakable. They weave endless, aimless motion patterns in the air with restless hands and spread wide and toothless mouths into meaningless cavities.

And nobody ever taught 'em any manners, for they stare and stare and stare—and sometimes they go right to sleep when company's present. Nobody ever gave 'em an etiquette book, for they yawn nonchalantly when you're performing your very best for them and they are just as apt to shrug a chilly shoulder when you grin at 'em and try your hardest to be pleasant and agreeable.

Slaves and Vassals.

They toil not, neither do they spin, yet Solomon in his very best glory never had so much attention. Slaves at their bidding speed and vassals and serfs are always at their side. They may not have marble halls, but who cares for a bit of cold marble when you can have all the fixings that go with it—when you can be a Cleopatra and Queen of Sheba and the Prince of Wales all in one?

Crinkly hands, soft-eyed, pink-toed—these funny little people don't mind showing their ten toes in the least,—these residents came into our midst, as welcome as the warm sunlight of last Friday, as cordially received as the hint of warmth in the air, and as satisfying as the first spring hat.

There's a long, long life before these newcomers. They are permanent residents, but they aren't in the census books, nor the directory, nor the telephone book. They don't know much of the world, for they are not very travelled, and they have a very limited outlook.

But we are not slandering them!

Leap Year Babies.

We are proud of them for knowing so little.

For they are Lincoln's leap year babies. Lincoln's three new residents who came to stay for ever and ever and ever so long on February 29.

So far their only world is their mothers' arms and a rosy horizon that might be the pink blanket that gets in one's eyes or the delicate color in a bassinet. The world's a tiny little place when one is just a week old, and it doesn't extend much beyond the strong side of a crib and is mainly made up of a little food and a lot of sleep and a whole heap of love.

The city's not done much for them yet, but think what these infants might do for the city.

What About the Third?

There's two future presidents and a—a—maybe a third—for in a couple of scores of years who can tell what the ladies will be doming. Maybe women presidents will be as common as Easter dress parades and as ordinary as summer cyclones.

At present, they've given very little thought to the future. They are satisfied with the attention they are receiving, and are not worrying about future homage when there's so much of it right at hand waiting for them. Adoring grandmothers and uncles and aunts stand about, not to mention the proud but awed father, only waiting a glance from His—or Her—Majesty's lazy eyes and longing to smother the indifferent ruler with care and kindness.

Count 'em—one, two, three—Lincoln's leap year babies, who leaped into this world of tears on February 29. They all insisted on going to sleep while they had their picture taken, but not because they were ashamed of their eyes, but because it was so much fun to be lazy and not have anybody prodding them into heavy action.

There are Leap years proposals and beaus and brides and tales—and now there's Leap Year babies. Babies that come on that odd day of the year that got stuck into the calendar somehow or other. Babies who will always get a little attention, for having chosen that day to be born.

No Parties or Cakes.

They leaped into the world on a peculiar day and thereby leaped into some fame, but they will—worse luck—be always leaping birthdays. No parties, no cakes, no candles, no ice cream, no embellishments for the perfect birthday—not for four years or four years after that or for interminable periods of four years.

For—who can have a big cho-clate cake with three candles and who can blow 'em out with one puff—if there's no birthday to celebrate. Who can have a party—if there's nothing to have a party for? Who can have a birthday—when there isn't any birthday? The rest of us common mortals who were born in June and December and April will object, right away quick object.

It can't be done—unless three doting mammas put something over on us, and give Horace and Jeanette and Jerild a party on a day they shouldn't. That wouldn't be ethical, really, but, knowing mothers, it isn't at all doubtful that when Horace and Jeanette and Jerild get to the spot where they don't have any more birthdays—they can count just as many cakes and red candles as Betty, born on February 28, and Billy, born March 1.

Ladies First.

As to the Leap Year babies—Ladies first—

Her name is going to be Jeanette, but whether it will be Something Jeanette, or Jeanette Something, her mother was not prepared to say. We dare believe that the family can not agree on the only February 29 girl in Lincoln, and that a council or two will have to be held before a decision is reached as to whether she will be Something Jeanette or Jeanette Something.

This half-named child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augusteur Boudreau, who live at 2100 N street. Jeanette is a fat little rascal and is the champ-een baby in weight of the day, having between ten and eleven pounds to her credit upon arrival. That's not Jeanette's only claim to fame, however, but she has another that is almost as good. She is the very youngest of ten girls—just think of having your ninth oldest sister's dress descend to you. There's never been a boy in the family and Jeanette has carried out the family tradition.

Horace Robert Stitzer hasn't ten sisters or ten brothers or ten anything, for he is the very first and only child in his family. He is making his home at St. Elizabeth's hospital at present in a nursery with a half dozen others, but Horace will make his home with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Stilzer at 1226 South Twelfth street.

The Hungry Baby.

Horace weighed seven and one-half pounds when he arrived in this vale of tears but he bids fair to equal Jeanette's record in a short time. His family has already picked out the exact position the son and heir is to have his chair in the White house in about 1966—but about all that Horace does is to sleep in the warm nursery except when taken strolling by his pretty nurse.

The third member of the trio will probably always have a hungry life—at least he will always have a good appetite—for he stopped in just in time for lunch—11:45 o'clock to be exact. This baby picked out the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerild Colman at 3645 Washington street for his abode.

Dainty and pink and white as he is at present, he has a regular man size name, for he's been named for his father, and will be Jerild Sizer Colman, too. On yes, a junior should be attached on there—his proud new mother was so afraid we would forget the jr.—and we all but did. Jerild weighed seven and one-quarter pounds—just a quarter less than Horace—at 11:45 February 29. He is the first grandson in the family—the first new member of this family, incidentally—and as such is the center of attention.

THE VOICE OF THE CITY

That date marks the fiftieth anniversary of the organization. First as the Board of Trade at Lincoln; later reorganized under the name of the Lincoln Board of Trade; then known as Lincoln Commercial club; still later as the Union Commercial club as a result of a consolidation with the Union club; again returning to the Lincoln Commercial club and finally adopting that of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce—it experienced all of the vicissitudes and hardships of early days to survive and flourish with growing Lincoln.

So much of Lincoln's history is linked with the activities of the Chamber of Commerce, and the progress of the city a reflection of those labors that the fiftieth anniversary should be of interest to every citizen in the community as well as to the members of the organization. Lincoln owes her growth in no small degree to the unceasing, tireless efforts of those who devoted their time and energy and money to the Chamber of Commerce. Her transportation facilities, her water supply, her fine schools and colleges, her beautiful homes and her flourishing businesses—all of those things which go to make Lincoln a city of unusual advantages and charm, had their birth in the minds of men working through the channels of the chamber.

No single factor has contributed more materially to the advancement of this growing city than that organization which next Saturday celebrates its fiftieth birthday.

• • •

Nebraska was admitted to statehood on March 1, 1867 and five months later, in August of the same year, a special commission located the capital in Lincoln. The Lincoln of today is but 57 years old.

The second train running over the Burlington line to Lincoln, brought A. S. Godfrey, the first president of the Board of Trade at Lincoln, which was the initial commercial organization. Four years after his arrival Mr. Godfrey came to the conclusion that the time was ripe for the formation of a commercial body.

Thus the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce blazed the trail.

In the middle western states, it was a pioneer among commercial organizations Lincoln presented little of the promise of later years at that time. The streets were unpaved. There were no lights. For water its citizens depended upon the supply taken from individual wells. The straggling buildings, which broke the plains, comprised its business district. But here, it had been ordained, the activities of a great commonwealth were to be centered, and the hardy settlers early recognized the need of a group to assume responsibility for providing a fitting setting for the state capital and the state's university.

• • •

Of the earlier years, much might be written.

They were trying times—years which tested the fortitude and courage and faith of men and women, who selected this smiling valley for a home.

In 1883, the first industrial and business survey of Nebraska's capital was prepared by Isaac Raymond. His compilation showed 84 firms engaged in the jobbing and manufacturing business, which for the preceding twelve months aggregated $15,000,000. In round figures it was estimated 250 firms were engaged in retail trade.

For the year which ended December 31, 1923, the compilation reveals 247 jobbing and wholesale establishments, or three times the number in 1883, transacting a business of $83,000,000—or five times as great as it was forty years ago. The 96 factories in Lincoln in 1923 had an output valued at $51,570,000 while the 620 retail establishments transacted a business estimated at $13,000,000. Her population had more than doubled. Her residence section covered three times the ground. Her business district presented a new imposing skyline.

That is not the full measure of the achievements in which the Chamber of Commerce played a powerful part. Gradually the organization began to take a more active part in civic enterprises. Its committee assumed responsibility for the extension of the campus of the university of Nebraska. It built a mangificent building to house its activities, the first of its type in this section of the country. It inaugurated the movement for the first Good Roads' association in this state. It was a guiding spirit in the campaign for a new stadium. In all that pertained to Lincoln of a civic and philanthropic nature, the Chamber of Commerce played its part.

• • •

In the light of the record, it is strange that this organization, which contributed so materially to the wealth and happiness of the city, should be misunderstood by some of the citizens of Lincoln. There are men and women here who believe the Chamber is primarily an organization to insure larger profits for the business men.

Instead of giving it their undivided support, they are its critics.

"I often visit your city, and feel a pride in it," a Beatrice pioneer writes to this newspaper with reference to the anniversary, "and when I look at the fine buildings and the fine streets, it seems impossible that so much could be done in one man's lifetime."

Not so strange after all, when there is teamwork; when every class and group and every interest are working together for the advancement of the community. That is the significance of this golden jubilee of the Chamber of Commerce. Its fifty years of labor have been fruitful because it has been unselfish in its ideals of a bigger city. A busy, prosperous contented city has been built. It is a community of such a character, and endowed with such natural advantages that when the Philadelphia Farm Journal a few years ago conducted a nation-wide survey of American cities between 25,000 and 100,000 population, out of a total of 228 such cities, Lincoln ranked first in the volume of retail trade and in the extent of the trade zone.

Shall we not strive to make the next fifty years even more fruitful?

CUTTING THE SCHOOL TERM.

Olen D. Kratzer, who is seeking election to the legislature from Gage county, has another plan for shortening the school term. Mr. Kratzer would have school sessions six days each week instead of five, and instead of having thirty-six weeks of school each year, he would have only thirty. This system, he maintains, would materially reduce the expense of maintaining the schools and would consequently cut down taxes

Undoubtedly the plan proposed by Mr. Kratzer would result in the reduction of school expenses, but its utility and expediency are doubtful. Nor is it to be condemned off hand because it is a change from a system which has been in vogue over a long period of time. Improvements over old ways are constantly being made and this will continue.

It is not believed, however, that constant application over thirty weeks of time would prove to be for the best interest of the pupil. Nor is it at all probable that the amount of good could be accomplished in that time that would result from the same amount of schooling extended over the greater period.

The training and education of children and the development of the child mind is not a trade. It is not so much work, to be done by the hour, as one saws wood or paints a house. It is a responsible profession, requiring, if it be properly done, with profit to the pupil, and therefore to the public, a vast amount of preparation. And this preparation must be not only preliminary, but continuing.

No one engages in a more nerve-racking employment than does the teacher and the more conscientious he or she is, the greater the strain. Relaxation is absolutely essential, if good work is to be done and satisfactory results achieved. This is also necessary upon the part of the pupil and the parent or official who thinks that a school can be successfully run without diversion and play has a very poor understanding of the child nature. A school that is not popular with those who attend it cannot be a successful one, and a school that is all work and no play can never be popular.

M'COOK'S WORTHY EXAMPLE.

Following in the footsteps of larger cities, the thriving little city of McCook, Neb., has decided upon a policy of community boosting.

"One hundred and twenty-five business and professional interests of McCook have joined hands in a co-operative movement to make our town a greater and more enterprising community.

"Let's be generous with our good will—realizing that the prosperity of the individual is directly reflected in an added prosperity to our community.

"Your home merchants and industries have adopted this creed.

"Will you co-operate?"

This creed is good for any town or city which desires to progress. More communities in America have failed to advance because of the selfish, individualistic attitude of their business houses, and their professional men than from any other cause. There is no place for meanness and pettiness in American business today. Fair and honorable competition, additional prosperity for your competitor as well as for your own institution—that is the spirit which is building the most progressive American communities today. The McCook business and professional men are to be congratulated upon their campaign.

DECREASING RAILROAD HAZARDS.

Those who are laboring to decrease the toll taken by careless automobile drivers in America may take heart in what has been accomplished by education by the railroads in America. Railroading is not as perilous an occupation as it was a few years ago.

Figures compiled by one of the large eastern insurance companies reveal a greatly reduced death rate due to accidents. In 1913, 9 out of every 100,000 industrial policyholders in this company met death in railroad accidents. Ten years later, only 4.9 per 100,000 met death in that fashion. While the railroad casualty list was decreased from 9 to 4.9 in the ten year period, automobile fatalities increased from 4.1 to 15.4 or more than 300 per cent.

It would be folly to credit a greatly lowered railroad death rate entirely to the campaign of education which the carriers have been conducting. Improved methods of handling traffic, greater safety precautions, and the introduction of steel trains have all contributed powerfully. But education has had its part. It is not out of place to expect similar results from the national campaign now under way to curb the reckless automobile driver.

GOLF AND BASEBALL.

"Jawn" McGraw of the New York Giants, who has made it a business to win National league and world championships, has decreed that the members of his club shall not play golf during the baseball season.

The more temperamental and brilliant Tyrus Raymond Cobb, who guides the destinies of the Detroit Tigers, has modified a similar order to the extent that pitchers will be permitted to play golf. Other managers of baseball clubs are reported to be considering similar action.

Golf, as recreation for the hard-driven diamond star, has long been condemned because of the supposedly detrimental effect which it has on the "batting eye." The golf stroke varies so from the swing of the batsman, the managers claim, too frequent indulgence in golf very noticeably interfered with the batting power of the club.

The wily "Jawn" McGraw followed his investigation of golf even further. He found the players frequently engaged in arguments in the club house and on the field over golf, that their minds became so filled with golf there was room for nothing else

Hence golf must go for the ball player, at least during the playing season McGraw may see fit to make the ban complete the year around.

What is the ball players' loss, however, may be the caddies' gain. If some of the diamond stars play as poor a game of golf as they play baseball on certain days, the boys who carry the clubs will have no complaint against McGraw's ruling.

THE BOOM FOR "BILL" HAYWARD.

It is unfortunate that in the launching of the boom of "Bill" Hayward, former Nebraskan, for the republican nomination for governor of New York state, Mr. Hayward should feel called upon to defend his chief, Attorney General H. M. Daugherty. Colonel Hayward is altogether too fine a fellow, too able a prosecutor and too capable as a man, to have his political fortunes linked with those of a discredited politician, who by virtue of friendship for the late Warren Harding happens to head the department of justice.

Nebraskans have watched the rise of "Bill" Hayward in New York City with interest. They have always entertained the warmest affection for this altogether lovable chap. They recall with gratitude the splendid services of his father; of the promise which the son showed in the earlier years in this state and they are gladdened by the knowledge that he is receiving recognition in the most populous city and state in America.

If the republicans of New York state nominate Bill Hayward for governor, they will have chosen a standard bearer of whom they will feel proud. His record is clean. His ability is unquestioned. He is a real American in every sense of the word: thoroughly awake and loyal to the best traditions of this country. It will be a source of genuine pleasure to the people of this state if Bill Hayward heads the republican ticket in New York stats at the coming election.

The girl bandits who operate in some of our largest cities have departed so far from the customs prevailing in polite society that frequently they speak to men without waiting to be introduced.

The reparation experts began their sessions in Paris at a banquet in which rare old wines were consumed. There are those who will say the experts' labors have not been in vain.

The wife must promise not to run her husband but no provision has ever been made against her running him.

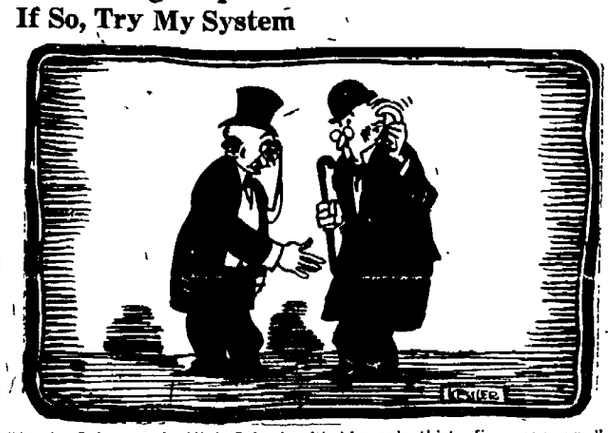

How glad the gunman must be that American dollars are not as cheap as German marks.

Distribution of the congressional record has not been so general since the Teapot Dome inquiry started

STEPHEN LEACOCK

Is Your Memory Upside Down?

If So, Try My System

I gather, from the back pages of the magazines, which are the only ones that I ever read, that there seems to be a great demand for the strengthening of the human memory. A great many "systems of memory" are now being placed upon the market and these systems, I am delighted to find, involve no strain upon the brain, can be acquired at an expenditure of only four minutes' time each day, resemble play rather than work, and are forwarded to any part of the United States or Canada for fifty cents.

Persons who are not satisfied with the treatment may write and say so if they don't forget to do so. In short any one who cares to have it, can now acquire a memory as prehensile as a monkey's tail.

This is indeed a boon. After all, what is so distressing as a failing memory? Any reader of this article can tell for himself whether he is in the first stage of the collapse of memory by asking himself whether he has any difficulty in recalling the names of the people he meets on the street. Does the reader find himself greeted two or three times a week and compelled to say:—

"Excuse me, I seem to know your face, and there's something familiar about the droop of your head, and the silly expression of your features and that asinine way in which you lean forward on your feet but I can't recall your name."

An Untoned Memory.

That, however, is only the first stage. A little later on, unless the memory is attended to, and toned up by a system, it goes into a further lapse in which the victim thus accosted on the street is only able to answer:—

"Excuse me. I can't recall your name. I don't remember your face. I never saw your clothes. I don't recollect your voice. If I ever saw you I have forgotten it. If I ever knew you, it has left no impression. Tell me, frankly, are you one of my relations or just one of my best friends?"

After which it is very humiliating to have the stranger remind him of the simple fact that he was at the Schenectady high school with him only thirty-five years ago.

But the loss of memeory as to names and faces is only a part of the evil Many people find that as they grow older, they lose their memory for words, for passages from books, for pieces of poetry familiar since childhood The reader may test his own power of memory by completing as he can the following:—

"The boy stood on the burning deck Whence, ——"

Let us ask "whence what?" and "in what direction?", "why was the deck burning?" and "why had the boy selected it for standing on?" Or this again:—

"Under the spreading chestnut tree,
The village smithy stands,
The smith, ——"

Now then, quite frankly, what about the smith? Can you give any idea of his personal appearance. What about his hands—eh what?

How to Spot Your Delegates.

I may say at once that any reader who finds himself unable to recall poems of his class, or to name the branches of the Amazon, or to remember who it was that borrowed a dollar from him at bridge, is in a bad way and had better take treatment at once.

It is to meet this very kind of difficulty that I have been working out a system of memory. As yet it is only in a fragmentary shape, but even as it is, it may be found of use for certain purposes

I will take a very familiar and very important case—the question of how to remember the delegates at a convention All of us now-a-days have to attend conventions of one kind or another—conventions of furniture men, or rubber men, or stone men, or cement men, gas men, air men,—any kind of men. And at every convention the delegate from Grand Rapids, Michigan, looks exactly like the delegate from Miami, Florida, and from Ikesquak, Ungava. Is there, one asks, any way by which one can remember the name of a particular delegate? Yes, I think, it can be done.

Putting My System to Work.

In my system in such a problem as this we proceed on the method of Infinite Verification. Put in simple language this means that if you say a thing over often enough presently you may remember it. Thus if a delegate is introduced to you under the name of Mr. Louis Barker of Owen Sound, Ontario, as soon as he has been presented you must say:

"Pardon me, I am not sure that I have the name right?"

"Louis Barker?"

"Ah, thank you, Mr. Barker, and from where did you say?"

"From Owen Sound."

"Oh, yes—and I don't know if I got your Christian name?"

"Louis."

"Oh, certainly, and what did you say was your surname?"

"Barker."

"Yes, exactly, and from what town do you come, Mr Barker?"

"From Owen Sound."

"Ah, to be sure and you said it was in Alberta."

"No, in Ontario."

"In Ontario! Of course, how stupid of me, and,—pardon me I want to get it right,—did you say that your name was Lloyd or Tomlinson? For the moment I can't remember which?"

When you hear two or people going through this kind of conversation you may be sure that they are memory experts, and that they are paying fifty cents a week for memory lessons,—or they ought to.

The Convention Face.

At any rate there is no doubt that if that kind of question and answer is repeated often enough you will presently retain with absolute distinctness the recollection that the man's name is Louis Barker,—either that or William Baker

And just at the time when you have got this established he himself will turn to you and say:

"Excuse me, I am afraid I am rather stupid, but did you say that your name was Edward Peterson or Lionel Jennings?"

It has to be observed however, that even this much has been accomplished and you still may not be able to remember the delegate's face. That is another question. Science has not yet gone far enough to tell us whether it is possible to remember delegates' faces at conventions.

Such cases however are relatively simple. I turn to the more difficult problem of how to remember telephone numbers. Everybody knows how provoking it is when we cannot remember whether our best friend's telephone number is 4821 or 4281,—or just possibly 8241, or even 8421,—with a faint suspicion that it may be 2841 or,—stop a bit—2481. It seems a shame to remember it so nearly as that—in fact, within a few thousands—and yet not get it.

The best solution, no doubt, is to associate only with people who have reasonable telephone numbers such as 9999 or 0000. Failing that, one must fall back on some kind of anemonic device Now in the case of what we call technically the principle of association. This means that, after all, everything must in a way be like something else, and that even the oddest collection of figures are connected by some link or association with others more simple.

For example, a friend of mine told me that he had great difficulty in remembering his telephone number which was 2937-J. I drew his attention to the simple fact that 29 is only one short of thirty and that 37 is only three short of forty and that J is the next letter before K. After that the thing was absurdedly easy.

A similar difficulty presented itself in another case where the telephone number was 4754 But after turning it over in my mind I realized that 47 is the highest prime number above 41 and that 54 would be the next if it were 53 instead of 54 Add to this that the number 4754 itself is nothing other than the square root of 22,600,516 and the problem is solved.

Thus, and the Thing Is Done!

It may be objected that this form of memory work is open only to people of a mathematic mind—such as actuaries, astronomers, and the employees of a cash register company. Other people may prefer a form of association dealing rather with facts in with figures. In this connection I may quote the case of a man whose telephone number was 1066 and who was able to remember it by noticing that it represents the date of the Norman Conquest This is capable of a wide application. If your telephone number is 2986 connect it at once with the fall of the Ming dynasty in China; if it is 3843, that is obviously the date of the death of Amenhoteh the First and so on. In short, whatever your number is you have but to loook it up in a book of history, connect an event with it, learn the event, memorize the date, and the thing is done. In such a case be careful not to say to the operator: "Give me the landing of the Pilgrim fathers, Uptown-W."

Here is a more intricate problem in which the student of memory may surprise his friends with the brilliance of his performance.—I refer to the power to memorize a long and disconnected series of names. The best illustration or at least the most familiar, is the series of the names of the presidents of the United States in order of office.

Order of the Presidents.

When we apply the principle of association to this, what appears an almost insuperable task is easily overcome. Take the first link in the china We want to remember that after Washington comes Adams. Can it be done? Yes, by association. We connect with the word Washington anything that it suggests, and then something that that suggests, and so on till we happen to get to Adams—

Washington evidently suggests washing.

The Bible begins with Adam

How ridiculously simple!

In conclusion I may say that if any reader of this journal will send me fifty cents, I will either (aa) forward to him by post my entire system of memory, or (b) send him back his fifty cents, or (c) keep his fifty cents and say nothing about it. If his memory is so weak as to need a system he will have forgotten his fifty cents anyway

Science and the Universe

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

It is a question which will never have, perhaps, any "practical" value, though it will always be of enormous interest to curious minds, whether or not the physical universe is infinite in extent This was one of the things debated at the recent meeting of the most learned boly of men in of the most learned body of men in Association for the Advancement of Science.

Those who took part in the discussion might reply, if accused of wasting their time, "Well, what we gain in mental expansion through such discussion we may carry into a future state of existence to serve as a foundation for future growth, but what you call useful things, like money and machinery, certainly stop on the edge of the grave."

With great earnestness the astronomer and mathematician, F. R Moulton, of the University of Chicago, attacked this question with the frank avowal, to begin with, that no final answer can be given to it, "either now or in the future"

In his avowal there was concealed the true spirit of science, which is completely misunderstood by many persons. This spirit is no slave. Neither is it an apprentice bound to the leather apron strings of the giant blacksmith that the popular imagination often mistakes for science.

The immense contributions that the spirit of science affords to industry are only incidental by-products of its work It willingly and gladly makes these contributions, but if it were forced to hold them for its chief aim, its aim would quickly lose its strength and its hand its cunning

It was in accordance with the true scientific spirit, which hopes for no other result than to be forever presssing onward, its joy being in progress and not in moveless finality, that Professor Moulton presented his ideas of the infinity of the universe Science advances into the unknown by the aid of postulates and hypotheses. But it drops its postulates and hypotheses like used-up sticks when they no longer help it onward. It is for that that many who do not understand science accuse it. They do not comperhend that aids to truth may be worn out in its fullness, unattainable.

If, said Professor Moulton, the universe be built up of an unending succession of cosmic units (cosmic meaning only "pertaining to the universe"), which at each stage make larger units, as electrons make up atoms, atoms make up molecules, molecules make up worlds, worlds make up solar systems, solar systems make up galaxies, galaxies make up super-galaxies, and so on—each unit separated from its neighbors by distances that are great compared to their diameters.—then the universe is not only infinite in extent, but it has an infinite number of each type of cosmic units; the total mass is infinite, there is no center or absolute position in it; and it may have infinite duration, both past and future. Taking this view of the universe we must regard all phenomena as in a general way cyclical, or recurrent

In these breathless heights of philosophy the adventurous mind gradually becomes acclimated. It accustoms itself, as happens with the lungs of climbers of lofty mountains, to sustain itself on lighter elements

It is only after such exercise that things like the Einstein theory can be attacked How, for instance, can the mind untrained in these intellectual flights hope to understand such conceptions as that to which one view of the Einstein theory has led—viz., that the universe is at the infinite and yet unlimited, or the dictum ethat where there is no matter there can be no space

It is useless to try to furnish answers to those who ask for "a plain statement in ordinary language of just what the Einstein theory means." Yet these same persons most likely feel that it is easy enough to believe that the universe is infinite because common experience suggests that beyond every boundary there is always something more, even though it be only empty space.

Lack of Foresight.

(York News-Times)

The sins of the fathers of American cities, town and villages were municipal near-sightedness and penury The users of streets and public buildings are the losers.

How often it is lamented today that the persons responsible for the breadth of the streets and highways and for the capacity of its public buildings did not value foresight above bonded indebtedness and taxation. It is easier and cheapter to build for the future than for the future to tear down to meet the demands of the present.

Fifty years ago, when the majority of the American communities had already been planned or long established, present traffic conditions were undreamed of. The most of our thoroughfares were staked off for two lines of wagon traffic, with hitching posts and watering troughs at either side. A 40-foot street was a boulevard and an extravagance not to be tolerated by the taxpayers, but to be remembered as subsequent councilmanic elections. In the same manner were public buildings erected with public funds for present needs

There is probably no community in the United States, no matter how large or small, which is not feeling the strangling influence of streets woefully too narrow and that has been forced, or soon will be, to enlarge or entirely rebuild one or more public buildings.

To right the traffic wrongs there have been many solutions suggested and employed. Some municipalities have expended millions in razing valuable buildings, condemning private land and slicing off business blocks to allow the widening of streets. Elevated sidewalks and roadways are being seriously contemplated in several of the larger cities.

The price we pay for blindness of our forefathers is immeasurable, but will the generations of tomorrow have the same charge to make against the community builders and planners of today.

What Is a Republican?

(Stottsbluff Star-Herald)

There seems to be divergence of opinion as to what really constitutes a republican. According to the Kearney Hub and one or two other publications in Nebraska a republican is not a republican unless he subscribes body, soul and breeches to everything that the old guard from New England and New York declare are the fundamental principles of that part, no matter if such principles are diametrically opposed to the welfare of Nebraska and Nebraskans. It required a good many years for some of the whigs to realize that the republican party was a necessity, but they finally did. It may require an even longer time for some of the old guard lovers of the present day to realize that unless a party keeps abreast of the necessities of the nation as they arise, it will pass as did the once powerful federals and even more powerful whigs. If they are really republicans in all that the word means, they will be for the progress of their party and urge it to keep step. If they are still lurking back to the days of Garfield and McKinley, they will find themselves hopelessly out of date. The party took up and settled the problems that confronted it in those days, and it can take up and settle problems that confront it now, but it cannot do so by looking backward any more than the old guard advocates should show loyalty to that period by refusing to ride in an automobile and insisting on using a team and buckboard.

Here and There

Negro Slaveholders.

(Des Moines Register.)

It is a fact of importance that has been uncovered by the research department of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History when it finds that before the civil war 4 500 colored freedom owned slaves of their own race. Quite as valuable, too, is its discovery that nearly a half million negroes were free residents of this country before the emancipation proclamation was issued by President Lincoln in 1865. That was one-seventh of the entire colored population of the time, and it shows that the freeing of the whole number was not the sudden reversal of policy it has been made out to be. Most of these lived in the south, which would indicate that sentiment in that part of the country was not entirely averse to freedom for the slaves

But the mind fixes on that owning of slaves by negro freedmen. It does not justify the white race, nor relieve it of the responsibility for the institution of slavery on this continent. But it turns a light on human nature There was brutality among the negro slaveholders as well as among those of the other race, the record shows. Many of them of course bought slaves as a matter of philanthropy, and liberated them. The Chicago Defender says that in many cases free husbands bought wives, and emancipated them, although occasionally the freeing of the wife was delayed until it was made certain that she would be desirable as a permanent mate.

But there were colored masters guilty of exploiting the labor of their fellows as ruthlessly as they had been used by their former owners There was actual competition among white and colored slaveholders in the number of such chattels. It is surprising to learn that most of these negro masters were settled in Louisiana, South Caroline, Maryland and Virginia, although mistreament of the freed negroes drove them ordinarily to free states or to the easier communities along the gulf coast.

Of course the negro had the example of the white man, and after all 4,500 is a small part of the several million colored people in the country before 1865. But the situation does support the belief that our faults are to be dealt with as human frailties, not individual perversions. Being the victim of brutality and injustice does not prevent man from being brutal and unjust. Few judgments are to be taken as conclusive against any man or group or race, in the present state of mankind.

To Fill the Air With Politics.

(New York Times.)

What is going to happen this summer and fall in the radio world is indicated clearly by the well-timed revelation that political orators who want to address larger audiences than any hall can hold may do so with the help of a kindly broadcasting station—may, that is, after going through the little formality of paying for the service rendered

It is W. E. Harkness head of the American Telephone and Telegraph company's broadcasting department who allowed this valuable piece of information to get out He added to it that no political orator would be permitted to "take the air" for more than ten minutes at a time, and that the price would be $10 a minute But that is not all. He warned those intending to use this facility in this way that their speeches, if the auditors are to notice in them anything except their defects of grammar and sentence construction, must be much more carefully prepared and worded than in the past has been the habit of the spellbinding fraternity. For "personality" will count for nothing in this form of persuasion, gesture will not help out incoherence or fill in hiatuses, and there ill be nothing to distract attention from the matter to the man.

It is very likely that the veterans of the hustings, the old political warhorses, will be unable to adapt themselves to these new requirements, and that another generation, young and amenable, will take over the noble task of proving that the very existence of the country depends on putting the rascals out or keeping the saints in, as the particular demand may be.

This, as the world's people put it, is all to the good. A broadcast speech cannot, of course, be subjected to the amount of study given to a printed one but at least the speaker thus—well, distributed—will be able to use none of his familiar platform tricks, and either must invent new ones or talk something approaching sense and logic It even will be judicious for him to stick pretty closely to facts, hitherto such a small portion of the spellbinder's material. If he doesn't, he will become simply amusing for a few moments, ridiculous for a few more and then tiresome.

The State House Poet

Grant Shumway, state agriculture secretary, gave out Wednesday morning a humorous and poetical comeback at Land Commissioner Swanson on the question of who is responsible for the condition of walks and approaches on Capitol square, the overhead drip from runways connecting the two sections of the new capitol, and the fact that truck drivers have been permitted until the last few days to drive their heavy loads of sand and gravel up and down the flagstone walks to avoid going through mud and bumping over switch tracts. Here is Mr. Shumway's contribution:

"Newspaper boys are trying to make Dan and me mad. They have him about half mad, but not me. Not even if they go back to the ancient history when I stubbed my toe on a watermelon that ran out in the road right in front of me from the neighbor's patch; nor even though they find out I once captured a couple of green pears that were making their get-away from a neighbor's pear tree. Not even though they find I only got (for the state) $17,000 (where I tried to get a million) from potash royalties, (which Dan claims he secured because paid in after I went out of the land commissioner's office).

"Why should I be drawn into this controversy between Larson and Swanson I am not a candidate. What if I did say I was thinking of making garden on the sidewalk and irrigating it from the drip from the overhead 'flume'?

"Nevertheless, Dan can't 'pass the buck,' together with his constitutional responsibilities, so easily as recording a motion (by himself) made and adopted in a previous administration.

"The last legislature, appropriated certain moneys for the up-keep of capitol and capitol grounds. At the organization of the board of educational lands and funds at the beginning of this bienium, Dan was made custodian of the capitol and grounds.

"Now boys don't try to make me mad.
You know it can't be "did",
Go try and made Dan Swanson glad,
It isn't right to kid
A fellow when he's worried pink,
'Cause L. A. Larson filed
Just give a fellow chance to think,
And do not keep him riled.

"There's nothing in this story of
His watching Bryan's door,
Nor water dripping from above,
Don't try to make him sore.
And on the sidewalk in the clay,
We'll plant our garden drops,
Beneath the dripping over-way,
We'll dodge between the drops."

Beatrice, Neb., March 6, 1924.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star:

After reading Mrs. Meier's letter of March 3, I wish to give some of my early memories of Lincoln. I will be eighty-two years old in July, and when I came home from the civil war, I hired to a freighter at Nebraska City to drive a four-mule team to Julesburg, loaded with shelledi corn. We camped where Lincoln now is early in June, 1865, on the hill just east of where the Burlington depot now stands and as I remember there was only one house at that time. I well remember the old steam wagon road, and I well knew the man that made the old steam wagon, James Mitchell, of Osceola, Ia. But it failed to make as good time as the present day cars.

We failed to get to Julesburg with our corn, as the government troops at Fort Kearney took over our corn and turned us back on account of hostile Indians farther west. While I am not a resident of Lincoln and never have been, I often visit your city, and feel a pride in it. And when I look at the beautiful buildings and fine streets, it seems impossible that so much could be done in one man's lifetime.

W. I. WEBSTER.

What Is a Progressive?

Havelock, Neb., March 6.

To the Editor of The Lincoln Star:

What is a "progressive?" Who is a "progressive?" If we take the mouthings of J. L. Beebe and W. J. Taylor as law and gospel, the only true progressives are Beebe and Taylor, and the only progressive principles are those proclaimed by Beebe and Taylor.

I was much amused to see the challenge issued by Chairman Beebe to Governor Bryan, to debate the question whether Bryan is a fit man to be the candidate of Chairman Beebe's party I am inclined to think that right now Governor Bryan's duties as governor may prevent him from debating with the Rev. Mr. Beebe, but at present I have plenty of time to accommodate the gentleman, and I should be very glad indeed to act as substitute for our worthy governor in this matter.

For no other governor in my recollection can compare with Charles W. Bryan in what he has done for the people of Nebraska (and is doing every day) and it raises my "dander" to see a bunch sneaking along behind him in the hope of snapping him when he is not looking.

Beebe is surely the last man on earth to raise any question as to who is a progressive. Regardless of the position he holds, Beebe is right now hand in glove with the reactionaries. He cannot successfully deny that he is working secretly—if not openly— for the success of Graft and Sloan, neither of whom can by the wildest stretch of the imagination be regarded as progressive.

Frankly, I haven't much use for Messrs. Beebe and Taylor politically I've watched their tactics too often to take any stock at all in their professions of being progresive. And so I'd dearly love to debate against the two at the same time and in the same towns mentioned in Chairman Beebe's challenge to Governor Bryan—Omaha, Lincoln, Grand Island, and North Platte.

But I'd wish to make a slight modification in the question for debate. And to put it somewhat formally, I challenge J. L. Beebe and W. J. Taylor to debate the following questions. I to uphold the affirmative and they to take the negative.

"Resolved, that J. L. Beebe and W. J Taylor did more than any other two men in Nebraska to aid in the election of a reactionary legislature in the fall of 1922, and thereby defeat the purpose of Charles W. Bryan in his program to abolish the civil administrative code, and to bring about adequate tax reduction"

This will effectively raise the question as to who is a progressive. And before I get through with these gentlemen in the debate (if they have "sand" enough to accept my challenge) I shall show that their game is now—and was two years ago—to divide the progresive forces in Nebraska and thus enable the reactionaries to win

Messrs Beebe and Taylor, dare you debate this question with me? We need no committee on arrangements. We three can arrange the dates and places and division of time; and each can pay his third of the expenses Do you dare come out in the open and defend Graft and Sloan?

I. W. JACOBY.

Farewell.

My pals and pards—my friends of woe,
I now must leave you one and all,
The fates decree that I may go,
Where prison shadows never fall.

Yet, as I wander o'er the land,
Helpless, humble and in despair,
I feel the mark—the fettered brand—
The fangs of a man's venomous hair.

Or should I walk in freedom's pride,
And live in a mansion of stone,
The gift of wealth could never hide—
The sorrows you bear all alone.

You bear the load while I go free—
Yet, my heart feels the weight of woe;
I kneel in prayer at mother's knee—
Her love your peace of soul bestow.

Where can I go to kill the shame?
Where can I cleanse the prison taint?
Friends are proud of their spotless names—
Forgiveness is but for the Saint

So I am marked in flesh and bone—
Marked by man for Eden's disgrace;
Until the grave must claim its own—
Blot out the mem'ry of that place!

THE VOICE OF THE CITY

That date marks the fiftieth anniversary of the organization. First as the Board of Trade at Lincoln: later reorganized under the name of the Lincoln Board of Trade; then known as Lincoln Commercial club; still later as the Union Commercial club as a result of a consolidation with the Union club; again returning to the Lincoln Commercial club and finally adopting that of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce—it experienced all of the vicissitudes and hardships of early days to survive and flourish with growing Lincoln.

So much of Lincoln's history is linked with the activities of the Chamber of Commerce, and the progress of the city a reflection of those labors that the fiftieth anniversary should be of interest to every citizen in the community as well as to the members of the organization. Lincoln owes her growth in no small degree to the unceasing, tireless efforts of those who devoted their time and energy and money to the Chamber of Commerce. Her transportation facilities, her water supply, her fine schools and colleges, her beautiful homes and her flourishing businesses—all of those things which go to make Lincoln a city of unusual advantages and charm, had their birth in the minds of men working through the channels of the chamber.

No single factor has contributed more materially to the advancement of this growing city than that organization which next Saturday celebrates its fiftieth birthday.

• • •

Nebraska was admitted to statehood on March 1, 1867 and five months later, in August of the same year, a special commission located the capital in Lincoln. The Lincoln of today is but 57 years old.

The second train running over the Burlington line to Lincoln, brought A. S. Godfrey, the first president of the Board of Trade at Lincoln, which was the initial commercial organization. Four years after his arrival Mr. Godfrey came to the conclusion that the time was ripe for the formation of a commercial body.

Thus the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce blazed the trail.

In the middle western states, it was a pioneer among commercial organizations. Lincoln presented little of the promise of later years at that time. The streets were unpaved. There were no lights. For water its citizens depended upon the supply taken from individual wells. The straggling buildings, which broke the plains, comprised its business district. But here, it had been ordained, the activities of a great commonwealth were to be centered, and the hardy settlers early recognized the need of a group to assume responsibility for providing a fitting setting for the state capital and the state's university.

• • •

Of the earlier years, much might be written.

They were trying times—years which tested the fortitude and courage and faith of men and women, who selected this smiling valley for a home.

In 1883, the first industrial and business survey of Nebraska's capital was prepared by Isaac Raymond. His compilation showed 84 firms engaged in the jobbing and manufacturing business, which for the preceding twelve months aggregated $15,000,000. In round figures it was estimated 250 firms were engaged in retail trade.

For the year which ended December 31, 1923, the compilation reveals 247 jobbing and wholesale establishments, or three times the number in 1883, transacting a business of $83,000,000—or five times as great as it was forty years ago. The 96 factories in Lincoln in 1923 had an output valued at $51,570,000 while the 620 retail establishments transacted a business estimated at $13,000,000. Her population had more than doubled. Her residence section covered three times the ground. Her business district presented a new imposing skyline.

That is not the full measure of the achievements in which the Chamber of Commerce played a powerful part. Gradually the organization began to take a more active part in civic enterprises. Its committee assumed responsibility for the extension of the campus of the university of Nebraska. It built a mangificent building to house its activities, the first of its type in this section of the country. It inaugurated the movement for the first Good Roads' association in this state. It was a guiding spirit in the campaign for a new stadium. In all that pertained to Lincoln of a civic and philanthropic nature, the Chamber of Commerce played its part.

• • •

In the light of the record, it is strange that this organization, which contributed so materially to the wealth and happiness of the city, should be misunderstood by some of the citizens of Lincoln. There are men and women here who believe the Chamber is primarily an organization to insure larger profits for the business men.

Instead of giving it their undivided support, they are its critics.

"I often visit your city, and feel a pride in it," a Beatrice pioneer writes to this newspaper with reference to the anniversary, "and when I look at the fine buildings and the fine streets, it seems impossible that so much could be done in one man's lifetime."

Not so strange after all, when there is teamwork; when every class and group and every interest are working together for the advancement of the community. That is the significance of this golden jubilee of the Chamber of Commerce. Its fifty years of labor have been fruitful because it has been unselfish in its ideals of a bigger city. A busy, prosperous contented city has been built. It is a community of such a character, and endowed with such natural advantages that when the Philadelphia Farm Journal a few years ago conducted a nation-wide survey of American cities between 25,000 and 100,000 population, out of a total of 228 such cities, Lincoln ranked first in the volume of retail trade and in the extent of the trade zone.

Shall we not strive to make the next fifty years even more fruitful?

CUTTING THE SCHOOL TERM.

Oren D. Kratzer, who is seeking election to the legislature from Gage county, has another plan for shortening the school term. Mr. Kratzer would have school sessions six days each week instead of five, and instead of having thirty-six weeks of school each year, he would have only thirty. This system, he maintains, would materially reduce the expense of maintaining the schools and would consequently cut down taxes.

Undoubtedly the plan proposed by Mr. Kratzer would result in the reduction of school expenses, but its utility and expediency are doubtful. Nor is it to be condemned off hand because it is a change from a system which has been in vogue over a long period of time. improvements over old ways are constantly being made and this will continue.

It is not believed, however, that constant application over thirty weeks of time would prove to be for the best interest of the pupil. Nor is it at all probable that the amount of good could be accomplished in that time that would result from the same amount of schooling extended over the greater period.

The training and education of children and the development of the child mind is not a trade. It is not so much work, to be done by the hour, as one saws wood or paints a house. It is a responsible profession, requiring, if it be properly done, with profit to the pupil, and therefore to the public, a vast amount of preparation. And this preparation must be not only preliminary, but continuing.

No one engages in a more nerve-racking employment than does the teacher and the more conscientious he or she is, the greater the strain. Relaxation is absolutely essential, if good work is to be done and satisfactory results achieved. This is also necessary upon the part of the pupil and the parent or official who thinks that a school can be successfully run without diversion and play has a very poor understanding of the child nature. A school that is not popular with those who attend it cannot be a successful one, and a school that is all work and no play can never be popular.

M'COOK'S WORTHY EXAMPLE.

Following in the footsteps of larger cities, the thriving little city of McCook, Neb., has decided upon a policy of community boosting.

"One hundred and twenty-five business and professional interests of McCook have joined hands in a co-operative movement to make our town a greater and more enterprising community.

"Let's be generous with our good will—realizing that the prosperity of the individual is directly reflected in an added prosperity to our community.

"Your home merchants and industries have adopted this creed.

"Will you co-operate?"

This creed is good for any town or city which desires to progress. More communities in America have failed to advance because of the selfish, individualistic attitude of their business houses, and their professional men than from any other cause. There is no place for meanness and pettiness in American business today. Fair and honorable competition: additional prosperity for your competitor as well as for your own institution—that is the spirit which is building the most progressive American communities today. The McCook business and professional men are to be congratulated upon their campaign.

DECREASING RAILROAD HAZARDS.

Those who are laboring to decrease the toll taken by careless automobile drivers in America may take heart in what has been accomplished by education by the railroads in America. Railroading is not as perilous an occupation as it was a few years ago.

Figures compiled by one of the large eastern insurance companies reveal a greatly reduced death rate due to accidents. In 1913, 9 out of every 100,000 industrial policyholders in this company met death in railroad accidents. Ten years later, only 4.9 per 100,000 met death in that fashion. While the railroad casualty list was decreased from 9 to 4.9 in the ten year period, automobile fatalities increased from 4.1 to 15.4 or more than 300 per cent.

It would be folly to credit a greatly lowered railroad death rate entirely to the campaign of education which the carriers have been conducting. Improved methods of handling traffic, greater safety precautions, and the introduction of steel trains have all contributed powerfully. But education has had its part. It is not out of place to expect similar results from the national campaign now under way to curb the reckless automobile driver.

GOLF AND BASEBALL.

"Jawn" McGraw of the New York Giants, who has made it a business to win National league and world championships, has decreed that the members of his club shall not play golf during the baseball season.

The more temperamental and brilliant Tyrus Raymond Cobb, who guides the destinies of the Detroit Tigers, has modified a similar order to the extent that pitchers will be permitted to play golf. Other managers of baseball clubs are reported to be considering similar action.

Golf, as recreation for the hard-driven diamond star, has long been condemned because of the supposedly detrimental effect which it has on the "batting eye." The golf stroke varies so from the swing of the batsman, the managers claim, too frequent indulgence in golf very noticeably interfered with the batting power of the club.

The wily "Jawn" McGraw followed his investigation of golf even further. He found the players frequently engaged in arguments in the club house and on the field over golf; that their minds became so filled with golf there was room for nothing else.

Hence golf must go for the ball player, at least during the playing season. McGraw may see fit to make the ban complete the year around.

What is the ball players' loss, however, may be the caddies' gain. If some of the diamond stars play as poor a game of golf as they play baseball on certain days, the boys who carry the clubs will have no complaint against McGraw's ruling.

THE BOOM FOR "BILL" HAYWARD.

It is unfortunate that in the launching of the boom of "Bill" Hayward, former Nebraskan, for the republican nomination for governor of New York state, Mr. Hayward should feel called upon to defend his chief, Attorney General H. M. Daugherty. Colonel Hayward is altogether too fine a fellow, too able a prosecutor and too capable as a man to have his political fortunes linked with those of a discredited politician, who by virtue of friendship for the late Warren Harding happens to head the department of justice.

Nebraskans have watched the rise of "Bill" Hayward in New York City with interest. They have always entertained the warmest affection for this altogether lovable chap. They recall with gratitude the splendid services of his father; of the promise which the son showed in the earlier years in this state and they are gladdened by the knowledge that he is receiving recognition in the most populous city and state in America.

If the republicans of New York state nominate Bill Hayward for governor, they will have chosen a standard bearer of whom they will feel proud. His record is clean. His ability is unquestioned. He is a real American in every sense of the word; thoroughly awake and loyal to the best traditions of this country. It will be a source of genuine pleasure to the people of this state if Bill Hayward heads the republican ticket in New York state at the coming election.

The girl bandits who operate in some of our largest cities have departed so far from the customs prevailing in polite society that frequently they speak to men without waiting to be introduced.

The reparation experts began their sessions in Paris at a banquet in which rare old wines were consumed. There are those who will say the experts' labors have not been in vain.

The wife must promise not to run her husband but no provision has ever been made against her running bills.

How glad the gunman must be that American dollars are not as cheap as German marks.

Distribution of the congressional record has not been so general since the Teapot Dome inquiry started.

STEPHEN LEACOCK

Is Your Memory Upside Down?

If So, Try My System

I gather, from the back pages of the magazines, which are the only ones that I ever read, that there seems to be a great demand for the strengthening of the human memory. A great many "systems of memory" are now being placed upon the market and these systems, I am delighted to find, involve no strain upon the brain, can be acquired at an expenditure of only four minutes' time each day, resemble play rather than work, and are forwarded to any part of the United States or Canada for fifty cents.

Persons who are not satisfied with the treatment may write and say so if they don't forget to do so. In short any one who cares to have it, can now acquire a memory as prehensile as a monkey's tail.

This is indeed a boon. After all, what is so distressing as a failing memory? Any reader of this article can tell for himself whether he is in the first stage of the collapse of memory by asking himself whether he has any difficulty in recalling the names of the people he meets on the street. Does the reader find himself greeted two or three times a week and compelled to say:—

"Excuse me, I seem to know your face, and there's something familiar about the droop of your head, and the silly expression of your features and that asinine way in which you lean forward on your feet but I can't recall your name."

An Untoned Memory.

That, however, is only the first stage. A little later on, unless the memory is attended to, and toned up by a system, it goes into a further lapse in which the victim thus accosted on the street is only able to answer:—

"Excuse me. I can't recall your name. I don't remember your face. I never saw your clothes. I don't recollect your voice. If I ever saw you I have forgotten it. If I ever knew you, it has left no impression. Tell me, frankly, are you one of my relations or just one of my best friends?"

After which it is very humiliating to have the stranger remind him of the simple fact that he was at the Schenectady high school with him only thirty-five years ago.

But the loss of memeory as to names and faces is only a part of the evil. Many people find that as they grow older, they lose their memory for words, for passages from books, for pieces of poetry familiar since childhood. The reader may test his own power of memory by completing is he can the following:—

"The boy stood on the burning deck Whence,————"

Let us ask "whence what?" and "in what direction?", 'why was the deck burning?" and "why had the boy selected it for standing on?" Or this again:—

"Under the spreading chestnut tree,
The village smithy stands,
The smith, ————"

Now then, quite frankly, what about the smith? Can you give any idea of his personal appearance. What about his hands—eh what?

How to Spot Your Delegates.

I may say at once that any reader who finds himself unaable to recall poems of his class, or to name the branches of the Amazon, or to remember who it was that borrowed a dollar from him at bridge, is in a bad way and had better take treatment at once.

It is to meet this very kind of difficulty that I have been working out a system of memory. As yet it is only in a fragmentary shape, but even as it is, it may be found of use for certain purposes.

I will take a very familiar and very important case—the question of how to remember the delegates at a convention. All of us now-a-days have to attend conventions of one kind or another—conventions of furniture men, or rubber men, or stone men, or cement men, gas men, air men,—any kind of men. And at every convention the delegate from Grand Rapids, Michigan, looks exactly like the delegate from Miami, Florida, and from Iksquak, Ungava. Is there, one asks, any way by which one can remember the name of a particular delegate? Yes, I think, it can be done.

Putting My System to Work.

In my system in such a problem as this we proceed on the method of Infinite Verification. Put in simple language this means that if you say a thing over often enough presently you may remember it. Thus if a delegate is introduced to you under the name of Mr. Louis Barker of Owen Sound, Ontario, as soon as he has been presented you must say:

"Pardon me, I am not sure that I have the name right?"

"Louis Barker."

"Ah, thank you, Mr. Barker, and from where did you say?"

"From Owen Sound."

"Oh, yes—and I don't know if I got your Christian name?"

"Louis."

"Oh, certainly, and what did you say was your surname?"

"Barker."

"Yes, exactly, and from what town do you come, Mr. Barker?"

"From Owen Sound."

"Ah, to be sure and you said it was in Alberta."

"No, in Ontario."

"In Ontario! Of course, how stupid of me, and,—pardon me I want to get it right,—did you say that your name was Lloyd or Tomlinson? For the moment I can't remember which?"

When you hear two or people going through this kind of conversation you may be sure that they are memory experts, and that they are paying fifty cents a week for memory lessons,—or they ought to.

The Convention Face.

At any rate there is no doubt that if that kind of question and answer is repeated often enough you will presently retain with absolute distinctness the recollection that the man's name is Louis Barker,—either that or William Baker.

And just at the time when you have got this established he himself will turn to you and say:

"Excuse me, I am afraid I am rather stupid, but did you say that your name was Edward Peterson or Lionel Jennings?"

It has to be observed however, that even this much has been accomplished and you still may not be able to remember the delegate's face. That is another question. Science has not yet gone far enough to tell us whether it is possible to remember delegates' faces at conventions.

Such cases, however, are relatively simple. I turn to the more difficult problem of how to remember telephone numbers. Everybody knows how provoking it is when we cannot remember whether our best friend's telephone number is 4821 or 4281,—or just possibly 8241, or even 8421,—with a faint suspicion that it may be 2841 or,—stop a bit—2481. It seems a shame to remember it so nearly as that—in fact, within a few thousands—and yet not get it.

The best solution, no doubt, is to associate only with people who have reasonable telephone numbers such as 9999 or 0000. Failing that, one must fall back on some kind of anemonic device. Now in the case of what we call technically the principle of association. This means that, after all, everything must in a way be like something else, and that even the oddest collection of figures are connected by some link or association with others more simple.

For example, a friend of mine told me that he had great difficulty in remembering his telephone number which was 2937-J. I drew his attention to the simple fact that 29 is only one short of thirty and that 37 is only three short of forty and that J is the next letter before K. After that the thing was absurdedly easy.

A similar difficulty presented itself in another case where the telephone number was 4754. But after turning it over in my mind I realized that 47 is the highest prime number above 41 and that 54 would be the next if it were 53 instead of 54. Add to this that the number 4754 itself is nothing other than the square root of 22,600,516 and the problem is solved.

Thus, and the Thing Is Done!

It may be objected that this form of memory work is open only to people of a mathematic mind—such as actuaries, astronomers, and the employees of a cash register company. Other people may prefer a form of association dealing rather with facts than with figures. In this connection I may quote the case of a man whose telephone number was 1066 and who was able to remember it by noticing that it represents the date of the Norman Conquest. This is capable of a wide application. If your telephone number is 2986 connect it at once with the fall of the Ming dynasty in China; if it is 3843, that is obviously the date of the death of Amenhoteh the First and so on. In short, whatever your number is you have but to loook it up in a book of history, connect an event with it, learn the event, memorize the date, and the thing is done. In such a case be careful not to say to the operator: "Give me the landing of the Pilgrim fathers, Uptown-W."

Here is a more intricate problem in which the student of memory may surprise his friends with the brilliance of his performance,—I refer to the power to memorize a long and disconnected series of names. The best illustration or at least the most familiar, is the series of the names of the presidents of the United States in order of office.

Order of the Presidents.

When we apply the principle of association to this, what appears an almost insuperable task is easily overcome. Take the first link in the china. We want to remember that after Washington comes Adams. Can it be done? Yes, by association. We connect with the word Washington anything that it suggests, and then something that that suggests, and so on till we happen to get to Adams—

Washington evidently suggests washing.

Washing evidently suggests laundry.

The Bible begins with Adam.

How ridicuously simple!

In conclusion I may say that if any reader of this journal will send me fifty cents, I will either (aa) forward to him by post my entire system of memory, or (b) send him back his fifty cents, or (c) keep his fifty cents and say nothing about it. If his memory is so weak as to need a system he will have forgotten his fifty cents anyway.

Science and the Universe

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

It is a question which will never have, perhaps, any "practical" value, though it will always be of enormous interest to curious minds, whether or not the physical universe is infinite in extent. This was one of the things debated at the recent meeting of the most learned boly of men in of the most learned body of men in Association for the Advancement of Science.

Those who took part in the discussion might reply, if accused of wasting their time, "Well, what we gain in mental expansion through such discussion we may carry into a future state of existence to serve as a foundation for future growth, but what you call useful things, like money and machinery, certainly stop on the edge of the grave."

With great earnestness the astronomer and mathematician, F. R Moulton, of the University of Chicago, attacked this question with the frank avowal, to begin with, that no final answer can be given to it, "either now or in the future."

In his avowal there was concealed the true spirit of science which is completely misunderstood by many persons. This spirit is no slave. Neither is it an apprentice bound to the leather apron strings of the giant blacksmith that the popular imagination often mistakes for science.

The immense contributions that the spirit of science affords to industry are only incidental by-products of its work. It willingly and gladly makes these contributions, but if it were forced to hold them for its chief aim, its arm would quickly lose its strength and its hand its cunning.

It was in accordance with the true scientific spirit, which hopes for no other result than to be forever presssing onward, its joy being in progress and not in moveless finality, that Professor Moulton presented his ideas of the infinity of the universe. Science advances into the unknown by the aid of postulates and hypotheses. But it drops its postulates and hypotheses like used-up sticks when they no longer help it onward. It is for that that many who do not understand science accuse it. They do not comperhend that aids to truth may be worn out, in its fullness, unattainable.

If, said Professor Moulton, the universe be built up of an unending succession of cosmic units (cosmic meaning only "pertaining to the universe"), which at each stage make larger units, as electrons make up atoms, atoms make up molecules, molecules make up worlds, worlds make up solar systems, solar systems make up galaxies, galaxies make up super-galaxies, and so on—each unit separated from its neighbors by distances that are great compared to their diameters.—then the universe is not only infinite in extent, but it has an infinite number of each type of cosmic units; the total mass is infinite; there is no center or absolute position in it; and it may have infinite duration, both past and future. Taking this view of the universe we must regard all phenomena as in a general way cyclical, or recurrent.

In these breathless heights of philosophy the adventurous mind gradually becomes acclimated. It accustoms itself, as happens with the lungs of climbers of lofty mountains, to sustain itself on lighter elements.

It is only after such exercise that things like the Einstein theory can be attacked. How, for instance, can the mind untrained in these intellectual flights hope to understand such conceptions as that to which one view of the Einstein theory has led—viz., that the universe is at the infinite and yet unlimited, or the dictum ethat where there is no matter there can be no space.

It is useless to try to furnish answers to those who ask for "a plain statement in ordinary language of just what the Einstein theory means." Yet these same persons most likely feel that it is easy enough to believe that the universe is infinite because common experience suggests that beyond every boundary there is always something more, even though it be only empty space.

Lack of Foresight.

(York News-Times.)

The sins of the fathers of American cities, town and villages were municipal near-sightedness and penury. The users of streets and public buildings are the losers.

How often it is lamented today that the persons responsible for the breadth of the streets and highways and for the capacity of its public buildings did not value foresight above bonded indebtedness and taxation. It is easier and cheapter to build for the future than for the future to tear down to meet the demands of the present.

Fifty years ago, when the majority of the American communities had already been planned or long established, present traffic conditions were undreamed of. The most of our thoroughfares were staked off for two lines of wagon traffic, with hitching posts and watering troughs at either side. A 40-foot street was a boulevard and an extravagance not to be tolerated by the taxpayers, but to be remembered as subsequent councilmanic elections. In the same manner were public buildings erected with public funds for present needs.

There is probably no community in the United States, no matter how large or small, which is not feeling the strangling influence of streets woefully too narrow and that has been forced, or soon will be, to enlarge or entirely rebuild one or more public buildings.

To right the traffic wrongs there have been many solutions suggested and employed. Some municipalities have expended millions in razing valuable buildings, condemning private land and slicing off business blocks to allow the widening of streets. Elevated sidewalks and roadways are being seriously contemplated in several of the larger cities.

The price we pay for blindness of our forefathers is immeasurable, but will the generations of tomorrow have the same charge to make against the community builders and planners of today.

What Is a Republican?

(Stottsbluff Star-Herald)

There seems to be divergence of opinion as to what really constitutes a republican. According to the Kearney Hub and one or two other publications in Nebraska a republican is not a republican unless he subscribes body, soul and breeches to everything that the old guard from New England and New York declare are the fundamental principles of that part, no matter if such principles are diametrically opposed to the welfare of Nebraska and Nebraskans. It required a good many years for some of the whigs to realize that the republican party was a necessity, but they finally did. It may require an even longer time for some of the old guard lovers of the present day to realize that unless a party keeps abreast of the necessities of the nation as they arise, it will pass as did the once powerful federals and even more powerful whigs. If they are really republicans in all that the word means, they will be for the progress of their party and urge it to keep step. If they are still harking back to the days of Garfield and McKinley, they will find themselves hopelessly out of date. The party took up and settled the problems that confronted it in those days, and it can take up and settle problems that confront it now, but it cannot do so by looking backward any more than the old guard advocates should show loyalty to that period by refusing to ride in an automobile and insisting on using a team and buckboard.

Here and There

Negro Slaveholders.

(Des Moines Register.)

It is a fact of importance that has been uncovered by the research department of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, when it finds that before the civil war 4,500 colored freedom owned slaves of their own race. Quite as valuable, too, is its discovery that nearly a half million negroes were free residents of this country before the emancipation proclamation was issued by President Lincoln in 1865. That was one-seventh of the entire colored population of the time, and it shows that the freeing of the whole number was not the sudden reversal of policy it has been made out to be. Most of these lived in the south, which would indicate that sentiment in that part of the country was not entirely averse to freedom for the slaves.

But the mind fixes on that owning of slaves by negro freedmen. It does not justify the white race, nor relieve it of the responsiblity for the institution of slavery on this continent. But it turns a light on human nature. There was brutality among the negro slaveholders as well as among those of the other race, the record shows. Many of them of course bought slaves as a matter of philanthropy, and liberated them. The Chicago Defender says that in many cases free husbands bought wives, and emancipated them, although occasionally the freeing of the wife was deylayed until it was made certain that she would be desirable as a permanent mate.

But there were colored masters guilty of exploiting the labor of their fellows as ruthlessly as they had been used by their former owners. There was actual competition among white and colored slaveholders in the number of such chattels. It is surprising to learn that most of these negro masters were settled in Louisiana, South Caroline, Maryland and Virginia, although mistreament of the freed negroes drove them ordinarily to free states or to the easier communities along the gulf coast.

Of course the negro had the example of the white man, and after all 4,500 is a small part of the several million colored people in the country before 1865. But the situation does support the belief that our faults are to be dealt with as human frailties, not individual perversions. Being the victim of brutality and injustice does not prevent man from being brutal and unjust. Few judgments are to be taken as conclusive against any man or group or race, in the present state of mankind.

To Fill the Air With Politics.

(New York Times.)

What is going to happen this summer and fall in the radio world is indicated clearly by the well-timed revelation that political orators who want to address larger audiences than any hall can hold may do so with the help of a kindly broadcasting station—may, that is, after going through the litle formality of paying for the service rendered.

It is W. E. Harkness head of the American Telephone and Telegraph company's broadcasting department who allowed this valuable piece of information to get out. He added to it that no political orator would be permitted to "take the air" for more than ten minutes at a time, and that the price would be $10 a minute. But that is not all. He warned those intending to use this facility in this way that their speeches, if the auditors are to notice in them anything except their defects of grammar and sentence construction, must be much more carefully prepared and worded than in the past has been the habit of the spellbinding fraternity. For "personality" will count for nothing in this form of persuasion, gesture will not help out incoherence or fill in hiatuses, and there ill be nothing to distract attention from the matter to the man.

It is very likely that the veterans of the hustings, the old political warhorses, will be unable to adapt themselves to these new requirements, and that another generation, young and amenable, will take over the noble task of proving that the very existence of the country depends on putting the rascals out or keeping the saints in, as the particular demand may be.

This, as the world's people put it, is all to the good. A broadcast speech cannot, of course, be subjected to the amount of study given to a printed one but at least the speaker thus—well, distributed—will be able to use none of his familiar platform tricks, and either must invent new ones or talk something approaching sense and logic. It even will be judicious for him to stick pretty closely to facts, hitherto such a small portion of the spellbinder's material. If he doesn't, he will become simply amusing for a few moments, ridiculous for a few more and then tiresome.

The State House Poet

Grant Shumway, state agriculture secretary, gave out Wednesday morning a humorous and poetical comeback at Land Commissioner Swanson on the question of who is responsible for the condition of walks and approaches on Capitol square, the overhead drip from runways connecting the two sections of the new capitol, and the fact that truck drivers have been permitted until the last few days to drive their heavy loads of sand and gravel up and down the flagstone walks to avoid going through mud and bumping over switch tracts. Here is Mr. Shumway's contribution:

"Newspaper boys are trying to make Dan and me mad. They have him about half mad, but not me. Not even if they go back to the ancient history when I stubbed my toe on a watermelon that ran out in the road right in front of me from the neighbor's patch; nor even though they find out I once captured a couple of green pears that were making their get-away from a neighbor's pear tree. Not even though they find I only got (for the state) $17,000 (where I tried to get a million) from potash royalties, (which Dan claims he secured because paid in after I went out of the land commissioner's office).

"Why should I be drawn into this controversy between Larson and Swanson I am not a candidate. What if I did say I was thinking of making garden on the sidewalk and irrigating it from the drip from the overhead 'flume'?

"Nevertheless, Dan can't 'pass the buck,' together with his constitutional responsibilities, so easily as recording a motion (by himself) made and adopted in a previous administration.

"The last legislature appropriated certain moneys for the up-keep of capitol and capitol grounds. At the organization of the board of educational lands and funds at the beginning of this bienium, Dan was made custodian of the capitol and grounds.

"Now boys don't try to make me mad,
You know it can't be "did",
Go try and made Dan Swanson glad,
It isn't right to kid
A fellow when he's worried pink,
'Cause L. A. Larson filed.
Just give a fellow chance to think,
And do not keep him riled.

His watching Bryan's door,
Nor water dripping from above,
Don't try to make him sore.
And on the sidewalk in the clay,
We'll plant our garden crops,
Beneath the dripping over-way,
We'll dodge between the drops."

Beatrice, Neb., March 6, 1924.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star: After reading Mrs. Meier's letter of March 3, I wish to give some of my early memories of Lincoln. I will be eighty-two years old in July, and when I came home from the civil war, I hired to a freighter at Nebraska City to drive a four-mule team to Julesburg, loaded with shelledl corn. We camped where Lincoln now is early in June, 1865, on the hill just east of where the Burlington depot now stands and as I remember there was only one house at that time. I well remember the old steam wagon road, and I well knew the man that made the old steam wagon, James Mitchell, of Osceola, Ia. But it failed to make as good time as the present day cars.

We failed to get to Julesburg with our corn, as the government troops at Fort Kearney took over our corn and turned us back on account of hostile Indians farther west. While I am not a resident of Lincoln and never have been, I often visit your city, and feel a pride in it. And when I look at the beautiful buildings and fine streets, it seems impossible that so much could be done in one man's lifetime. W. I. WEBSTER.

What Is a Progressive?

Havelock, Neb., March 6.

To the Editor of The Lincoln Star: What is a "progressive?" Who is a "progressive?" If we take the mouthings of J. L. Beebe and W. J. Taylor as law and gospel, the only true progressives are Beebe and Taylor, and the only progressive principles are those proclaimed by Beebe and Taylor.

I was much amused to see the challenge issued by Chairman Beebe to Governor Bryan, to debate the question whether Bryan is a fit man to be the candidate of Chairman Beebe's party. I am inclined to think that right now Governor Bryan's duties as governor may prevent him from debating with the Rev. Mr. Beebe, but at present I have plenty of time to accommodate the gentleman, and I should be very glad indeed to act as substitute for our worthy governor in this matter.

For no other governor in my recollection can compare with Charles W. Bryan in what he has done for the people of Nebraska (and is doing every day) and it raises my "dander" to see a bunch sneaking along behind him in the hope of snapping him when he is not looking.

Beebe is surely the last man on earth to raise any question as to who is a progressive. Regardless of the position he holds, Beebe is right now hand in glove with the reactionaries. He cannot successfully deny that he is working secretly—if not openly— for the success of Graff and Sloan, neither of whom can by the wildest stretch of the imagination be regarded as progressive.

Frankly, I haven't much use for Messrs. Beebe and Taylor politically. I've watched their tactics too often to take any stock at all in their professions of being progresive. And so I'd dearly love to debate against the two at the same time and in the same towns mentioned in Chairman Beebe's challenge to Governor Bryan—Omaha, Lincoln, Grand Island, and North Platte.

But I'd wish to make a slight modification in the question for debate. And to put it somewhat formally, I challenge J. L. Beebe and W. J. Taylor to debate the following questions, I to uphold the affirmative and they to take the negative.

"Resolved, that J. L. Beebe and W. J. Taylor did more than any other two men in Nebraska to aid in the election of a reactionary legislature in the fall of 1922, and thereby defeat the purpose of Charles W. Bryan in his program to abolish the civil administrative code, and to bring about adequate tax reduction."

This will effectively raise the question as to who is a progressive. And before I get through with these gentlemen in the debate (if they have "sand" enough to accept my challenge) I shall show that their game is now—and was two years ago—to divide the progresive forces in Nebraska and thus enable the reactionaries to win.

Messrs. Beebe and Taylor, dare you debate this question with me? We need no committee on arrangements. We three can arrange the dates and places and division of time; and each can pay his third of the expenses. Do you dare come out in the open and defend Graff and Sloan? I. W. JACOBY.

Farewell.

My pals and pards—my friends of woe,
I now must leave you one and all,
The fates decree that I may go,
Where prison shadows never fall.

Yet, as I wander o'er the land,
Helpless, humble and in despair,
I feel the mark—the fettered brand—
The fangs of a man's venomous lair.

Or should I walk in freedom's pride,
And live in a mansion of stone,
The gift of wealth could never hide—
The sorrows you bear all alone.

You bear the load while I go free—
Yet, my heart feels the weight of woe;
I kneel in prayer at mother's knee—
Her love your peace of soul bestow.

Where can I go to kill the shame?
Where can I cleanse the prison taint?
Friends are proud of their spotless names—
Forgiveness is but for the Saint.

So I am marked in flesh and bone—
Marked by man for Eden's disgrace;
Until the grave must claim its own—

Carolyn Airy Chosen Queen of The Reds in 1924 Competition Of Order of the Golden Fleece

"Snip, snip, , the barber's snipping,
Snip on, barber, snip away,
At the Lincoln beauty ships
Fall our auburn-tinted mops,

This was a chant raised by members at the 1924 competition of the Order of the Golden Fleece, held yesterday noon at Ellen Smith hall. The "bobbing bug" was a recurring topic. Last year when the prize for the "most fascinating bob" was offered for the first time, there were fewer than a dozen eligibles present. This year the bobbed who were in attendance far outnumbered the unbobbed.

A hundred people were present including students of the University of Nebraska, faculty, judges, and out-of-town guests. Most of them came freshly groomed from the beauty shops, which always work overtime before a Golden Fleece luncheon. Their hair exhibited all imaginable shades of red as they sat about the luncheon table.

The twelve prizes awarded yesterday were adjusted as follows:

Out-of-town guests at the luncheon were, Eva Miller Grimes, Mary Gant and Helen Devore of Omaha; Mrs H. D. Landis of Seward, Mrs. Franz Radke of Tecumseh, Miss Ethel Woods of Diller, and Miss Myrtle Olson of Genoa.

These and the following constituted the judges for the twelve events: Mrs. Samuel Avery, Mrs. F. F. Teal, Mrs. Philip Slaymaker, Mrs. J. C Russell, Mrs. F. E. Wolfe, Mrs. J. P. Senning, Mrs. G. I. Peltier, Miss Leuvicy Hill, Miss Laura Pfeiffer, Miss Sue Stille, Miss Grace Long, Miss N. J. Compton, Miss Virginia Zimmer, Miss Florence Teager, Mrs. Parvin Witte.

Donors of Prizes.

The following admirers of red hair were donors of the twelve prizes: Mrs. Maurice Deutsch, who gave the prize for the queen of the reds, (Don Marquis' "Sonnets to a Red-Haired Woman"), Mrs. Samuel Avery, who gave the prize for the fieriest freshman (a pocket flash light), Miss Mary Gant, who gave the prize for the best-coiffured red-haired girl, Miss Elsie Fitzgerald, who gave the prize for the most fascinating freckles, Mrs. Everet Sawyer, who gave the prize for the most devilish dark eyes, Mrs F. F. Teal, Miss Stella Kirker, Miss N J. Compton, Miss Grace Long, Miss Elsie Cather, Miss Lenore Burkett, and Mrs. Charles Lee of Buffalo, New York.

The eligibility rules for membership in the Golden Fleece are as follows:

"Any girl student of the University of Nebraska may belong and compete who has tresses falling within the range of the following twenty-eight tints, provided that she is not a 'chemical' or 'medical': Squash, carrot, pumpkin, orange, tangerine, vermillion, brick, ruby, scarlet, flamingo, garnet, crimson, maroon, wine, copper, auburn, henna, mahogany, magneta, sorrel, strawberry, roan, russet, cerise, carnation, salmon, apricot, shrimp pink, and pink. Those having hues of lemon, taffy, putty or ginger are barred as 'nears' at one end of the prism, and those having hair of insipid brown, quite lacking a red tinge, are barred at the other end."

Part I.

Grimes
"Turn on the Lights," Eva Miller
"Scissored Locks," Helen Darling.
"Heroes with Henna Hair," Dorothy Teal.
"Our Harsh and Gaudy Hues," Margaret Clatterbuck.

Part II

Song and dance, "That Red-Headed Gal," Lucile Hill.
Poem, "Sun-Kist," Magdalen Craft Radke.
Recital and dance, Frances Carrothers.

Mrs. Grimes, who as Eva Miller, was the real founder of the organization in 1917, told of the first meeting, and the committee of arrangements, which included Elizabeth Brown, daughter of E. P. Brown of Davey, and Melba Quigley now of Peoria, Ill. There were a few over thirty present at the first luncheon and but one prize was offered, which went to Florence Williams, of U-Cross, Wyo.

Helen Darling exhibited severed locks belonging to Elizabeth Kennedy, many times champion of the reds, Cathleen and Carolyn Airy, Frances Botkin, Margaret Gettys, Margaret Clatterbuck, and Pauline Campbell. She urged those who bobbed their hair to leave a strand for the archives of the society. At the close of her speech some poems by the "celebrated poetess Carpathia Punk" were read, on the subject of bobbed hair. The refrain of one of them, sung by Margaret Gettys, was quoted at the opening.

Poems by Mrs. Lee.

Next followed the reading of a dozen poems by Mrs. Mrs. Charles Lee of Buffalo, N. Y., who has served for many years as laureate for the awarding of the prizes. By this time she has composed more than thirty poems for the event.

Three staple numbers necessary for the education of the new members were given. Dorothy Teal recounted the famous men and women —"head-lights of history"—who had auburn locks. Margaret Clatterbuck expounded the psychology of the red-haired girl. Lorna Plympton read the vision of the red-haired in panorama written for the Golden Fleece a few years ago by H. L. Mencken, dedicated to it, and later printed in the Smart Set Mr Mencken is now editor of the American Mercury.

A number having special literary interest came from the pen of Magdalen Craft Radke of Tecumseh. In preceding years Mrs Radke has written of "Sweet Auburn, loveliest plumage of the plain," "Of what shade was the hair of Lydia E Pinkham," and "Beauty draws us with a single hair." She wrote last year of "Rainbow Gold." Her subject this year was "Sun-Kist". Her composition said in part:

"The Princess in the fairy tale,
The poster lady in the bill,
Greek Venus rising from the sea,
Norse Freya on a cloudy hill,—
All figures these that men have made
From shadowed wish and dim desire—
Have one strange bond in that they all
Go helmeted in Heaven's fire.
Sun-kissed their tresses; golden fleece,
The dreams of men have ever sought;
Some golden Helen, shining-haired,
Must overlook the battles fought.

An thus in high and proud romance,
In talisman, in temple prayer,
Lovers have even set their faith
On that fair one with golden hair.

And truth, there's reason for their pains;
Red hair has always covered brains."

Mrs. Radke thought that many of the great tragedies of romance have been avoided—

"If the fair lady of the twain

Mrs. Radke told of Masterlinck's Pelleas and Melisande; and of Romeo and Juliet. She said:

"These star-crossed lovers Veronese
Need not have lived to lines like these:
A family feud; a secret marriage
Messages all but lost in carriage,
A duel; a death; a rendvezous
At the family vault; and Montague
Falls on his sword, and when he's died
There's naught for the lady but suicide.
They might have been a happy pair
Had Juliet only had red hair."

A song and dance number was given by Lucile Hill, who sang the popular "That Red-Headed Gal," winning much applause. Frances Carrothers, long the heroine of the organization, recited and danced with her usual spontaneity and charm. Preceding luncheons of the organization have had for musical numbers, "My Love Is Like the Red Red Rose," "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "Sorrel Threads Among the Gold," "No Putty Heads Among the Reds," and last year it had "Shimmering Fleece," composed for the luncheon by B D. Scott of University Place

The committee of arrangements for the 1924 Golden Fleece luncheon consisted of Lorna Plympton, Carolyn Airy, Elizabeth Langworthy, Alice Parsons, Frances Carrothers, Margaret Gettys, and for faculty members, Laura Pfeiffer and Louise Pound.

Following are the "Red-Head Verses," composed in honor of the luncheon and competition of the Golden Fleece, by Jessie Beghtol Lee:

The Queen.

Salute! Salaam!
The Queen of reds I am;
My scepter's whacks, on serfs' bent backs,
Most lustily I wham.
Serene I preen,
Of all the Reds the Queen!
Adored by them, my diadem
Graces my bright brow's sheen.

The Most Fascinating Red Hair.

A silken tendril curling o'er the ear,
A scarlet shaft of sun upon my crown,

The Most Hair in the World.

Nature laid on my hair with a lavish hand.
Others wear red hair but never enough

The Fieriest Freshman.

When I went off to college to cultivate my dome,
My parents said, "Take every prize and send 'em promptly home!"
I never worked at Latin and Math I just despise;

To the Most Fascinating Bob.

Shears and a barber, a simple job.

For the Girl with the Most Fascinating Freckles.

Upon my nose, close to the tip,
Behind my ear at the edge of my hair
Lurks a big brown one the shape of a bear;)
Near my right eye, where all can see,

The Girl with the Most Bewitching Green Eyes.

My glance like a wave from the summer sea
Bewitches all those who lay eyes on me.
As clear and as cool and as green as a wave,
I engulf my victims—then let' em rave.

The Near Lemon.

Hooray! Hooray! I drew a prize today;—
Just think, had I been taffy, or blonde, or even ash,
Or golden tan or yellow—O spare me from such trash!

The Near Brown.

Almost a brown, they called me,
Barely within the fold;
But they gave me a prize to dry my eyes,
And they gave me hope, these judges,
In another year or so,
What with henna rinse and the juice of quince

The Nearest Orange.

To sport orange locks of such brilliance as these,
To shimmer by day to dazzle by night,

The Most Devilish Dark Eyes.

Huge Obstacles Face Chinese Girls Says Lincoln Visitor

Miss Florence Sutton, an English girl, visited in Lincoln over last week end on her trip across the continent in the interests of her work among the girls and women of China. Miss Sutton is a national Y. W. C. A. worker in China. Through her position there she has gained an interesting insight into the narrow, pitiable life of the Chinese girl hedged in by traditions, family pride and exacting supervision by parents. Not for her is a happy, gay, care-free existence like that of a popular, pretty bobbed hair co-ed of the University of Nebraska. Their lives are separated by almost unsurmountable barriers.

"In all of great China with its millions of population there are only two universities which are co-educational," said Miss Sutton. One is in Nanking and the other is in Peking. The enrollmen of women in Nanking university with which Miss Sutton is well acquainted is 400. There are mission schools where girls from Christian families are taught some of the branches of learning such as are taught American and English girls but with comparatively few exceptions, a college education for women in China is though entirely unnecessary. The girls of the wealthy classes receive their education at home from native teachers and then only the elementary education which has been taught for centuries.

"They may teach and there are a few women lawyers and doctors in some parts of China but they are rare," Miss Sutton continued. "Many girls enter Y. W. C. A. work and under the direction of an English or American secretary carry on the work sponsored and financed by these foreign countries. In Shanghai women are to be found in banks and shops but conditions in Shanghai, which has been greatly affected by foreign inmfluences, cannot be taken as typical of China. Chinese girls are eager to learn and once given the opportunity makes wonderful progress. Their minds are keen and they are quick to grasp every advantage."

The Chinese girl may follow the girl of today in her quest for education but she continues to cling to her picturesque dress and does not adopt the one worn by her English or American sister. Very immodest to her appears the evening dress with its extreme low neck, sometimes backless and almost always sleeveless. Though she may wear her little trousers very short and she does do that her jackets have collars that fit tight around the neck and it is only the more daring who at times wear a little round neck cut no lower than a Peter Pan collar.

Miss Sutton was the guest of Mrs. T. F. A. Williams. This was her first visit to this country and Vera Barger, Ethel Hartley and Genevieve Lowry connected with Y. W. C. A. work in China and co-workers of Miss Sutton form the connecting link in the acquaintance between Miss Sutton and Mrs. Williams.

Huge Obstacles Face Chinese Girls Says Lincoln Visitor

Miss Florence Sutton, an English girl, visited in Lincoln over last week end on her trip across the continent in the interests of her work among the girls and women of China. Miss Sutton is a national Y. W. C. A. worker in China. Through her position there she has gained an interesting insight into the narrow, pitiable life of the Chinese girl hedged in by traditions, family pride and exacting supervision by parents. Not for her is a happy, gay, care-free existence like that of a popular, pretty bobbed hair co-ed of the University of Nebraska. Their lives are separated by almost unsurmountable barriers.

"In all of great China with its millions of population there are only two universities which are co-educational," said Miss Sutton. One is in Nanking and the other is in Peking. The enrollmen of women in Nanking university with which Miss Sutton is well acquainted is 400. There are mission schools where girls from Christian families are taught some of the branches of learning such as are taught American and English girls but with comparatively few exceptions, a college education for women in China is though entirely unnecessary. The girls of the wealthy classes receive their education at home from native teachers and then only the elementary education which has been taught for centuries.

What is open to girls who have persevered and completed a course at one of the universities? Not such a large field, Miss Sutton explained.

"They may teach and there are a few women lawyers and doctors in some parts of China but they are rare," Miss Sutton continued. "Many girls enter Y. W. C. A. work and under the direction of an English or American secretary carry on the work sponsored and financed by these foreign countries. In Shanghai women are to be found in banks and shops but conditions in Shanghai, which has been greatly affected by foreign inmfluences, cannot be taken as typical of China. Chinese girls are eager to learn and once given the opportunity makes wonderful progress. Their minds are keen and they are quick to grasp every advantage."

The Chinese girl may follow the girl of today in her quest for education but she continues to cling to her picturesque dress and does not adopt the one worn by her English or American sister. Very immodest to her appears the evening dress with its extreme low neck, sometimes backless and almost always sleeveless. Though she may wear her little trousers very short and she does do that her jackets have collars that fit tight around the neck and it is only the more daring who at times wear a little round neck cut no lower than a Peter Pan collar.

I Found Youth

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Millions of women marvel at my youthful beauty. I have been 40 years in the limelight, and 32 years a stage star. Yet I still look a girl of 19 I still play youthful parts, and was never more winsome than now.

These things I owe to France. Her experts made me a famous beauty. They have kept my youthful bloom And those same helps have done like things for many of my friends.

I know they can bring to millions new beauty and new youth. So I have arranged so all who wish may get them.

The Supreme help

Many years ago French beauty experts taught me the use of clay. They used then crude and muddy clays, like many still employ. But even those clays multiplied my beauty.

Since then, able scientists have perfected clay by 20 years of study. They have found the right clay—a rare mineral-laden clay—which bring maximum results.

The have found ways to refine it, to remove the useless mud Their new-type clay is white and clean and dainty.

They have discovered added fatcors which bring manifold effects. The clay I now use—my White Youth Clay—makes other clays seem very crude indeed.

Amazing effects

It draws the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is that rosy aftergrow which so amazes new users

It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores Many women, in 30 minutes, seem to drop ten years And my youthful bloom and contours show what constant use will do.

A beauty essential

Clay is an essential to beauty at its best. Also to continued youth. Women who omit it cannot hope to compare with women who employ it. Every girl and woman owes to herself this help

But crude clays are out of date. My new-type clay — the very utmost in a facial clay—is now at your command.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Clay is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters Price, 50c and $1 per tube. Also my Youth Cream, which should follow the clay. Also my Facial Youth my famous Liquid cleanser Also my Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. My Beauty Book comes with each

Learn, for your own sake, how much these helps can do If the first package fails to delight you, your dealer will return its price.

I Found Youth
By Edna Wallace Hopper

Millions of women marvel at my youthful beauty. I have been 40 years in the limelight, and 32 years a stage star. Yet I still look a girl of 19. I still play youthful parts, and was never more winsome than now.

These things I owe to France. Her experts made me a famous beauty. They have kept my youthful bloom. And those same helps have done like things for many of my friends.

I know they can bring to millions new beauty and new youth. So I have arranged so all who wish may get them.

The Supreme help

Many years ago French beauty experts taught me the use of clay. They used then crude and muddy clays, like many still employ. But even those clays multiplied my beauty.

Since then, able scientists have perfected clay by 20 years of study. They have found the right clay—a rare mineral-laden clay—which bring maximum results.

The have found ways to refine it, to remove the useless mud. Their new-type clay is white and clean and dainty.

They have discovered added fatcors which bring manifold effects. The clay I now use—my White Youth Clay—makes other clays seem very crude indeed.

Amazing effects

It draws the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is that rosy aftergrow which so amazes new users.

It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. Many women, in 30 minutes, seem to drop ten years. And my youthful bloom and contours show what constant use will do.

A beauty essential

Clay is an essential to beauty at its best. Also to continued youth. Women who omit it cannot hope to compare with women who employ it. Every girl and woman owes to herself this help.

But crude clays are out of date. My new-type clay — the very utmost in a facial clay—is now at your command.

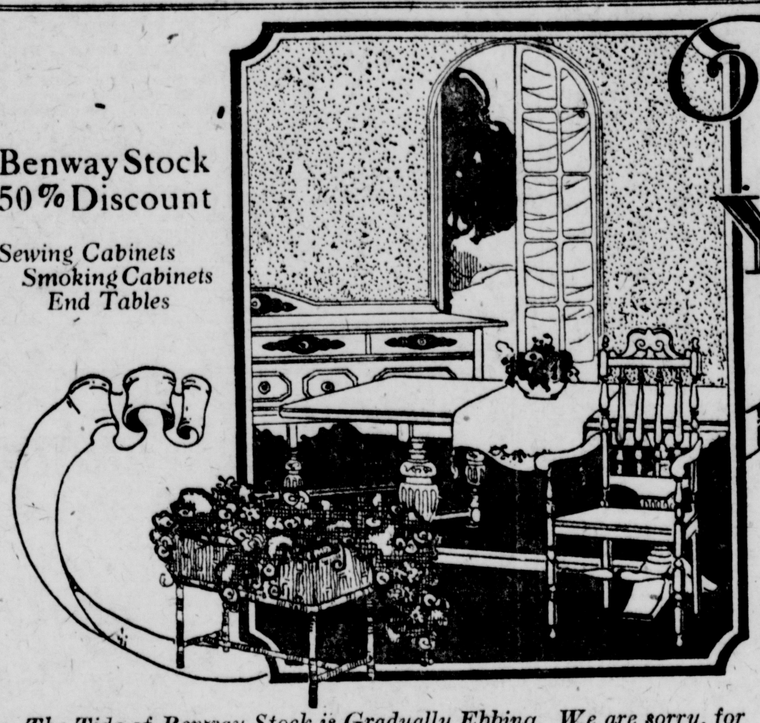

Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Clay is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. Price, 50c and $1 per tube. Also my Youth Cream, which should follow the clay. Also my Facial Youth my famous Liquid cleanser. Also my Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. My Beauty Book comes with each.

Learn, for your own sake, how much these helps can do. If the first package fails to delight you, your dealer will return its price.

Mothers Should Keep Their Fingers Out of the Pie Of Matrimonial Experience Which Their Daughters and Sons Are Making — Large Families And A Woman's Work Are Other Subjects Discussed Today.

Blush of Shame.

Dear Minerva: It ought to bring the blush of shame to the cheeks of Americans to read that, over in Germany, where divorce is just beginning to make its deadly inroads upon the home, the newspapers, the herr professors, moralists, and publicists are pleading with the people not to allow the institution of marriage to "become Americanized." A certain religious periodical, commenting on this, says: "Our nation has to acknowledge that it has in practice degraded the holy institution of marriage as it has never been degraded in any other country in modern times We devoutly hope that Germany will not become Americanized in this particular. Unless we change our attitude toward marriage we will become a stench and a byword among the righteous men and women of all nations."

Think of our national record as revealed by the latest statistics: 80,000 divorce orphans every year, more divorces granted in America than in any other nation of the world; our divorce rate seven times higher than that of Europe, and divorce increasing ore and one-third times as fast as our population Isn't that shameful? And we call ourselves a Christian nation: we assume to be civilized and enlightened.

Within the last two years, in this state, a man of sixty-two was divorced by his wife on grounds of cruelty. She had borne him nine or ten children, and most of them were married and had families of their own. In the words of the wife, "the man who had sworn to cherish and protect her turned his back on her as soon as she had passed the flower of her youth," and had eyes only for younger women. She is broken in health, broken in heart, and lives with some of the younger children, one of those human derelicts the American idea of marriage so frequently turns out. The nasty old wretch who is responsible for her poor health married again; he found a younger woman, a grass or sod widow with four children, who was low enough to have him, and before the second marriage was legalized the mother of four had disgraced her womanhood by becoming the mother of a fifth child.

Where rests the blame for this sort of thing? How can anyone sit calmly by, unconcerned, while these unholy alliances go unchallenged? What are our ministers thinking of that they can desecrate God's law by uniting people who had no scriptural reason for their divorce?

This same periodical says further: "The paramount phase of the question to the Christian is the clear message of the New Testament regarding it. Complete divorce can be granted scripturally only for adultery. The minister of the gospel, with courage and backbone, can aid materially in solving the problem. Instead of weakly bowing to court decrees, and basely consenting to marry and remarry the divorced, he should, even at the risk of his popularity, perform only scriptural marriages."

Must we who know what the word of God teaches on this matter conclude that our ministers are all cowards, truckling to the opinion of the base and worldly? How can these shepherds of the flock expect respect when they fail so signally in holding aloft the banner of Christ? Are we a nation of cowards? It might help a lot to stop the tide of divorce if everybody who has confessed Christ and made professions of Christianity would refuse to give financial support to any minister who marries an unscripturally divorced person. If all our law-makers, ministers, church members, and court officials would put on a "Back to the Bible" crusade in the matter of divorce, insisting on compliance with God's law, America would soon become Christian in deed as well as in name.

HARRIET.

Unfair Influence.

Dear Minerva: After reading the letters of "Matilda" and "Well Wisher" I want to express my feelings I know two cases of two young men in our city where the wives' mothers influenced them to leave their husbands.

Minerva, it was a shame and a knock to any young man who is contemplating on establishing a home These two young men are both in their twenties and are neighbor boys of ours. I have known them from boyhood and they are chums of my children. Both young men are of the highest character, good workers, and both hold good positions for young men of their age. Their married life was positively alike. One young man kissed his wife goodbye as usual when he went to work and when he came home for his dinner she had gone. The other young man's wife left and after a few days sent him a message saying that she did not want to ever see or hear from him again.

Minerva, how can a young man have the heart to enter into the matrimonial game when he sees failures of this kind every day

Why should a girl's mother visit her home and find all kinds of fault with her daughter's husband, criticise him and poison the daughter's love for the young man when she took the marriage vow to love and trust him for better or for worse. Many a young man is today crying in his very nature for a home and a wife and a family but he is afraid to stem the tide of the demands of the modern "Matilda" or "Matilda's" mother.

Minerva, one young man's wife told me in my own home that her husband is not cruel and treats her all right and that all the trouble is that she has found out that she does not care to go on through with married life, that she preferred teaching school and being with her mother who lived in a larger city some 500 miles away She even told me she thought every time she went home to see her mother, the call of home and the mountains were beckoning her to return and that she was losing all love and respect for her husband.

Minerva, I watched this case very closely and I observed the girl's mother came to visit her and soon afterward the girl left her husband and went home and is now teaching.

How can this young man have the initiative to go ahead in this world of competition? There is a good deal of truth in the saying that a "woman either makes or breaks a man." This young man's wife should never have married him if she had not intended t olive with him And if she was going to be influenced by her mother to leave him and return ome to help her make a living. Any school board should be criticised for hiring a teacher who does not have enough womanhood to stand by her husband who was making a home and who cared for her. Do parents want to send their children to an instructor of this type?

If this young man's wife had had good visions of her duty and a little religion mixed with it, strewn with a little common sense, and if the young man had taken a firm stand against the influence of this hypocritical mother-in-law who poisoned his wife's love for him and made her dissatisfied with her lot, a happy home could have been preserved.

Minerva, can this young man help but think of the female side of the race as cowards and weaklings, fit for nothing but to raise trouble for man? But these young men should not think this for there are a lot of them still living who are true and loyal to their husbands.

Minerva, if ever a divorce is applied for by these young men I only hope that I may have the opportunity to tell the judge the life history of these two young women.

Should business men or school boards take back girls on their former positions when they leave their homes in this way? BEATRICE.

A I hardly think that business men or men on school boards could set themselves up as judges to pass on the merits and demerits of the reasons that married women have for asking for their old jobs. And certainly there are times when these old jobs are life savers, when a girl is justified in leaving her married life, or forced to do so.

But it is very wrong indeed for a mother to interfere with the married life of either a son or daughter. A great deal of unhappiness has been caused in this manner. No matter how difficult it is to do, I believe in the hands-off policy for mothers

Though a couple may seem to be having great difficulties it is often just an adjusting process and a safe and sane life of married happiness and usefulness will emerge if there are no outside disturbances.

"Might Have Been."

Dear Minerva: I have a word to say to "Oddity."

Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these "You might have been." "Oddity," you might have been a sensible man (if there are any) but judging from the letter you wrote, good common sense is one of the chief characteristics which you lack.

You certainly believe in extreme admiration for yourself, but did you ever stop to think that you might be the one and only person who admires you?

You never can tell what a feminine smile means. They are hard to figure out. At the same time that this so-called cave woman was smiling upon your manly countenance she might have been amused at your self conceited appearance instead of admiring your rare beauty.

Alas, you openly profess to return the smile. Is it any worse for her to smile upon you than for you to "grin" in return. I say "grin" because I think you are ignorant of the difference between a smile and a grin. Look them up.

You realy intend to marry? The girls are not so easy to get as you may think. From my opinion of you no one would fall very hard for you if she thinks anything of herself at all.

My advice to you is that you stay home and be "mama's angel child" and don't let the feminine smiles cop you. This is leap year and it is not quite safe for the very popular boy that you are to be running loose.

If you had not stated your age one would think you were a mere child not yet out of high school. But for a man past twenty you are absolutely impossible Nevertheless you will live and learn.

Perhaps you think "Oddity" is the eloquence of beauty. Oh, well, "Where ignorance is bliss, it's folly to be wise." However, I wish you the best of success and hope that no girl happens to have the misfortune to break a leg running after you.

I'M JUST A KID.

A. In regard to the query about coins, I do not find any information to the effect that a reward is being offered for the coins you mention. It is a mistake, I am sure.

Our Own Salvation.

Dear Minerva: You may think I am a fanatic on the subject, and maybe I am But, scientific work among the poor would be my chosen life work providing I had the money.

As the paper stated the other day the "stork and the wolf work the same neighborhood"

The idea that birth control is interfering with God's business is too ignorant for anyone to accept. There is a limit to the number of children a man can support and if he does not know what this limit is (as the nursery increases in his family) there ought to be some power to do his thinking for him, if what he has in his head happens to be petrified ivory.

It says as much in the Bible that the works of God are good, and this means without exception. Does God rejoice and call it good when he sees the intense suffering of little children because they are cold, hungry and nameless?

The general belief is that a houseful of children is all right because God said "replenish the earth." But did he tell us to bring blind children and cripples into the world?

He is no more to blame for the family where there are ten than he is for the blind ones that come from diseased parents God provides us with things in this world to work with and, what we accomplish is either a curse or a blessing. If God sends children into the world as he sees fit (as so many accuse him of doing) why does he send babies to people out of wedlock?

God punishes us for lusts of the flesh and the parents with six children or more, are certainly punished before it is over. But the deplorable part is that the children suffer too, "sins of the fathers," the Bible says.

God has provided us with material and expects us to work out our own salvation in whatever we do, and he is no more responsible for our mistakes than a chemist would be responsible for the death of a man who has drunk a poison invented by the former to be used for perfectly sensible purposes. ROSE.

Knows Woman's Troubles.

Dear Minerva: I am a man age 32, have batched ten years or more, so I presume I have had some experience of what a woman has to do There are so many men that don't ever give a thought to a woman's work. I have heard men say that woman has nothing to do. I am sure anyone that has batched won't say that. I often wonder how a woman can do as much as some do or most of them do.

I hope this letter will do someone some good as I surely would not have written otherwise. I do work outside and in and am nearly always in good spirits, lots of the time singing a song or whistling a tune. I often think how happy a man should be, having a mate to help and that he should try to make life worth while.

Don't be ashamed to take your wife to church or any place. If she was good enough to marry she should be good enough to go any place. We all need enjoyment, and particularly a woman who stands over a hot stove day in and day out needs a change.

I shall write more some other time as this is my first letter. I hope it won't do any harm if it doesn't do any good. A BATCH

The Operation I Avoided—

MRS. IDA M. COFFMAN
SIDELL, ILL.

IF there is one thing more than another a woman dreads, it is a surgical operation, and to be told that one is necessary, is very disheartening.

Hospitals are grand institutions, and undoubtedly many operations are necessary. However, we have received hundreds of letters from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after an operation had been deemed advisable.

Every woman who suffers as Mrs. Coffman did naturally wishes to avoid an operation if possible, and the remarkable statements which she makes in her letter will be read with interest by women everywhere.

Mrs. Coffman's Letter Follows:

SIDELL, ILLINOIS.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side which was noticeable at all time but sometimes it was almost unbearable and I could not even let the bed-clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years but not so badly until the last 18 months, and had become so rundown that I cared for nobody and would rather have died than live. I couldn't do my work without help and the doctor told me that an operation was all there was left for me. I would not consent to that so my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my housework and had a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house and when my two little girls reach womanhood I shall advise them to take it."—MRS. IDA M. COFFMAN, R. R. No. 2, Sidell, Illinois.

Another Operation Avoided

DAYTON, OHIO.—"I was sick for eight weeks and had three doctors. They told me I would have to be operated upon before I would be any better. My sister told me about the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In one week's time I began to feel better. I took seven bottles of it and also some of the Liver Pills and used your Sanative Wash and I soon gained my health. I recommend your medicines to all women who feel bodly and have troubles of this kind and I will answer all letters sent to me by women."—MRS. GRACE B. GILLEM, 270 Valley Street, Dayton, Ohio.

A hat with a saucy little brim from beneath which a mature face will look girlishly charming is actually an investment in happiness. Mayer Bros. They also make a specialty of large head sizes for women, and they have so many styles that are truly becoming.

But listen! If you have a hat that you just adored, but can't wear it any more because it looks faded and worn, take it to Mayer's and have their designer tell you how to make it new. They make a specialty of retrimming old hats.

Luxury and Comfort Important in Cars.

The upholstery is beautiful, and the equipment is most adequate. The whole car speaks of quality and finished workmanship. I'll just rare you to go in and look at it!

As I hardly think that business men or men on school boards could set themselves up as judges to pass on the merits and demerits of the reasons that married women have for asking for their old jobs. And certainly there are times when these old jobs are life savers, when a girl is justified in leaving her married life, or forced to do so.

But it is very wrong indeed for a mother to interfere with the married life of either a son or daughter. A great deal of unhappiness has been caused in this manner. No matter how difficult it is to do, I believe in the hands-off policy for mothers.

Though a couple may seem to be having great difficulties it is often just an adjusting process and a safe and sane life of married happiness and usefulness will emerge if there are no outside disturbances.

"Might Have Been."

Dear Minerva: I have a word to say to "Oddity."

Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: "You might have been." "Oddity," you might have been a sensible man (if there are any) but judging from the letter you wrote, good common sense is one of the chief characteristics which you lack.

You certainly believe in extreme admiration for yourself, but did you ever stop to think that you might be the one and only person who admires you?

You never can tell what a feminine smile means. They are hard to figure out. At the same time that this so-called cave woman was smiling upon your manly countenance she might have been amused at your self conceited appearance instead of admiring your rare beauty.

Alas, you openly profess to return the smile. Is it any worse for her to smile upon you than for you to "grin" in return. I say "grin" because I think you are ignorant of the difference between a smile and a grin. Look them up.

You realy intend to marry? The girls are not so easy to get as you may think. From my opinion of you no one would fall very hard for you if she thinks anything of herself at all.

My advice to you is that you stay home and be "mama's angel child" and don't let the feminine smiles cop you. This is leap year and it is not quite safe for the very popular boy that you are to be running loose.

If you had not stated your age one would think you were a mere child not yet out of high school. But for a man past twenty you are absolutely impossible. Nevertheless you will live and learn.

Perhaps you think "Oddity" is the eloquence of beauty. Oh, well, "Where ignorance is bliss, it's folly to be wise." However, I wish you the best of success and hope that no girl happens to have the misfortune to break a leg running after you.

I'M JUST A KID.

A. In regard to the query about coins, I do not find any information to the effect that a reward is being offered for the coins you mention. It is a mistake, I am sure.

Our Own Salvation.

Dear Minerva: You may think I am a fanatic on the subject, and maybe I am. But scientific work among the poor would be my chosen life work providing I had the money.

As the paper stated the other day the "stork and the wolf work the same neighborhood."

The idea that birth control is interfering with God's business is too ignorant for anyone to accept. There is a limit to the number of children a man can support and if he does not know what this limit is (as the nursery increases in his family) there ought to be some power to do his thinking for him, if what he has in his head happens to be petrified ivory.

It says as much in the Bible that the works of God are good, and this means without exception. Does God rejoice and call it good when he sees the intense suffering of little children because they are cold, hungry and nameless?

The general belief is that a houseful of children is all right because God said "replenish the earth." But did he tell us to bring blind children and cripples into the world?

He is no more to blame for the family where there are ten than he is for the blind ones that come from diseased parents. God provides us with things in this world to work with and what we accomplish is either a curse or a blessing. If God sends children into the world as he sees fit (as so many accuse him of doing) why does he send babies to people out of wedlock?

If He intended women to bring forth their young promiscuously, with no system or sense, why are some women barren?

God punishes us for lusts of the flesh and the parents with six children or more, are certainly punished before it is over. But the deplorable part is that the children suffer too, "sins of the fathers," the Bible says.

God has provided us with material and expects us to work out our own salvation in whatever we do, and he is no more responsible for our mistakes than a chemist would be responsible for the death of a man who has drunk a poison invented by the former to be used for perfectly sensible purposes. ROSE.

Knows Woman's Troubles.

Dear Minerva: I am a man age 32, have batched ten years or more, so I presume I have had some experience of what a woman has to do. There are so many men that don't ever give a thought to a woman's work. I have heard men say that woman has nothing to do. I am sure anyone that has batched won't say that. I often wonder how a woman can do as much as some do or most of them do.

I hope this letter will do someone some good as I surely would not have written otherwise. I do work outside and in and am nearly always in good spirits, lots of the time singing a song or whistling a tune. I often think how happy a man should be, having a mate to help and that he should try to make life worth while.

Don't be ashamed to take your wife to church or any place. If she was good enough to marry she should be good enough to go any place. We all need enjoyment, and particularly a woman who stands over a hot stove day in and day out needs a change.

I shall write more some other time as this is my first letter. I hope it won't do any harm if it doesn't do any good. A BATCH.

The Operation I Avoided—

MRS. IDA M. COFFMAN
SIDELL, ILL.

IF there is one thing more than another a woman dreads, it is a surgical operation, and to be told that one is necessary is very disheartening.

Hospitals are grand institutions, and undoubtedly many operations are necessary. However, we have received hundreds of letters from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after an operation had been deemed advisable.

Every woman who suffers as Mrs. Coffman did naturally wishes to avoid an operation if possible, and the remarkable statements which she makes in her letter will be read with interest by women everywhere.

Mrs. Coffman's Letter Follows:

SIDELL, ILLINOIS.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side which was noticeable at all time but sometimes it was almost unbearable and I could not even let the bed-clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years but not so badly until the last 18 months, and had become so rundown that I cared for nobody and would rather have died than live. I couldn't do my work without help and the doctor told me that an operation was all there was left for me. I would not consent to that so my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my housework and had a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house and when my two little girls reach womanhood I shall advise them to take it."—MRS. IDA M. COFFMAN, R. R. No. 2, Sidell, Illinois.

Another Operation Avoided

DAYTON, OHIO.—"I was sick for eight weeks and had three doctors. They told me I would have to be operated upon before I would be any better. My sister told me about the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In one week's time I began to feel better. I took seven bottles of it and also some of the Liver Pills and used your Sanative Wash and I soon gained my health. I recommend your medicines to all women who feel badly and have troubles of this kind and I will answer all letters sent to me by women."—MRS. GRACE B. GILLEM, 270 Valley Street, Dayton, Ohio.

Hail-the Gladsome Spring

Through the Shops With Patricia Ann

It's spring, my dears! Let's all grow young again. Rejuvenate! We're only as old as we feel after all. A hat with a saucy little brim from beneath which a mature face will look girlishly charming is actually an investment in happiness. Mayer Bros. Millinery department, second floor, show very trim bonnetry for bobbed hair. Isn't it queer that one achieves girlishness by effecting boyishness?

They also make a specialty of large head sizes for women, and they have so many styles that are truly becoming.

But listen! If you have a hat that you just adored, but can't wear it any more because it looks faded and worn, take it to Mayer's and have their designer tell you how to make it new. They make a specialty of retrimming old hats.

"The Woodburn" Scene of Many Festivities

The Woodburn Party House, 425 South 14th, under the management of Mrs. R. G. Grubbs, is the center this spring for bridge parties, luncheons, teas, dinners and banquets. Our hosts and hostesses are realizing the great advantage of entertaining there, where they are entirely free from the worries of serving, and where the service and appointments are the best.

Oil Paintings and Picture Framing

Barnett's Art Studio, 1241 N street, has exquisite oil paintings for sale, and they also frame pictures for you with the utmost care and skill, enhancing the beauty of your picture by framing it artistically.

Ming Toy Sandals Prettiest Style Yet

Honestly, I just fell in love with this little sandal. You can see them yourself in the windows at Mayer Bros. today. The Ming Toy sandal won first prize at the National Retailers Convention at Chicago this spring, so you know it's fine. It has rubber heel, and can be purchased at Mayer's in eleven shades, red, green, jack rabbit, grey suede, airdale, grey alligator, dark brown alligator, peach, grey elk, racquet, white calf, and patent leather. The best part about it is, that the price is only $7.00. You'll find hosiery right here to match, too.

Do You Know Her?

Her hair was very black and it wasn't bobbed. She wore a band of pearls about her forehead. Her dress was white brocaded satin and the band of white fur around the bottom made it hang in very pretty folds. A. G. appeared at a formal dancing party Friday evening. She is rather tall—do you know her?

Luxury and Comfort Important in Cars.

Luxury and comfort, you could not ask for more than you are given in the five-passenger Buick Sedan. It's such a good size, too! It's large enough to take your friends with you, or it's large enough to accommodate the ordinary-sized family. If you want to see a really beautiful car, just go look at the sage-green one on display in the show-room at the Buick company on 13th and Q. It gladdens the heart just to look at it. The upholstery is beautiful, and the equipment is most adequate. The whole car speaks of quality and finished workmanship. I'll just rare you to go in and look at it!

The Successful Dinner Makes a Happy Hostess.

Is there anything more depressing than to feel after the last guest has departed that the dinner you served could have been better? To eliminate any "after the party" feelings of misgiving, make sure that the vegetables and the fruit you serve are Grainger brand. They are the best quality and will not fail to please the most discriminate individual.

Federal Tires Give Extra Long Service.

When you have car trouble, no matter what it is, call the Spangler Tire company, B2739 and get quick service. When you need a new tire they'll put on a long-lived tire for you and not charge for the service. Look over your car and see if you don't need a new tire.

Besides hemstitching, pleating, making button holes and buttons, "The Buttonhole," 220 So. 13th, makes initiation robes for any organization, or uniforms for dentists, nurses, doctors, etc. I suggest that you go in and talk to Mrs. Brandt about this service, or call B1513.

Your Car Should Be Overhauled Right Now.

PARLIAMENTARY LAW FOR WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY MRS. JOHN SLAKER.

MRS. JOHN SLAKER.

Officers and Duties.

There are only two officers required by general parliamentary law, the presiding officer, commonly called the president or the chairman, and scribe, usually called either clerk or secretary. Nearly all permanent organizations have also a treasurer and a corresponding secretary, in that case the scribe is called the recording secretary. Sometimes there is a permanent auditor who is an officer. In some clubs the parliamentarian ranks as an officer

The president is expected to preside at all meetings of the general club and to enforce the discipline of the organization. It is her duty to represent the club at all conventions and other places where such representation is desirable; she should strive to uphold the dignity of the organization and to maintain its high purpose and ideals. She should never lose sight of the fact that she is the president of the entire membership and not of a faction, and all of her acts and decisions should be extend justice and courtesy to all

When presiding the president should always refer to herself in the third person, either as "your president" or "the chair," she should stand when stating a question and putting it to vote; when listening to reports or a debate she may be seated but should pay the strictest attention to all that is being said, for the speakers address their remarks to the chair not to the house. While listening courteously to the speakers she should be alert to all that is transpiring in the hall in case it might be necessary to attract her attention If she wishes to speak on any subject she should call either the vice-president or some member to the chair, but this should rarely be done; when the president speaks on a question she should not resume the chair until the question has been disposed of She votes like any other member when the vote is by balloft, and in case of a tie she may cast the deciding vote if she wishes, but she is not obligated to do so. In case of a vote by roll call the president votes last

Many clubs authorize their president to appoint all committee but she has no right to do so unless so authorized In view of the fact that the president is responsible for the policy of the club during her term of office, experience has proven that it is wise to permit her to select the women who must carry out her instructions. Some clubs make her an ex-officio member of all committees, in thise case she has all the privileges of other members of the committees but has not the obligation to attend all meetings

The vice-president should keep in touch with all the work of the club, respond to every request of the president, act for her in her absence or at any time when such action is desired. She should be the president's alter ego. A difficult role but one that brings large measure of reward in many ways. It is becoming the custom to give the vice-president some specific work to do in addition to the usual self-effacing tasks of the office

Questions and Answers.

Question—If the chairman made a mistake like not repeating the motion, should one rise to a point of order, and after stating it what should the chair do?

Answer—The chair was perhaps inexperienced and embarrassed and I would hesitate to call attention to a little omission that did not affect the legal status of the question. You might remind her privately of her mistake

Question—If a club decision at a meeting and wants to reconsider it which side should bring it up, or does it make any difference?

Answer—A motion to reconsider must be made by one who voted on hte prevailing side

Answer—No, not unless the by-laws so provide and this would not be advisable Voting by proxy is not allowed either by the General Federation or the Nebraska Federation.

Answer—If you nominate and vote the same day take your vote according to instructions in my article on elections and continue to ballot until some one receives a majority Or if there are several ballots without a decision some one might move that the two having the higher number of votes on the next ballot be declared the candidates and the others be eliminated. If this carries the second ballot would decide the election.

BY MRS. JOHN SLAKER.

MRS. JOHN SLAKER.
Officers and Duties.

There are only two officers required by general parliamentary law, the presiding officer, commonly called the president or the chairman, and scribe, usually called either clerk or secretary. Nearly all permanent organizations have also a treasurer and a corresponding secretary, in that case the scribe is called the recording secretary. Sometimes there is a permanent auditor who is an officer. In some clubs the parliamentarian ranks as an officer.

The president is expected to preside at all meetings of the general club and to enforce the discipline of the organization. It is her duty to represent the club at all conventions and other places where such representation is desirable; she should strive to uphold the dignity of the organization and to maintain its high purpose and ideals. She should never lose sight of the fact that she is the president of the entire membership and not of a faction, and all of her acts and decisions should be extend justice and courtesy to all.

When presiding the president should always refer to herself in the third person, either as "your president" or "the chair;" she should stand when stating a question and putting it to vote; when listening to reports or a debate she may be seated but should pay the strictest attention to all that is being said, for the speakers address their remarks to the chair not to the house. While listening courteously to the speakers she should be alert to all that is transpiring in the hall in case it might be necessary to attract her attention. If she wishes to speak on any subject she should call either the vice-president or some member to the chair, but this should rarely be done; when the president speaks on a question she should not resume the chair until the question has been disposed of. She votes like any other member when the vote is by ballott, and in case of a tie she may cast the deciding vote if she wishes, but she is not obligated to do so. In case of a vote by roll call the president votes last.

Many clubs authorize their president to appoint all committee but she has no right to do so unless so authorized. In view of the fact that the president is responsible for the policy of the club during her term of office, experience has proven that it is wise to permit her to select the women who mustcarry out her instructions. Some clubs make her an ex-officio member of all committees, in thise case she has all the privileges of other members of the committees but has not the obligation to attend all meetings.

The vice-president should keep in touch with all the work of the club, respond to every request of the president, act for her in her absence or at any time when such action is desired. She should be the president's alter ego. A difficult role but one that brings large measure of reward in many ways. It is becoming the custom to give the vice-president some specific work to do in addition to the usual self-effacing tasks of the office.

Questions and Answers.

Question—If the chairman made a mistake like not repeating the motion, should one rise to a point of order, and after stating it, what should the chair do?

Answer—The chair was perhaps inexperienced and embarrassed and I would hesitate to call attention to a little omission that did not affect the legal status of the question. You might remind her privately of her mistake.

Question—If a club decision at a meeting and wants to reconsider it which side should bring it up, or does it make any difference?

Answer—A motion to reconsider must be made by one who voted on hte prevailing side.

Question—May a member vote by proxy at a club election?

Answer—No, not unless the by-laws so provide and this would not be advisable. Voting by proxy is not allowed either by the General Federation or the Nebraska Federation.

Question—How would you conduct an election when nominations are by ballot?

Answer—If you nominate and vote the same day take your vote according to instructions in my article on elections and continue to ballot until some one receives a majority. Or if there are several ballots without a decision some one might move that the two having the higher humber of votes on the next ballot be declared the candidates and the others be eliminated. If this carries the second ballot would decide the election.

Safe Fat Reduction

Reduce, reduce, reduce, is the slogan of all fat people. Get thin, be slim, is the cry of fashion and society. And the overfat wring their hands in mortification and helplessness; revolting at nauseating drugs, afraid of violent exercise, dreading the unwelcome and unsatisfying diet, until they hit upon the harmless Marmola Prescription and learn through it that they may safely reduce steadily and easily without one change in their mode of life, but harmlessly, secretly, and quickly reaching their ideal of figure, with a smoother skin, better appetite and health than they have ever known. And now comes Marmola Prescription Tablets from the same famously harmless formula as the Marmola Prescription. It behooves you to learn the satisfactory, beneficial effects of this great, safe, fat reducer by giving to your druggist one dollar for a box, or sending a like amount to the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich., with a request that they mail to you a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets.—Advertisement.

Miss Bruce won second place in the honors for artistic millinery.

A Bohemian party was given by the Zeta Alpha girls, for the Alphi Phi Pi society, Monday evening, March 3, in the banquet room of the Normal gymnasium. The program closed with the story, "The Wreck of the 'Hesperus," told by Helen Eason, to the "age of innocence" or Mary Reische. Games were played and the girls danced until time for refreshments which were served on pallettes. The lunch consisted of chicken salad, sandwiches, ice cream, cake and coffee. Bible study is the main feature of the class, and there is not one little boy in it who does not know his Bible backwards and forward and every other way.

The Musical World

Cecil Arden, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will appear in concert, Thursday evening March 20, at the city auditorium under the auspices of the American Legion. The American Legion is bringing Miss Arden to Lincoln in giving Lincoln musicians and music lovers an opportunity to hear one of the most popular and best of the younger singers on the concert platform today. She is a young American artist who has come to the fore through her artistic merit. She is the possessor of a brilliant mezzo-soprano voice of a very distinct quality. She was born in New York city and has acomplished her vocal and artistic training in America under the instruction of Buzzi-Peccia, the eminent vocal expert who has to his credit many notable singers of the day, including Alma Gluck and Sophie Braslau. Nature has endowed her with a personality rarely met with, and a physical beauty that makes her conspicuous even in the midst of the great artists of the Metropolitan Opera as well as on the concert platform.

The career of Miss Arden has been a most exceptional one. Her study has been accomplished entirely in America and without ever having appeared in public, she was engaged to appear at the Metropolitan by Gatti-Casazza. One might say that she stepped directly from the studio of her teacher to the stage of the Metropolitan.

At the time of her engagement at the Metropolitan four seasons ago, Cecil Arden was the youngest member of the company. Now after four consecutive seasons of opera singing and wide experience in the concert field, this young artist has advanced to the foremost ranks of splendid American artists, and is constantly finding herself in an ever increasing demand for concert engagements, due to her exceptionally beautiful singing, her gracious personality and charming stage presence.

The Musical World

Cecil Arden, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, will appear in concert, Thursday evening March 20, at the city auditorium under the auspices of the American Legion. The American Legion is bringing Miss Arden to Lincpl nis giving Lincoln musicians and music lovers an opportunity to hear one of the most popular and best of the younger singers on the concert platform today. She is a young American artist who has come to the fore through her artistic merit. She is the possessor of a brilliant mezzo-soprano voice of a very distinct quality. She was born in New York city and has acomplished her vocal and artistic training in America under the instruction of Buzzi-Peccia, the eminent vocal expert who has to his credit many notable singers of the day, including Alma Gluck and Sophie Braslau. Nature has endowed her with a personality rarely met with, and a physical beauty that makes her conspicuous even in the midst of the great artists of the Metropolitan Opera as well as on the concert platform.

The career of Miss Arden has been a most exceptional one. Her study has been accomplished entirely in America and without ever having appeared in public, she was engaged to appear at the Metropolitan by Gatti-Casazza. One might say that she stepped directly from the studio of her teacher to the stage of the Metropolitan.

At the time of her engagement at the Metropolitan four seasons ago, Cecil Arden was the youngest member of the company. Now after four consecutive seasons of opera singing and wide experience in the concert field, this young artist has advanced to the foremost ranks of splendid American artists, and is constantly finding herself in an ever increasing demand for concert engagements, due to her exceptionally beautiful singing, her gracious personality and charming stage presence.

"Do you favor the appropriation of funds for the adequate enforcement of the prohibition laws?"

WOMEN AT BIG MEETING PROMINENT AS SPEAKERS.

Miss E. Ruth Pyrtle, principal of McKinley school recently returned from Chicago where she attended a meeting held there in the interest of education. Jones, who spoke on "Watchman, Tell Us of the Night." She told of the present problems in education and how to meet them. She showed clearly why education costs more today than ever before and asked "Are we going to maintain the present standards?" She told her audience that since her election she has been going up and down the land and that as a result of these visits she can see a spiritual as well as material progress. Miss Pyrtle says a feeling of optimism spread over the audience as a result of Miss Jones' address.

Men as well as women pronounced Miss Jones' talk one of the finest they ever heard, Miss Pyrtle said.

Another woman who made a deep impression on the minds of those who heard her was Judge Florence Allen of Cleveland, Ohio. Her subject was "No More War." It was logical, reasonable and enlightening, and caused much favorable comment.

Miss Jones was responsible for a luncheon given in honor of the seventy-ninth birthday of Dr. A. E. Winship of Boston, editor of the Educational Journal, and a lecturer of prominence. The luncheon was attended by nine hundred admirers of Dr. Winship and he was presented with a volume of Tributes written by his friends.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, the woman orator of America will be in Lincoln on March 17, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Armor is devoting her life to the cause of prohibition, and while in Lincoln she will speak on enforcement topics. Those who have heard her recently say that she is more wonderful than ever. In her own state Georgia, they say of her, "No visiting lecture attracts such large and enthusiastic audiences in her state as our matchless Mary." She comes from a family of ministers and she herself is filled with religious sentiment and force. Workers are looking forward to the coming of this great good woman.

NEBRASKA LEAGUE SENDING OUT BLANKS.

The officers of the Nebraska League Women Voters are putting in long hours sending out questionnaires to candidates for U. S. senators and representatives; for supreme and district courts, and for state executive offices and the legislature. Some of the questions sent to the last named candidates are: "Would you favor curtailing any activities of the state government and which ones?" "How would you reduce state appropriations?" "What changes in the laws concerning taxation do you favor?" "What, if any, changes in the Nebraska primary law do you favor?" "Do you favor the appropriation of funds for the adequate enforcement of the prohibition laws?"

Candidates for national honors received the following, which is only a few of those included: "Are you in favor of progressive international reduction of armament as a step toward permanent world peace?" "Are you in favor of a world court?" "Are you in favor of the extension of the merit system in the civil service?"

The questions are all logical and important and have been well thought out and carefully worded. Blanks may be secured from headquarters of the league in Rudge and Guenzel's store.

Lefler spoke on the additional mill levy which is needed for further financing the schools. A short business session closed the meeting. About 125 were present.

WOMEN AT BIG MEETING PROMINENT AS SPEAKERS.

Miss E. Ruth Pyrtle, principal of McKinley school recently returned from Chicago where she attended a meeting held there in the interest of education. In speaking of some of the things she heard, Miss Pyrtle was especially enthusiastic about the address made by the president of the National Educational association, Miss Olive M. Jones, who spoke on "Watchman, Tell Us of the Night." She told of the present problems in education and how to meet them. She showed clearly why education costs more today than ever before and asked "Are we going to maintain the present standards?" She told her audience that since her election she has been going up and down the land and that as a result of these visits she can see a spiritual as well as material progress. Miss Pyrtle says a feeling of optimism spread over the audience as a result of Miss Jones' address.

Men as well as women pronounced Miss Jones' talk one of the finest they ever heard, Miss Pyrtle said.

Another woman who made a deep impression on the minds of those who heard her was Judge Florence Allen of Cleveland, Ohio. Her subject was "No More War." It was logical, reasonable and enlightening, and caused much favorable comment.

Miss Jones was responsible for a luncheon given in honor of the seventy-ninth birthday of Dr. A. E. Winship of Boston, editor of the Educational Journal, and a lecturer of prominence. The luncheon was attended by nine hundred admirers of Dr. Winship and he was presented with a volume of Tributes written by his friends.

Miss Jones also entertained fourteen friends at a dinner. Miss Pyrtle was a guest. These fourteen women were representative of the entire country, coming as they did from different parts of the United States.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—I am coming to you today with a question that is perhaps a little out of the ordinary but I hope you will be able to give me a little information on the subject. It's about trick photography. I'd like to know how they do some of the things they do with the camera. Of course, I realize it's very simple when you know how. For instance, how do they make the slow motion, and the fast motion pictures, and how do they get the ghost effects, and how do they take the picture when the actor takes two roles in the story?

I have seen a great deal lately about photography, and I believe I read somewhere that they used it in the "Ten Commandments." Is that true, and have they ever made a picture in which color photography was used throughout. I should think some interesting effects could be obtained by its use, if it should prove practical.

If this question should be a little too technical, please consign it to the waste basket, and I will thank you in advance for your kindness in reading it, even though it does not appear in print.—ALFRED, Seward, Neb.

"Trick Photography," in the movie world, is defined as a highly specialized branch of the Cinematographic Art. It takes an expert camera man to take "trick" exposures, because the least defect would be magnified on the screen fifty thousand times, since each individual picture is only three-fourths inch by one inch, and it is usually thrown on a screen 12 by 16 feet.

The normal rate of speed of the film in the camera and projector in sixteen pictures, or one foot of film, per second. Any variation will either slow down or speed up the action. To make the "traffic rush," or fast moving pictures, it is only necessary for the cameraman to crank very slowly in taking the picture. For the "slow motion" pictures, the opposite is true. He cranks the camera very rapidly, using many feet of film to record normal movement. When projected, all this film, running at normal speed must pass through the projector to carry the people across the street, or whatever the action, might be.

Ghosts and visions are easily produced. Suppose the scene is a man looking into the grate, and seeing his sweetheart's face. The cameraman first "shoots" the scene of the man sitting in front of the fire, being very careful to get the exact number of turns of the camera crank where the vision appears. The film is then wound backward into the camera to its starting point, and the camera is placed in front of black velvet drop where the girl's face appears. All of the exposed film except the grate are covered to prevent further exposure. The girl takes her position, and the scene is "shot." It's simple when you know how, as you say.

When the actor plays a dual role in the picture, the camera blocks off one portion of the film and photographs the players in one-half of the given exposed section of the picture. The film is then rewound, and the film just exposed is blocked off with a mat. The unexposed side of the film is then used to bring the actor on in his other role. He is made kiss, shake hands, and so forth with himself, by exact counts and notations.

Where inanimated objects are made to perform, such as a pair of scissors cutting out a suit of clothes, the effect is obtained by "stop motion." The object is photographed, the camera man stops and moves the object a little, and "shoots" again.

Color photography was used in "The Ten Commandments" and very successfully. Famous Players are now filming a complete picture in color photography, "The Wanderer of the Wasteland." It should be a "knock-out" if they succeed in getting the effects with it that they did in "The Ten Commandments." I was fortunate enough to see the picture and the few scenes in which the colors were used greatly intensified the dramatic situation.

Dear Movie Editor—Will you kindly give me the cast of "Across the Continent?" Thank you.—B. A. H.

Dear Movie Editor — Would you please tell me all about the picture made in Wyoming under the working title "The Cowboy and the Lady," starring Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore?

Was the name changed when it was released? Has it been in Lincoln yet or coming back? Thank you very kindly, I am REAL INTERESTED.

"The Cowboy and the Lady" was released under the same title. I saw the picture at the Rialto a year ago in November. I am not sure, but I think it has been back at the Sun, also. It was an adaption of Clyde Fitch's play, by the same title, in which Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott were taken at a ranch at Jackson, Wyoming. It is a story of a young woman who is married to a cad of a husband. Thinking to reform him, she persuades him to leave the "bright lights" of Broadway and go to her ranch in Wyoming.

Instead of reforming him, the husband transferred his attention to the pretty proprietor of the town saloon. The wife, brokenhearted, and left to her own devices, fell in love with a neighboring ranch owner—an eccentric gentleman-cowboy who rode a motorcycle instead of horses to rustle cattle. There is a robbery and a murder, which is fastened on the innocent cowboy. Just as he is about to be lynched by a mob gotten together by the scoundrel husband of the girl, it is discovered that the husband, and not the cowboy is guilty.

Of course, all ends happily, and the last scene shows the girl and cowboy tearing down the boundary fence between the two ranches.

Dear Movie Editor—Will you please give me the cast for "White Eagle" with Ruth Roland in the leading role, and also for "Plunder" with Pearl White. Please tell me how many episodes there were in "Plunder" and all you can about Pearl White. I noticed that she was not going to act anymore, and I'm sorry, because I always thought she was the best serial queen we had. Did she play in the first serial, and if not, who did, and what was the name of it?

Who had the leading roles in "The Yellow Arm?" I saw the picture sometime ago and was greatly impressed by it. You will notice from my letter that I'm a fiend for the serial.

Has "The Rustle of Silk" and "The Girl of the Golden West" ever been back to the Sun? Thanking you for past and present favors, I remain as before, THELMA.

In "Plunder," Pearl White has the role of "Pearl Travers;" "Warren Krech appears as "Mister Jones" and Harry Semels as "Jude Deering." There are fifteen episodes in both pictures.

Pearl White was born in Missouri. White is her real name her father being an Irish-American, and her mother, Italian. Greenbridge, her home town, still remembers when the "little White Girl" made her first public appearance in "Hamlet's soliloquy." Then came the part of Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with a visiting theatrical company, in which the child actress was taken ill. She later made a trip to Cuba and South America, and after that was starred by Rowland and Clifford. After a stock engagement at South Norwalk, Conn. she entered motion pictures with the Powers company. It was her work in Pathe serials that won her the title of "Serial Queen." Pearl did not appear in the first serial, however, Mary Fuller had that honor in the series, "What Happened to Mary" made by Edison. The picture was really a series and not a serial, and was produced with the co-operation of "The Ladies World" in which the stories were published prior to their screening. This picture was followed by "Who Will Marry Mary" and "Dolly of the Dallies," also with Mary Fuller.

Juanita Hansen Warner Oland and Marguerite Courtot had the featured roles in "The Yellow Arm."

"The Rustle of Silk" and "The Girl of the Golden West" both appeared here at the Sun in October!

Dear Movie Editor—I just want to say a good word for the boxing pictures which we have had the past year. I think they are fine for the boys, because it teaches them to use their fists instead of firearms when the occasion arises for a fight. Every boy is an idealist and a dreamer, and I don't see why he shouldn't be taught to want to be a hero such as Reginald Denny, George O'Hara, Billy Sullivan, and those stars who fight with their two fists, rather than a two-gun man such as we see heroized in the western pictures. I think Billy Sullivan is about the best "leather pusher" we have seen on the screen, and I hope he continues to make high class fight pictures in the future as he has in the past. Thanking you for your space, I remain, A LOVER OF BOYS.

Dear Movie Editor—I live in a small town where our only amusement is the picture show, and I can't tell you how grateful I am for the movies. We take the Star, as we moved here from Lincoln, and I don't know what we would do without it. If you have ever moved from a town like Lincoln to a little place like I live in now, you would better understand what I mean when I tell you I am grateful for the movies. I saw "Broken Chains" a short time ago, and thought it was a masterpiece. It was such an unusual story,—so different from anything I had ever seen before on the screen. I wish they would give us more stories of that type. I would like to have you tell me all you can about Colleen Moore. Is she married and if so to whom? I thank you for the information, and hope you will have a place in your department for a letter from A SMALL TOWN GIRL.

Certainly, I have a place for you, both on my page and in my heart. I, too, was once a "small town girl." A small town might not be as thrilling as the city, but it has one advantage over the city—it's a good place to save your money.

Colleen Moore was born in Port Huron, Mich., in 1900 and attended the convent of The Holy Name, in Tampa, Fla. She emerged from this place to start her screen career and has played with Triangle, Fine Art, Ince, Selig, Paramount, Universal, Goldwyn and First National. She also appeared in several Christi comedies. She's an all-around athlete and spends much of her time in swimming in the surf near the studios at Los Angeles when not working at the studio. She is five feet three and weighs 110 pounds. She is married to John McCormick, a director of motion pictures.

Dear Movies Editor: I am a great admirer of your work and your page, and I'm very much interested in the movies,—not only the pictures, but all of the other ends of the game, such as scenario writing, the financial part and the releasing and distributing ends. I've obtained a great deal of real valuable information from your answers to other fans, and now I am asking a few questions which I haven't seen answered yet, although they may have been and I might have missed them. What I would like to know is, in most instances, is the story chosen for the player, or is the player chosen for the story, and who does the choosing of the cast for the play, the producer or the director. I have noticed in your "Screen Siftings" at different times, where some actor has been loaned to another company for a picture. Why do they do this? Is it because they don't happen to have work for him at that time, or what? Do the actors furnish their own clothes, or does the company they are working for, furnish them. I will greatly appreciate anything you might be able to tell me on this subject. Sincerely, JACK.

A few years ago most of the stories were bought for the stars, but recently pictures are "cast from the story,"—that is the players are chosen to fit the story roles, from the leading character down to the mere "bits."

The director, casting director and assistant director, collaborate with the producer in choosing the players for the picture that is to be made. Many of the larger companies have a troupe of popular players on contract, but this does not mean, that they play only in the companies productions. They are loaned to other producers if they happen to be the right player for some particular role in a story.

In selecting actors for important or difficult roles, the director and producer often secure films, in which the player they have in mind for the part, has appeared, and "run" them in the studio projection room. A villain, in one picture, does not necessarily have to have the same role in another story.

If an "unknown" player is to be tried out, a screen test is always made, but old actors do not always have this done, except for a new makeup.

In modern plays, with modern costumes, the clothes are usually furnished by the players, unless otherwise provided by their contract, but in "period" or "costume" plays, the company rents the costumes from large establishments that specialize in costuming. Nearly all of the studios maintain wardrobe departments. An "extra" must have clothes suitable for any occasion.

Screen Siftings

Learning English Tongue.—Victor Varconi spends his days working at the Lasky Studio in Cecil B. De Mille's production, "Triumph," and his nights at school studying English. His contract requires that he learn our language as rapidly as possible. Mr. Varconi is a well-known Hungarian actor.

Editors Submit Opinions—In an answer to a questionnaire sent to the leading motion picture editors of the United States, Vitagraph received 38 suggestions or actors best fitted to play the role of Pete; Black in "Captain Blood," the novel by Rafael Sabatini, to which Albert E Smith has purchased the picture rights. The actors suggested for the role ranged from Valentino and Fairbanks down to unknown extra men, with Valentino always counts in the lead over Douglas Fairbanks. Preparations for filming the picture are being made at the Hollywood studio. A shipbuilding expert from London has been engaged to oversee the construction of the ships which will be used in the production.

Baby Peggy's Latest.—Baby Peggy Montgomery's second picture under her contract with Sol Lesser will be an adaptation of "Helen's Babies," one of the oldest and most popular of juvenile books. John Habberton is the author, and the first edition is nearly fifty years old. The picture will be filmed under the direction of William Seiter.

"Deerslayer."—The famous characters created by James Fennimore Cooper in his "Deerslayer," are to make their screen debut in a ten-episode Pathe serial called "Leatherstocking." Harold Miller has the role of "Leatherstocking," in the production, and Edna Murphy is "Judith Hutter." The character trayals are based on authentics descriptions by historians.

"Virtuous Crook."—George Seigmann, villainous owner of the merry-go-round in "The Merry-Go-Round," has been cast for a part in Herbert Rawlinson's next production, "The Virtuous Crook." Of course, it's a "heavy" part.

Story of Roosevelt.—The story of Roosevelt, which is to be made in super-feature length by Alf. Goulding, will include episodes starting from his earliest school days, following him through Harvard, then into politics, and finally as president of the United States. There will also be scenes from his days in the Spanish-American war, as the head of the Rough Riders, and pictures of his adventures in Africa and South America. Roosevelt's life is said to be more replete with the elements necessary for a good picture than that of any other figure in history.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—I am coming to you today with a question that is perhaps a little out of the ordinary but I hope you will be able to give me a little information on the subject. It's about trick photography. I'd like to know how they do some of the things they do with the camera. Of course, I realize it's very simple when you know how. For instance, how do they make the slow motion, and the fast motion pictures, and how do they get the ghost effects, and how do they take the picture when the actor takes two roles in the story?

I have seen a great deal lately about photography, and I believe I read somewhere that they used it in the "Ten Commandments." Is that true, and have they ever made a picture in which color photography was used throughout. I should think some interesting effects could be obtained by its use, if it should prove practical.

If this question should be a little too technical, please consign it to the waste basket, and I will thank you in advance for your kindness in reading it, even though it does not appear in print.—ALFRED, Seward, Neb.

"Trick Photography," in the movie world, is defined as a highly specialized branch of the Cinematographic Art. It takes an expert camera man to take "trick" exposures, because the least defect would be magnified on the screen fifty thousand times, since each individual picture is only three-fourths inch by one inch, and it is usually thrown on a screen 12 by 16 feet.

The normal rate of speed of the film in the camera and projector in sixteen pictures, or one foot of film, per second. Any variation will either slow down or speed up the action. To make the "traffic rush," or fast moving pictures, it is only necessary for the cameraman to crank very slowly in taking the picture. For the "slow motion" pictures, the opposite is true. He cranks the camera very rapidly, using many feet of film to record normal movement. When projected, all this film, running at normal speed must pass through the projector to carry the people across the street, or whatever the action, might be.

Ghosts and visions are easily produced. Suppose the scene is a man looking into the grate, and seeing his sweetheart's face. The cameraman first "shoots" the scene of the man sitting in front of the fire, being very careful to get the exact number of turns of the camera crank where the vision appears. The film is then wound backward into the camera to its starting point, and the camera is placed in front of black velvet drop where the girl's face appears. All of the exposed film except the grate are covered to prevent further exposure. The girl takes her position, and the scene is "shot." It's simple when you know how, as you say.

When the actor plays a dual role in the picture, the camera blocks off one portion of the film and photographs the players in one-half of the given exposed section of the picture. The film is then rewound, and the film just exposed is blocked off with a mat. The unexposed side of the film is then used to bring the actor on in his other role. He is made kiss, shake hands, and so forth with himself, by exact counts and notations.

Where inanimated objects are made to perform, such as a pair of scissors cutting out a suit of clothes, the effect is obtained by "stop motion." The object is photographed, the camera man stops and moves the object a little, and "shoots" again.

Color photography was used in "The Ten Commandments" and very successfully. Famous Players are now filming a complete picture in color photography, "The Wanderer of the Wasteland." It should be a "knock-out" if they succeed in getting the effects with it that they did in "The Ten Commandments." I was fortunate enough to see the picture and the few scenes in which the colors were used greatly intensified the dramatic situation.

Dear Movie Editor—Will you kindly give me the cast of "Across the Continent?" Thank you.—B. A. H.

Dear Movie Editor — Would you please tell me all about the picture made in Wyoming under the working title "The Cowboy and the Lady," starring Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore?

Was the name changed when it was released? Has it been in Lincoln yet or coming back? Thank you very kindly, I am REAL INTERESTED.

"The Cowboy and the Lady" was released under the same title. I saw the picture at the Rialto a year ago in November. I am not sure, but I think it has been back at the Sun, also. It was an adaption of Clyde Fitch's play, by the same title, in which Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott were taken at a ranch at Jackson, Wyoming. It is a story of a young woman who is married to a cad of a husband. Thinking to reform him, she persuades him to leave the "bright lights" of Broadway and go to her ranch in Wyoming.

Instead of reforming him, the husband transferred his attention to the pretty proprietor of the town saloon. The wife, brokenhearted, and left to her own devices, fell in love with a neighboring ranch owner—an eccentric gentleman-cowboy who rode a motorcycle instead of horses to rustle cattle. There is a robbery and a murder, which is fastened on the innocent cowboy. Just as he is about to be lynched by a mob gotten together by the scoundrel husband of the girl, it is discovered that the husband, and not the cowboy is guilty.

Of course, all ends happily, and the last scene shows the girl and cowboy tearing down the boundary fence between the two ranches.

Dear Movie Editor—Will you please give me the cast for "White Eagle" with Ruth Roland in the leading role, and also for "Plunder" with Pearl White. Please tell me how many episodes there were in "Plunder" and all you can about Pearl White. I noticed that she was not going to act anymore, and I'm sorry, because I always thought she was the best serial queen we had. Did she play in the first serial, and if not, who did, and what was the name of it?

Who had the leading roles in "The Yellow Arm?" I saw the picture sometime ago and was greatly impressed by it. You will notice from my letter that I'm a fiend for the serial.

Has "The Rustle of Silk" and "The Girl of the Golden West" ever been back to the Sun? Thanking you for past and present favors, I remain as before, THELMA.

In "Plunder," Pearl White has the role of "Pearl Travers;" "Warren Krech appears as "Mister Jones" and Harry Semels as "Jude Deering." There are fifteen episodes in both pictures.

Pearl White was born in Missouri. White is her real name her father being an Irish-American and her mother, Italian. Greenbridge, her home town, still remembers when the "little White Girl" made her first public appearance in "Hamlet's soliloquy." Then came the part of Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with a visiting theatrical company, in which the child actress was taken ill. She later made a trip to Cuba and South America, and after that was starred by Rowland and Clifford. After a stock engagement at South Norwalk, Conn. she entered motion pictures with the Powers company. It was her work in Pathe serials that won her the title of "Serial Queen." Pearl did not appear in the first serial, however, Mary Fuller had that honor in the series, "What Happened to Mary" made by Edison. The picture was really a series and not a serial, and was produced with the co-operation of "The Ladies World" in which the stories were published prior to their screening. This picture was followed by "Who Will Marry Mary" and "Dolly of the Dallies," also with Mary Fuller.

Juanita Hansen Warner Oland and Marguerite Courtot had the featured roles in "The Yellow Arm."

"The Rustle of Silk" and "The Girl of the Golden West" both appeared here at the Sun in October!

Dear Movie Editor—I just want to say a good word for the boxing pictures which we have had the past year. I think they are fine for the boys, because it teaches them to use their fists instead of firearms when the occasion arises for a fight. Every boy is an idealist and a dreamer, and I don't see why he shouldn't be taught to want to be a hero such as Reginald Denny, George O'Hara, Billy Sullivan, and those stars who fight with their two fists, rather than a two-gun man such as we see heroized in the western pictures. I think Billy Sullivan is about the best "leather pusher" we have seen on the screen, and I hope he continues to make high class fight pictures in the future as he has in the past. Thanking you for your space, I remain, A LOVER OF BOYS.

Dear Movie Editor—I live in a small town where our only amusement is the picture show, and I can't tell you how grateful I am for the movies. We take the Star, as we moved here from Lincoln, and I don't know what we would do without it. If you have ever moved from a town like Lincoln to a little place like I live in now, you would better understand what I mean when I tell you I am grateful for the movies. I saw "Broken Chains" a short time ago, and thought it was a masterpiece. It was such an unusual story,—so different from anything I had ever seen before on the screen. I wish they would give us more stories of that type. I would like to have you tell me all you can about Colleen Moore. Is she married and if so to whom? I thank you for the information, and hope you will have a place in your department for a letter from A SMALL TOWN GIRL.

Certainly, I have a place for you, both on my page and in, my heart. I, too, was once a "small town girl."

A small town might not be as thrilling as the city, but it has one advantage over the city—it's a good place to save your money.

Colleen Moore was born in Port Huron, Mich., in 1900 and attended the convent of The Holy Name, in Tampa, Fla. She emerged from this place to start her screen career and has played with Triangle, Fine Art, Ince, Selig, Paramount, Universal, Goldwyn and First National. She also appeared in several Christi comedies. She's an all-around athlete and spends much of her time in swimming in the surf near the studios at Los Angeles when not working at the studio. She is five feet three and weighs 110 pounds. She is married to John McCormick, a director of motion pictures.

Dear Movies Editor: I am a great admirer of your work and your page, and I'm very much interested in the movies,—not only the pictures, but all of the other ends of the game, such as scenario writing, the financial part and the releasing and distributing ends. I've obtained a great deal of real valuable information from your answers to other fans, and now I am asking a few questions which I haven't seen answered yet, although they may have been and I might have missed them. What I would like to know is, in most instances, is the story chosen for the player, or is the player chosen for the story, and who does the choosing of the cast for the play, the producer or the director. I have noticed in your "Screen Siftings" at different times, where some actor has been loaned to another company for a picture. Why do they do this? Is it because they don't happen to have work for him at that time, or what? Do the actors furnish their own clothes, or does the company they are working for, furnish them. I will greatly appreciate anything you might be able to telf me on this subject. Sincerely, JACK.

A few years ago most of the stories were bought for the stars, but recently pictures are "cast from the story,"—that is the players are chosen to fit the story roles, from the leading character down to the mere "bits."

The director, casting director and assistant director, collaborate with the producer in choosing the players for the picture that is to be made. Many of the larger companies have a troupe of popular players on contract, but this does not mean, that they play only in the companies productions. They are loaned to other producers if they happen to be the right player for some particular role in a story.

In selecting actors for important or difficult roles, the director and producer often secure films, in which the player they have in mind for the part, has appeared, and "run" them in the studio projection room. A villain, in one picture, does not necessarily have to have the same role in another story.

If an "unknown" player is to be tried out, a screen test is always made, but old actors do not always have this done, except for a new makeup.

In modern plays, with modern costumes, the clothes are usually furnished by the players, unless otherwise provided by their contract, but in "period" or "costume' plays, the company rents the costumes from large establishments that specialize in costuming. Nearly all of the studios maintain wardrobe departments. An "extra" must have clothes suitable for any occasion.

Screen Siftings

Learning English Tongue.—Victor Varconi spends his days working at the Lasky Studio in Cecil B. De Mille's production, "Triumph," and his nights at school studying English. His contract requires that he learn our language as rapidly as possible. Mr. Varconi is a well-known Hungarian actor.

Editors Submit Opinions—In an answer to a questionnaire sent to the leading motion picture editors of the United States, Vitagraph received 38 suggestions of actors best fitted to play the role of Pete; Blood in "Captain Blood," the novel by Rafael Sabatini, to which Albert E Smith has purchased the picture rights. The actors suggested for the role ranged from Valentino and Fairbanks down to unknown extra men, with Valentino three counts in the lead over Douglas Fairbanks. Preparations for filming the picture are being made at the Hollywood studio. A shipbuilding expert from London has been engaged to oversee the construction of the ships which will be used in the production.

Baby Peggy's Latest.—Baby Peggy Montgomery's second picture under her contract with Sol Lesser will be an adaptation of Helen's Babies," one of the oldest and most popular of juvenile books. John Habberton is the author, and the first edition is nearly fifty years old. The picture will be filmed under the direction of William Seiter.

"Deerslayer."—The famous characters created by James Fennimore Cooper in his "Deerslayer," are to make their screen debut in a ten-episode Pathe serial called "Leatherstocking." Harold Miller has the role of "Leatherstocking," in the production, and Edna Murphy is "Judith Hutter." The character trayals are based on authentice descriptions by historians.

"Virtuous Crook."—George Seigmann, villainous owner of the merry-go-round in "The Merry-Go-Round," has been cast for a part in Herbert Rawlinson's next production, "The Virtuous Crook." Of course, it's a "heavy" part.

Story of Roosevelt.—The story of Roosevelt, which is to be made in super-feature length by Alf. Goulding, will include episodes starting from his earliest school days, following him through Harvard, then into politics, and finally as president of the United States. There will also be scenes from his days in the Spanish-American war, as the head of the Rough Riders, and pictures of his adventures in Africa and South America. Roosevelt's life is said to be more replete with the elements necessary for a good picture than that of any other figure in history.

CHAMBER HOLDS GOLDEN JUBILEE

In 1889 came the first suggestion to change the name of O street. Every so often since that time people have offered names which they believe to be more in keeping with the main thoroughfare of the town than just plain "O street", but now as then, the suggestions are always turned down.

The name suggested at that time was Broadway. No one knows why, but after a little discussion the matter was dropped.

The next important thing in the eyes of the board members was to bring the national prohibition convention to Lincoln. This was discussed in December of 1891, and at the same meeting the subject of building an auditorium was brought up.

Changes in Name.

In September in 1892 the last records of the Lincoln Board of Trade were made, but two years later the Lincoln Commercial club was organized with a membership of 292 men. In January of '95, there were 293 members, one new member during the year. In 1896, the membership dropped off considerably, there being just 208. There was no record of the membership in 1897, but the following year there were 215 members.

Six years later the Lincoln Commercial club consolidated with the Union club, under the name of the Union Commercial club. In May of 1903, this name was changed back to the Lincoln Commercial club, and September 8, 1920, the name was again changed to the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

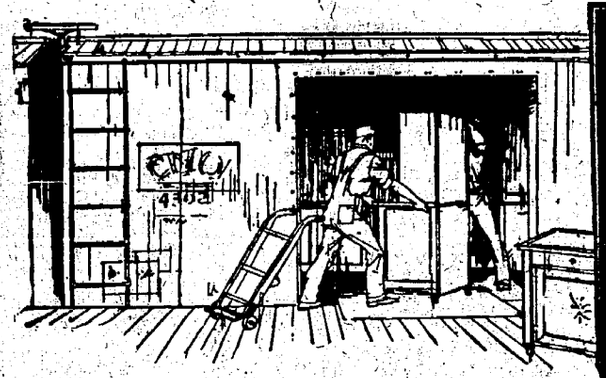

If A. S. Godfrey, the owner of the Badger Lumber company in Lincoln fifty years ago, could come back just for a glimpse of the fine building owned and occupied by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce; if he could see the city as it stands today with all the modern, progressive conveniences; if he could see the telephone system which has been installed, the traction service, the water works, the lights, the miles and miles of paving, what would he think?

He probably would be much too modest to accept any credit for the changes which have taken place. Who knows, perhaps if it had not been for the body of men who met that February night in Mayor Robert D. Silver's office, there would have been no Lincoln today. If there had not been co-operation, understanding as to what was needed for the city's welfare, and loyalty, this junior metropolis might have been some place else in the state.

And so it is a record of great achievements that the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has to present at its fiftieth anniversary, which is to be held Saturday March 15.

An especially interesting feature is the fact that the daughter of the first president, A. S. Godfrey, is still living in Lincoln. She is Mrs. Anna Godfrey Redford, and resides at 605 North Twenty-sixth street.

MRS W. L. EDMONDS

Beauty and Health Go Hand in Hand

If You Have a Daughter Read This Advice.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa. — "I have taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and found it very helpful in troubles peculiar to women. It is very strengthening to the internal organs and especially does it eliminate suffering at special times and regulates in the proper way. My daughters have also taken the Favorite Prescription with the best of results; they would be compelled to stay home from work, but after taking this medicine they have not suffered since. Favorite Prescription is the best medicine a young woman can take if suffering in this way."—Mrs. W. L. Edmonds, 705 Second Ave., W.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has made many women happy by making them healthy. Get it at once from your nearest druggist, in either liquid or tablet form. Write Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free advice.—Advertisement.

ing was done about it until some time later.

In 1889 came the first suggestion to change the name of O street. Every so often since that time people have offered names which they believe to be more in keeping with the main thoroughfare of the town than just plain "O street", but now as then, the suggestions are always turned down.

The name suggested at that time was Broadway. No one knows why, but after a little discussion the matter was dropped.

The next important thing in the eyes of the board members was to bring the national prohibition convention to Lincoln. This was discussed in December of 1891, and at the same meeting the subject of building an auditorium was brought up.

Changes in Name.

In September in 1892 the last records of the Lincoln Board of Trade were made, but two years later the Lincoln Commercial club was organized with a membership of 292 men. In January of '95, there were 293 members, one new member during the year. In 1896, the membership dropped off considerably, there beinng just 208. There was no record of the membership in 1897, but the following year there were 215 members.

Six years later the Lincoln Commercial club consolidated with the Union club, under the name of the Union Commercial club. In May of 1903, this name was changed back to the Lincoln Commercial club, and September 3, 1920, the name was again changed to the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce.

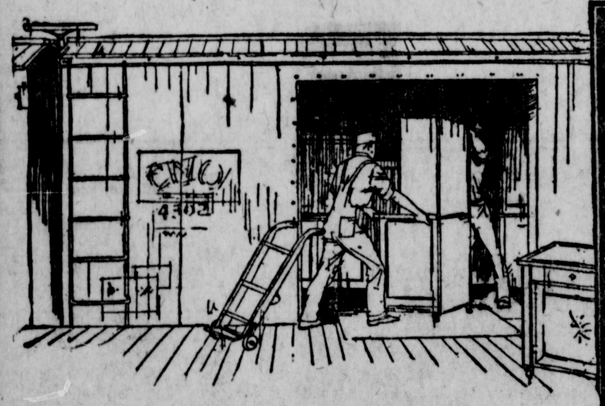

If A. S. Godfrey, the owner of the Badger Lumber company in Lincoln fifty years ago, could come back just for a glimpse of the fine building owned and occupied by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce; if he could see the city as it stands today with all the modern, progressive conveniences; if he could see the telephone system which has been installed, the traction service, the water works, the lights, the miles and miles of paving, what would he think?

He probably would be much too modest to accept any credit for the changes which have taken place. Who knows, perhaps if it had not been for the body of men who met that February night in Mayor Robert D. Silver's office, there would have been no Lincoln today. If there had not been co-operation, understanding as to what was needed for the city's welfare, and loyalty, this junior metropolis might have been some place else in the state.

And so it is a record of great achievements that the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has to present at its fiftieth anniversary, which is to be held Saturday March 15.

An especially interesting feature is the fact that the daughter of the first president, A. S. Godfrey, is still living in Lincoln. She is Mrs. Anna Godfrey Redford, and resides at 605 North Twenty-sixth street.
